Common Takeaways ...

9/5/2020

In sharing your story, whether you plan for it or not, and whether manipulated or not, by the time you reach a moment of reflection, a clearing from the chaos, or a sense of improvement past a moment of difficulty, you will reflect, just as anyone else reading your story does, to differing degrees. As someone who is related to a famous homicide case, there will always be with expectation people reading trying to “solve” crimes, or even worse “dig deeper” into my own psyche, trying to find out more information personal, about me or others, that gives them a better perspective of your life, of the news, or for use for interpretation of other crimes, they deem related to your story, based upon your reactions, what you have to say, and whether with care, responded to or not, as someone who is affected, and why, as someone who considers themselves a homicide victim, advocate for, or even worse be made to look like you're not in the solution, having difficulty in sobriety or emotionally recovering from bipolar, and discredit you all together as a reliable source to be read from, looked into, as though informations derived from your understandings of life, do not lead to positive results, understandings, but misunderstandings if can be proven, you lack direction and purpose in life, you are insensitive to the needs of others, you are selfish, and if proven into yourself, means you are looking for attentions in life given to you for things you do physically with your face and body as though you appear to be someone who thinks they are attractive or likeable for those reasons, then as compared to other women from your life, viewed as inferior, or imitation, or not as good as, pretty as, successful as, as though you have resentment, jealousy issues, as though your femininity and body image issues have anything to do with comparing your body to others. I don't look at people, or other women, and have not begun looking at other peoples work online until fashion blogging from tumblr 2016, that was my first exposure to modeling and how trends are set displayed by professional models and fashion bloggers. When someone injects themselves into your life, and no longer wants you, don't be surprised if they say things to question or cause you to feel inferior or insult you to see how you respond, as though you are a sensitive person, and because you are a sensitive person blame you for a homicide that was committed in 1994, because you did not attend mezzaluna, tired after your recital, and further hurt you to combine another story with a victim of homicide, in which you were called into a Ferrari, by someone who was like a mother to you, “get your fatass in the car.” As though it was that incident that caused you to not attend mezzaluna that night, no our moms had separated, following friendship with Faye Resnick, but they had plans to go jogging that morning, and my Mom was the one who found her body, and called the police, and opened the house for them, the only one with a key to the house, all the candle were lit, and blown out.

Personal Update ...

Taking a break from blogging, Im being bullied, and if I am being hurt, makes it impossible to work online, and consider it a positive experience if sharing subjects me to more harm, as my self-esteem improves or confidence, be insulted. I am doing my best in life. to stay alive, and not get suicidal no matter how hurt I feel, I dont deserve it, I have done nothing to harm this person, have been in correspondence with him since February for 7 months, through good times and more vulnerable times, manipulated by his threats as though he has the power to expose me in a way that will destroy me and cause me permanent disability, like I deserve to suffer, I love him too, and grew to trust him, and enjoyed hearing from him, and had fun, considered him a sound opinion. But whenever there are sex expectations, to share nude photos, and be demanded to picture naked when obese and not in the mood, it was simply for ammunition to trash me, not out of love wanted. And that is where I have failed to set a boundary, and allowed this person to hurt my feelings, to the point that it is interfering with my present ability to interview for jobs, sound well and feel like a reliable person, instead I seem nervous, not 100% present, blank, and not sharp. This is how you get treated if someone who loved you feels like you are to blame for the demise of a relationship argue that I was defective or needy, like I was soliciting love from me, it was the other way around, I was being nice to him, and because he wanted me to share in a specific way did so, he can hire someone professional, instead he made me look like I take risks, I have everything to lose, Im in physical pain, and have mental illness now, having difficulty thinking clearly and being myself so much time is wasted responding to someone who gets to read and experience with satisfaction my mental deterioration, my failures, my poor social graces, my mood changes, my attitude change, to his self betterment.

I need to take some time to think about how I share my heart online, and whether being honest only subjects me to further interrogation be treated like I owe anything to anyone, more than a reply. I never ignore anyone, I always report to the police, and I dont need help from anyone marketing or business wise, I already wrote my book, this person is devaluing me online, embarrassing me online as bothered and talked about, like he needs to spread a message to the world about me, that I send fan mail and pen pal others. Then take it to court. I have been nothing but nice to this person.

Now i know not to talk to anyone I do not know in real life, and in the event I get sick or become suicidal the more I get trashed, as though I threw my life away carelessly,. no its someone got to know me, and feel close to me, then sought to destroy me, control me, and insult me, and accuse me of being a liar, or a whore, then dont talk to me, I stay home or running now interviewing for work. I live a simple life, Im not social I work hard and I dont make money. I earned my following the hard way, without paid for advertisements or fancy SEO, by the pure quality of my work, thoughtful.

This is getting to be a tiring conversation and is only making me sicker. I have done my best to be amicable toward this person who hurt me, but its impossible to be myself again, in shock, hurt.

So much for blogging that was a good solid year of improvement. But if I am getting hurt, bullied, and get mentally ill or sick, and emotional, and sound stupid, or look poorly, then its a waste of time for me to present myself in public, if someone its just gonna hurt me, what do I have to lie about. TAKE IT TO COURT, DONT THREATEN ME, MY FREEDOMS, MY INTENTIONS, MY POSITIVITY.

Sincerely,

Leslie Fischman

22. Success isn't always coordinated, its doing what your supposed to be doing, and when doing what you are supposed to be doing, you never feel rushed, or bored with free time, and the days go by fast, that's being goal oriented, not living by the hours, but making the most of the hours to your day, focused.
23. Been there done that? Then share with pride, lessons learned.
24. You are never above the law, err with caution, talking about others.

Don't wait until its too late, to fix whats going wrong in your life, or when reaching out to help someone else struggling, no its not your responsibility to coach this person on a daily basis, that is their job to get help, and you as a friend are the support that encourage them to leave one situation for a better situation in life, and not give up on the path they are on. Whenever we experience a loss in life, it can be difficult to comprehend, that someone we knew is no longer here and we always want to know why, sometimes detective mode helps us in the future, and sometimes it just causes a desensitization of who is here now, make them feel bad, as though they had the power to fix someone, and because they were not around to fix someone, they ended up worse off in life. When an old high school friend of friends, who used to frequent my house, disclosed to me his losses and what he knew of two others who passed, and their downfall, and the truth about their whereabouts condition and drug use at the time of their death, I became really uncomfortable. Now that's knowing things are not right, and having knowledge of their last moments alive. I led a funeral on Facebook during the semester I took Criminal Law and got an As on my essays, I made a Facebook Page, which all of my Brothers friends participated in, for some reason I was the person most contacted with regards to sharing their story, I went to college with him, and used to pick him up, and give him rides. This was after learning that none of his friends were invited to his funeral, so I thought to make a page where his friends could contribute online, share their condolences, and later took the page down, for privacy reasons, felt too hyper not easy, it was a new thing then, and made an album of all their comments and photos shared for his mother, I delivered to her home. His sister recently committed suicide, she was the owner of the brand T-Bags, which was featured at high end retail shops. I sent an invite for a bar memorial, and two people showed up Aaron and Kendra. I last saw Navid at Qs, he was eating alone. And called his older brother, while at Qs, and he invited us to his apartment, he too struggled with a suicide attempt, and has always shared encouraging words, stable, and owns his own company, a towel company. My mom was called to the emergency room back in the 90s, he drove a Typhoon, to pep talk him in a hospital bed. That was my mom, always talking sense into people who felt lost, encouraged them, babysitters, took care of her boyfriends, and took care of me during every down, disorganized. I am so grateful to have such a patient family, who just smiles, always hopeful, and proud whenever they notice improvement, like Im one less person to worry about, accepted as is. Lesson: Talk only about your own losses in life, not others.

Being Watched ...

Before you get to where you want to be in life, you never anticipate that life gets more difficult, in the sphere of criticism, self-worth, responsibility, and confidence, why they always say "the higher you climb, the harder you fall." That makes sense, you can only get places in life, you deserve to be, positions of trust, recognition, be considered marriage material, an advocate, an advisor, with sound judgment, helpful to those who read, or whether you just speak from what sounds like the right thing to say, not speaking in your natural tone. An argument is interjected into your sense of being, which can cause a writer to feel under pressure, wasting time, explaining the position of another, at the expense of making themselves look stupid, this is to avoid fighting, or instigating a fight toward me with the potential to grow in numbers, that's once you don't matter to society, you never mattered, and that's how you get treated like you don't matter, have never made a difference, and treated as though you make yourself out to be more important than you are, as though there is some added benefit to being a writer, and choosing to be off course in life, not work on a job to job basis, yes that means Im my own boss in life as a blogger, and have to develop my own curriculum, my own standards, my out layouts, my own content, my own direction, and when its time to look back, and I have time to review my progress, hopefully be a stronger person now than I was than, that's the learning curve in any profession, writing, public speaking, how to speak, what to speak about, and how to speak in a way that doesn't causing fighting, inner turmoil, or make things worse, good writing usually comes from someone whos not trying to get anyone to take sides, and if my side is presented, the side of the other automatically taken, as though I am speaking for two, the other without a voice, being spoken for, as though I represent myself and who has offended my best interest, while they benefit from having learned a lesson, while causing permanent damage to my reputation, who respects me, how I look, and has affected how Im treated for having had this experience in life. Sometimes you need to talk, and if you think your issues are big enough to speak to someone up top, that doesn't mean you should, and it doesn't mean your ready to present what you think to them, anything new not well thought out, perches you a plank, where you get pushed and pushed until you have maxed out speaking, and done the work, to give them something to think about, without giving you time to reflect, as though what has been said or written about isn't enough, isn't a job well done, like the work hasn't been done, to the extent that one should not be questioned. Some respect you cant earn no matter how much value you have put online, its like a jab to the stomach, when they are clam toned trying to be supportive of you, after bashing you online, expect you to have anything to say to them, especially if they seek only to reinforce the negatives about you, I have nothing to prove to anyone, that I haven't already proved out loud for the past year, that's an emergency to write about, I am someone who is not competitive in needing to be right, but someone who always keeps track of my thoughts, with the gift of revisiting things thought about finally said out loud.

What is Offensive? ...

At a time like this, humor can be really annoying to someone who is trying to seriously measure sources of blame. I called Judge Brown, because Im getting sick again, and give up and need an Attorney. Literally if youre not winning with the people, you instantly become Quaker, pale as night, minus the drinking and drugs, must be the night writer syndrome, trying to stay ahead of the pack historically. I can't believe I do not know Mark Zuckerberg, and am one connection away from Jack Dorsey. If you mention your Father met him at a Bar-Mitzvah one more time, "beh ho da" as Navid would say. We all feel a sudden instability when a friend is lost its like a part of you is gone, a part of you that gave up in life, disoriented as though your wellness is supposed to keep them alive, we can be there, and we can not be there, and sometimes being there hurts, that's what family is for, for some reason parents are immune from this lets connect and get sick syndrome, and share strengths, and pick apart eachothers weaknesses, there is a such thing as privacy, its really a choice, to set oneself up for criticism, we are not all student council buffs ready for the limelight, some with more leadership experience than others, you either know what working hard and success feels like and can share what worked for you, or you can make $hit up, if you look like your making $hit up and don't have the numbers to prove your honesty and hardwork, then that's exactly how you are treated, listen you abuse yourself, online, that's plain see, have you ever seen someone work in public, that's a shoulders up, are you kidding me, like you know what suffering is, or let downs, losses, and failure feel like, I know what no day meds for 14 days asleep feels like, and I know what going to jail feels like, a long journey, not sure if you'll be returning scary. You say stuff sometimes and we just don't believe you, why do you say things private? When you were scared or called police, why do you make your life scary, don't you want to be Auntie 4x and proud. Im not really sure, let the Sunset cams figure everyone out. That's having faith, not my job. -They wont bite unless you offend, 600+ posts strong, you actually need a solid introduction, and "room to breathe" to free others from chaos.

Turning Negativity Into Anger ...

Whenever there is instability, its better to err on the side, of not enabling yourself to be held under attack, or be responded to in anger. Whether that's giving up in life, looking like youre playing victim, or avoiding causing harm to who has harmed you, in place of bigger goals in life, other than to empower those who fight for or on behalf of others, allow yourself to be utilized for misinterpretation. If you cannot stop a fight, don't incorporate your issues, in a fight not yet ongoing, or ongoing without you, so long as you don't cause harm to yourself or others, give yourself time to speak normally, no matter how confused, or upset you are, not appear as though you are trying to "establish what was done to you" in "defense to what was done to others" and be mentioned, to share to those in mourning, what you think did not help, how you were not helpful, or how your loss of faith, stupidity as directed, misdirected, and later put down in life as though you were not harmed yourself was deserved, as though promises were made, secrets were kept, or emotions shared unique to this specific relationship, a bond not existing ever before in your life, nothing is high maintenance, until it hurts to be with someone, where there are things you know, you cannot tell them, or in the favor of someone who never believed in you or had faith in you, inflict guilt's to see how you respond, and whether sharing stories about a victim, was helpful at all, I think it only made me look insensitive, I was not trying to claim I was b$itch to anyone, or therefore responsible for "accepting invitation." At what point in the study of the importance of prevention did it cross your mind that "appearance" was necessary upon invitation, and how can it be viewed by later happenings, as though that story was shared prior to being shared now. Its to establish that you have guilt, had guilt prior to law school,, have guilt now, and as no one takes your side, therefore explaining, at what point you acknowledged that showing up, could've prevented a homicide past, if the victim was babysitting that night, instead of with a boyfriend. That is something I have thought about, non attendance, and the consequence of non attendance. Whenever something sensitive is discussed, this tone is thought to be generated, it actually takes awhile for this tone to occur, after speaking to police and leaving a voicemail, I don't think its necessary to explain a few instances in which I have felt heckled, or responded poorly, that doesn't get me anywhere in life, and apparently now nor does my suffering hospitalized 9 times, for 14 days per stay, and attempting suicide twice, doesn't seem to matter, to whoever is trying to justify that there is a guilt, that one does not feel good about themselves, that one has done harm, and like the drug dealer, who I would not sleep with, and told to get out of my bed, after being driven all night and no cocaine was dealt, was tired, that is how I am being treated, as I have expressed others have treated me, or by description of how I have treated others, to see whether I am a nice person, approached because I am nice, or because of what I have to say, and whether what I have to say is related to who has passed, and whether me going out in life has anything to do with trying to understand the passing's of others. -Right now I am dealing with looking stupid, a typical high low, to someone who they don't think deserves wellness, or thinks is riding upon the wellness of others, as though with or without confirmations from others, judged on the basis of whether at peace, apart of a fight, starting a fight, or trying to prevent a fight and why. For the most part its to my understanding that when I am well, if I appear gone, that causes rejection, and by the choices I am left with in life, judged as of value, or high horsed, over confident, not appreciative, caring, or sensitive to the conditions of others, who may confide in me things that cause me to not be attracted to them, that is guilt's they have in life, of things they have done or lives they have lived previously not proud of themselves, never expressed that people make you feel sorry for them in order to get laid, as though that's strategy, for bonding, acceptance or rejection, or ever clowned on anyone, seeking love from me, who I did not feel was an appropriate match, its if told something, where there is a conflict of interest, that is information disclosed, secret, about addictions, or the remaining days of those who have passed, it not that I have not empathized with them or shunned, them it just wasn't appropriate to have sex.

See Yourself Out ...

There is a lackluster set of circumstances that occur, when your sexuality is put into question. And for whatever set of jokes confirm the confidences of some, its mostly having to do, with who they are, and what they specifically think about someone else, that has convinced them they are better than, call it competition, when one is accepted, and another is denied, when one is sent away, and the other recommended, when one presents self and is ignored, and the other given opportunities in life. That is based on who you are, not based on who you know, let into social circles in life, or companies for that matter. It then doesn't matter who took whos virginity, when it comes to those tastes in life. If you even seek to go there in life with me. As though I fodder older men, for the sake of asserting my own femininity or know how in life, treat me as though Im homewrecker to someone elses dream in life. As though I can achieve on my own, happiness, and require the happiness of other to feel happy myself, as though Im dependent, or rely upon the confidences, trusts, or admiration of others. And this is when subjecting others to harm comes into play, its by the rejections and attentions, provoked from me, that sends the wrong attentions forward to others, who are relishing in the positive attentions they get, from making fun of me, or by making their mark in life, absent minded me, absent minded recognition of my spirit all together online or in the entertainment artic sphere. Then be your own solar system in life. They reply. What is it that drives you in life, and who is it that inspires you. For what its worth, when others are in error, they always do their best to make their amends, whether its obvious to you or not.

There Will Be Few People ...

There will be few people who change your life for the better, that's someone who by education, upbringing, or connection you meet in life, whether from afar, or up close, have the privilege of meeting. That's in good grace, you are allowed into the lives of those who are well, and by privilege allowed to be around those who are well enough to distinguish between who is relevant, who is important, and by what someone has to say, of essence. And then there is failure, not living up to expectation, and losing all privileges in life. Success is mostly short lived for anyone who does not recognize what they have before its gone, whether that's success, wellness, recognition, trust, or mental health wise: intelligence. For some, as soon as we make it up the hill, we get sent down again in life, and some people are smart enough to stay well, and maintain footing, equally, on the playing field, we are not all fortunate, to be given those God given talents in life, to recognize when we are found, and not waiting until we feel lost, to ask for help, or recognize that we are gone, gone from discussion, gone from care, gone from worry, gone from acceptance, and gone from respect. You are what you make of yourself in life, its not by who youre surrounded by, by who friends you, by who you date, or by what school you go to, that you should ever feel pressured, to represent more than what youre capable of representing in life. Most people just want to see you squirm under pressure, and based on the totality of your life, whether you recognize whether you have been harmed, what you do about it, or whether you care enough about yourself, to say anything at all. Whos fault is that? Its when we take things to extremes in life, that is thinking without limits, speaking without filter, and behaving without recourse, that we find ourselves with odds with any select number of individuals, who think that they could've done better, they would've risen above, they could've stopped or prevented bad things from occurring, and see your failure with one instance in life, as reflective as a failure as a whole looking at your life. You can choose which moments in life define you, and its by what you remember and share about yourself, is how you will be judged, picked apart, and only gives added justification for tormenting you when you feel at odds, until you become at odds, and until you remedy the extremes toward you in life, take responsibility and know when to stop, that is when to stop fighting, when to stop discussing, when to move forward, and not turn discomfort into illness, or discomfort into blame, and learn to roll with the punches for so long as you think you deserve to not be of importance in life, and then you grow, past the shame, and responsibility for caring what others think, and past the point of accepting, any ill feelings toward you as a result of your own decisions in life, or misgivings. -No matter how much potential is lost, no matter what has transpired, and no matter whos on your team in life, what you lend insight to, is how you will be looked at overall, as contributing to social ills, supporting the wrong causes in life, or further misidentified as the problem, that is for as long as you allow for it, that non-acceptance as you, as not properly informing others, not being proper, not influencing anyone for the better, and be treated as a has been, or someone deserving of worse treatment in life. If you choose to drink in this Country, and drive after having a drink, that's your own fault, and as a result you get treated as someone who puts others at risk of harm whenever your at the wheel, that is a lost trust in your ability to manage a motor vehicle and when your life is in your own hands that that means you put others lives at risk of harm. That is how you get defined if you drink and drink, and get a misdemeanor. If you wait 8 years to rebuild yourself, that's letting others win at your own expense. That's not trying hard enough. That's allowing yourself to get beaten up. Usually when we care too much what people think, we don't have the heart to prove anyone wrong, and just let everyone be better than, that's giving up in life.

To everyone who cared about Justice Ginsberg, I offer my sincerest condolences, that no amount of blame can fix, or repair, whats been broken, no amount of care can rebuild ones faith, and every amount of disappointment, can only result in a worse set of outcomes and circumstances for all.

Im sorry, if I failed to represent what was in everyones best interests, Im sorry I was made to be a poor decision maker, upon graduating from law school, and Im sorry I was harmed in the process, of becoming a better person online. I see now that whether I am online or not, that cannot prevent whats to come, not unless I am prepared for the amount of social ills that are presented to those who are found to have done others wrong in society, and who by law have been sued or punished.

That's Not Magical ...

When someone thinks its your experiences or who you know that is solely what is making you feel special, then that is the first connection sought to be disturbed, a disconnect sought, to reinforce the remaining side, to its own merits, separate anyone from a person they deem to be an unwanted connection, and that is how a reject is made. First one rejects, or views someone as not beautiful, or ugly, or without the capacity to be honest, as a foul representation of wealth or intelligence, and dismembered from a group, that's the second way one is alienated from the norm, separate from people, then groups, and then left to their own devices. That is so they can respond on their own, without the added benefit or safety they consider to be the "upper" transmuted through the one "connected" as though one is lit, or strong, or smart, or confident because of who one is connected to, not on their own merits, sound of heart, and reasoning, and intelligent by effort, not a denomination of something told to them by another. That is thirdly what is sought whether someone as told by another, is affected, how strong is one to know, what is being done or said to manipulate their character or affect their well being, and how does that look to any innocent bystanders upon watching someone who looks miscalculated, disoriented, sickly, fading, lost, or stupid, then how are others supposed to accept someone who looks to be an odd number out, what does that look like, it looks like others are not as strong, when no one stands out to you, that is when you are bold, and what is causing you to be bold the discomfort of others, do you knowingly understand that others are made to feel uncomfortable by looking at you, do you genuinely see yourself as bonded to others, and do you think overtime, anyone can get used to you, is that strategy for being loved, and what is acceptance, is that what is "requested" for, so that those who have grown uncomfortable can "co-exist" around you, and who is seeking to cause your dismemberment, disillusionment, and further make you a source of discomfort, someone who saw me a reject, and based upon my connections in life, saw others as victim to who I know, how I lead my life, and clearly as "loser" as compared to the wealthy and connected people online, who I was compared to, seen as the "odd man out" or someone who is not rolling with the crowd, or who is sickly, because they have been rejected in life, no its upon not fitting in that I leave, and its upon me becoming disoriented or sickly looking, that I get shouted at, and its upon me not being able to loosen up, and look disoriented or my head being gone, that I am let go, as though to reinforce the wellness of the remaining people in a room, as though I am the source of disgust, or the cause for gone, and if I become the only one not well in a room full of people who are well, than that must mean that I am the sick one, that I am not strong, that my life is a joke, and if anything bad happens, what is gathered is to prove in advance that should anything go wrong, that it is her fault. She is mentally ill, she is not attractive, we rejected her, she is not smart, she is "in it for the wrong reasons," she is "gay," and she cannot prevent crime, as though my association and being hired was a "political move" to strengthen what condition that was already strong, and what condition was weakened, as a result of "turning my badge in," I lost a connection, a physical connection to an identity earned, upon drinking, and as a result I got pulled over as lost, upon being rejected from a job that I already left in Compton. And "rejection" is sought to be proven, that I am someone who seeks sex, or is sexual to people, I pick, as though I am not picked, and then treat me as knowingly a reject engaging in sexual activities as though I knowingly have bad luck, and was given bad luck, because one person saw me as bad luck decided that all people should see me in that way as "bad luck," that if I am given disease, then that guarantees, rejection by all, justifiably, so therefore making it wrong for me to seek love or validation based upon the way I look post lawsuit.

Yes I have a right to blog, and yes I waited 4 years on probation, and yes this is my job, and earned it, mental health wise, overcoming self-harm, and suicide, and yes this is my solution to voices: writing.

The Basics of Non-Violent Communications ...

Sometimes in expressing our grievances out loud we forget to remember the basics of non-violent communications. "Nonviolent Communication (NVC) is a simple method for clear, empathic communication consisting of four steps: Stating observations, then feelings, then needs, then requests." [1] When your peace is disturbed it can feel next to impossible to get your point across to the other who seeks to drill issues into you, expecting you to react or respond in a way befitting to their interests, that is to hurt your stability, your voices, and your sense of reason, when trying to communicate to the other, that what they are doing is wrong, and explain to them how they are hurting you, and others by hurting your identity online. Don't wait until its too late, and as a public speaker, don't allow others to use you for political medium to get negative results to occur in the favor, disfavorable to your own interests as stated. I was told to "get used to it" get used to what? Defamation and hate, the questioning of my integrity and ability to help others, my identity as it is being used by this person to cause harm to others, portraying me as easy, or not a positive representation of the organizations I have become associated to overtime, how does that help him to hurt me, and how have these organizations been affected by his expressed hatred toward me. Some relationships end, and what occurs in fantasy, once the truth comes out, sometimes fizzles, that is a discontinuation of my best interests, and to not continue on in a "romantic" or "personal" relationship with someone online, demanding of photos and information from me, to establish his case against me, as though I led him on, or am not a real person, with real feelings, real problems, real mental health issues, real connections, and really associated to OJ Simpson and his Family. Instead this person, despite telling him to stop, privately and publicly, continued to bring people into his arguments toward me citing to @FBILosAngeles, @The RealOJ32, @FBI, @GlaserWeil, my BFF since age 4, and #Petrocelli. How do you think they feel. They have nothing to do with the demise of this relationship online, which was strictly fantasy for companionship, sharing my updates, or videos, and responding to his texts, when there is no trust, no relationship can continue, not if since March he has been flashing a page of mixed images of my on Facebook, or private photos taken for him upon request, and photos of me as a child at Nicole Brown Simpson's Funeral. When you establish a set of images online, they are generally for the purposes of communicating a message to onlookers, who do not know you, and do not know me in that way, and upon seeing me look like that, noticing that we are in disagreement and do not talk anymore, that is to establish himself as the honest representation of me, not being in a relationship with me anymore, feel like its his right to communicate to others, that there is something wrong with me, something defective about me, and treat me as though I am the cause of the demise of our companionship, as though I have done something wrong to him, or would be likely to do anything wrong to others, shun people away from me, thats defamation, expecting that his point of view, is the best representation of who I am, and seeks to establish a poor point of view of me, illustrating me as a weak person, or source of insight, while "Brady" is listed on my website as a point of association. If I did not represent those ideals respected by people from my profession, or from people who seek to protect others from harm, then they would not have been mentioned, and I would have not met with them. Thats one person seeing you in a different light, requesting for photos to see you in that light, then trying to get everyone else to see you under that light too, as offensive, not sound, not strong enough to combat gun violence, or help maintain the peace concerning the issues and causes for it. A non-violent approach is just that "does not refer to the mere absence of physical harm. It is a way of life that takes its lead from a compassionate and connected heart, and can guide us toward a more complete and happy way of being." [2] When this person hurts my image he hurts my ability to: (1) represent myself (2) represent others (3) communicate to others (4) increases interference with my efforts to curtail violence (5) hurts my image and (6) hurts my voice. There are four components to NVC: Observation, Feeling, Needs, and Request. Here is my request, to please stop bullying me online, and treating me like Im suspect, or have done an individual wrong, to in turn make me a "likely" contributor, to social ills, or bad things occurring, as a "poor representative" or not a "strong enough" advocate when it comes to a non-violent approach. In a request one "make[s] clear and present requests is crucial to NVC's transformative mission. When we learn to request concrete actions that can be carried out in the present moment, we begin to find ways to cooperatively and creatively ensure that everyone's needs are met." [3] When it comes to conflict, this person continues to raise the bar on my understanding of the significance and importance of my childhood, how I was raised, what I did with my life, and what struggles I face now, telling me how it is, instead of allowing me to share what its really like speaking to the public, that he can't understand because he is not me, has never stepped foot in my shoes, does not know me well enough to value me, and does not understand that is causing harm to me, and without empathy continues to do so. According to qz.com, "Rosenberg's method" of managing conflict, in conflict negotiations, involves the following: "rooted in the belief that all humans share the same universal needs, including the sense that they're being heard, understood, valued, and respected. Conflicts arise when words are perceived as threats, which devolve into power struggles." [4] My job is to continue to inform this person if he is crossing a boundary, to stop, because if I am to protect the interests of others, I should not allow myself to be harmed by anyone who does not believe in me or does not trust me, and his threats to my well being online and in public, should not affect who is listening, not by what I have to say, or by what he has to say, all should remain unaffected. This person thinks that he is getting to the bottom of something, as though there is information I have not shared, I have not been well for years, it has taken me many years to get well again, and thats not my fault, mental health issues, and as I am getting stronger, its become ever more important for me to pick and choose my battles, and not get suckered into personal issues with people trying to get close to me, who I allowed to get to know me, and now need my space, to maintain my own wellness, and perspective in life. Whereas this person just reads, stuff he finds on the internet including me, but has no idea how to prevent crime, or how to stop the wrong types of thinking that enable criminals to carry out their agendas, which are to hurt the faith of the well, to cause illness to the weak, to hurt those in positions of power or trust, and hurt the integrity of systems that support our values, in place of their own ways of looking at the world, which is what he is doing, treating me as though I have something that he deserves to know about, hurting me like I have a quality that I am not sharing me, and treating me, as though his expression of hate toward me, was caused by me, and not taking responsibility for his own illness expressed toward me, as though I am supposed to cure him, or give him stability. Who is unstable me, the minute I self identify how Im feeling, he reads what I have written then he self-identifies in that way, the minute he feels bad, he makes me feel bad, the minute he feels insulted, he insults me, there is no way around an eye for an eye a tooth for a tooth, that is a road to destruction, for me self-destruction, to continue to engage in argument with this person, who I have blocked on several occasions, and have told not to contact me, since making pages online, to offend me and my audience and make me look stupid. How is this conversation relevant, because he just made a comment "goodnight girl alone" a pun to the title of the book "Gone Girl," and recently Hillary Clinton's book "Rodham" came out by Curtis Sittenfeld, with a "profile photo" of her face, the same face "pose" I used in my #bloggingcampaign photo of myself featured on IMDbpro.com, sometimes with a green ribbon for #eachmindmatters, and I used to live on Rochester in Westwood (2013-2016), and there was just a mass shooting in Rochester New York. How do things like that happen, if you allow for communications to you to scare you, then that is how you get treated by criminals, or bullies, as though you are asking for unwanted communications in life, or as though you are a source of unwanted communications, and if they can continue to establish that you are an unwanted communication that is to further separate you from the norm, and further situate you among communications like that.

The World is a Big Place ...

As big as your problems may seem, remember that the world is a big place. What youre thinking may be important to you, but how important is it for you to explain your thinking to others. Often times when we are most passionate about what we have to say in life, few listen. Think about how you sound before expressing yourself to others. Are you being defensive? Do you sound offensive? Is what your saying of importance, to whom and why? Is there a better way of saying what you have to say? Then look at the ground in front of you. Are you in a good place in life? Where are you coming from? Who is around you? What opportunities do you have before you in life? What do you have to lose? That is how you will be judged by others: (1) By what you have to say and (2) By what you look like and based upon where you stand in life, heard. According to qz.com, it isnt in your best interests to share you mind, and amongst those who do, they "tended to feel less rapport and less positivity" toward one another in a group of people studied. [1] Why is that? The problem lies in "deal[ing] with the aftermath of that disclosure." [2] While suppression of emotions, can increase "rates of anxiety, insomnia, and other unhealthy outcomes," there are other ways to avoid concealing emotions, than expressing how you feel to a group of people, you're not all together comfortable with sharing in front of, it may actually increase the, "risk [of] them refuting or rejecting the validity of what you told them, which can be devastating." [3] No one enjoys arguing about how they are feeling, and no one feels better once they have shared, told that how they are feeling is wrong, or that what they are saying doesnt make sense, or to have the side of who they are upset with be taken, over what it is they are saying in support of themselves. Thats just life, you wont always have your way with people, and you cant always negotiate with others, if what you have said or if how you are feeling in found to be in the wrong, it doesnt matter then who hurt you or why, all that matters is whether you are in control of your emotions, and what your purposes for sharing are. Remember to maintain the peace, and while your peace may have been disturbed by another, that doesnt mean that you need to share who and why and run the risk of disturbing the peace of others, who may not want to hear from either of you concerning your personal battles with them specifically. So be mindful. Note: "But even when you're dealing with people who are close to you — a family member or friend — there are situations when spilling your guts may exacerbate negative emotions, not assuage them." [4] Also know that "This sharing of personal details about your life—your feelings, thoughts, memories, and other such things—is referred to as self-disclosure." [5] According to verywellmind.com, consider what you share to another as a building block, and as you grow closer or more intimately involved with another in any relationship, remember that what you have to share, will have an affect on the bond between you and any person for that matter. Especially on social media, where "Inappropriate or poorly timed self-disclosure can sometimes lead to embarrassment and can even damage relationships." [6] There is an imbalance that occurs, between two people when one shares more than the other, and its the imbalance that you feel as the sharer of information, "When someone shares something intimate, it creates a sort of imbalance. You suddenly know a great deal about this other person, but they might not know as much about you." [7] So be cautious remembering that less is more. The good news is that "Research suggests that self-disclosure plays a key role in forming strong relationships. It can make people feel closer, understand one another better, and cooperate more effectively." [8] So keep sharing, keep your power, and dont share anything you wouldnt share in therapy or to a doctor, chances are if you are thinking or saying something beyond what could be carried on in normal conversation, that its too far out of the scope of the norm of any conversation online too.

Take Your Time ...

9/17/2020

Recovery is a process. Pace yourself. Although everyday wont be perfect, I assure you that sticking to a routine or schedule in life will make sure things dont get out of control. Stay Sober. No matter what happens to you in life you cannot go back to your old ways of coping. Whether thats drinking, or on social media, expressing your thoughts in words and pictures. If you know and understand that that type of thinking looks weird, then dont express it. Its not okay as someone with bipolar to go into delusion, that is thinking things are true that arent true, or coming to believe in a set of understandings that later dont make sense, you are only embarrassing yourself as a writer, when you over rely on your fears, or your past, to explain your now. There is so much power therefor in moving forward. Writing about where you are presently, its a better judge of character to see where you are now, therefore no matter what has happened past, that is how you make yourself of value again, not by sharing what has happened to you, or where you have been in life, or what has gone wrong in life, thats the surest way to feeling again defeated in life, like nothing has changed. psychologytoday.com reminds us that "you can't change the past -why talk about it?" [1] Sometimes we are curious to better understand ourselves, like why was I that way then, why could I not have been where I am now then, what took me so long to get better, and why was I not feeling good about myself. You will always feel that way overcoming any difficulty in life, wonder, I wish I could have been as strong then as I am now. Thats the beauty of life, "things get better" I was told outside an AA meeting in West Hollywood once, totally lost, and depressed, and on a ton of anti-psychotics for sleep every night, super lethargic. And then you wake up again, its such a beautiful feeling when you wake up again from any depression, and it takes a lot of hard work, discipline and dedication, to believing in yourself, and not giving up on yourself.

When Do You Feel Most Proud ...

Every moment of arrival to a an end point in life does not always mean you earn a new beginning in life. That's the main lesson. So long as you are declared the unwanted embarrassment, or cause for discomfort, then that's how you are treated, tested to see whether you recognize if you are making another uncomfortable and how you respond. Which is why its okay for others to make you uncomfortable test your limits, and as a shared experience if shared, equally embarrassed or uncomfortable, that's knowingly having done something in the wrong, acting unprofessionally with someone in public, how do you expect someone to feel, if you allow them to be experimental with you, the relationship lasts for as long as you feel well or feel comfortable with yourself, and that's how a relationship fizzles, someone wanting something in public, leaving both feeling stupid or looking bad. You don't talk about relationships out loud, or the causes for disillusionment, if someone is important educated achieved in life, never say anything that takes away or calls into question that persons decision making, accept how you are treated in life, and rejected on the basis of how you make another feel, its upon separation that the campaign starts, accusations, questioning, non-stop texting until you start hitting your head, honestly responding and not understanding why they think you are out for "sexual favors" or out to "attract sex" once you've been in a relationship no sense of independence or alone time is respected, that's when you are trying to find your sense of peace running, or trying to lift yourself past failure or "burning out from law school" anything you do without the other knowing, is what is sought to be known, what are you doing why are you doing what you are doing, and if you say I am here I will be home soon, Im moving boxes, I visited the US Supreme Court, that's how you will be treated, looking for "what are you doing that's wrong" and accuse you of "being out for the wrong purposes in life" and that's how you lose self-esteem, and acquire a guilty disposition, and when you look guilty or down in public, that is how you get treated as "gone" and upon being gone others feeling smarter or faster than you at life, don't expect anyone to do you any favors, or take you under any wings in life, they may be friendly and supportive, but never do you need help breaking up with someone, or establishing a distance past the point of rejections following failure if they were not sure about you when you were doing well with a job in DC and broke up with you during finals and dumped you by pay phone in the hospital, then that's how they feel about you. So don't stay, you have nothing to prove to anyone, you are no ones charity case in life, and while later forgiveness may be asserted to one another as having lived life separately, once there is loss of enthusiasm and pride in the other, that's why one is ignored, or not taken seriously. If you are feeling gone and crying and don't understand why you are being rejected in life, then that's testing your smarts, to see how do you feel being rejected, or left alone, how do you respond when you do not understand why someone who demanded monogamy, has sex with you and spends time with you when they can, but still sees themselves as better than you, separating you from everyone is not helpful, that's someone seeing who you are connected to, and to make them feel better isolate you, that happiness you experience around friends, is what makes them think low of you, your comfort around the women you grew up with, is something they see and recognize as important, but admire and respect your friends more than you. That's dating someone better than you. Wants to get to know you, not sure if youre ready, crying, and being insulted, that's not being playful in a kind way, that's being playful in a way that you don't understand how that's insulting, but you take offense to what is being said, without understanding the purpose. If someone dates you seeing you as bearing resemblance to an offender, and if you do not shine or become pretty upon having sex with someone, yes they take that personally, it doesn't matter how hard you are studying, and if you photo your condition as separate from someone you are having sexual relations with, how does that make you look? Not stable mentally, and as unstable probably not a good idea to date yet, means your not strong enough, not prepared to please, represent, and love someone, who expects more from you, "a smart attorney" why they love you, but don't feel close to them. Allow for that space to occur, if someone you love does not accept you, and if you trust them, never judge them, no matter how they behave or speak, its never your duty to investigate, why they don't need you, are around you, and say random things playful, just accept their version of love.

Loss of Excitement ...

What is intelligence? It's a drive you have in life, an ability to prepare oneself in advance, to be tested, based on what you know, able to perform, it doesn't always mean that you have knowledge in your hand, it just means that based upon what you know, able to apply yourself as best you can, in response to a series of questions, you are either trained to respond to, by education or experience, or able to assemble a coherent understanding of informations given based on what you know, lead yourself to a basic understanding with room for more. That's the thing ... with addiction, you push yourself and push yourself, and when you don't arrive, keep pushing yourself, arriving past the point of understanding the causes for not feeling well, trying to arrive to wellness, by thinking or feeling, and by the time you have gone too far, become unwell, not stopping to change direction before pushing yourself beyond your means. Ive always been one to say "if you cannot afford the overhead" not to overinvest in thinking or responding to circumstances "beyond the bounds of your basic reasoning skills." This is very true, those with more knowledge, will always seem to have a better understanding of what been responded to and dealt with, have thought beyond the circumstances themselves, and have a head start on processing beyond a specific situation, that they pride themselves in, science is one of those professions, that keeps going, knows when to stop, and knows its limits, when it comes to faith, privilege, processing, exposure, illness, and condemnation. Science cannot perfect anything in the wrong, its for anyone in the wrong to perfect themselves, that's when it becomes your responsibility to understand the difference between right and wrong, whether or not everyone is more composed than you, more conservative than you, understand that what you felt comfortable with expressing made others uncomfortable, whether you are willing to admit or not, that your decisions or exposures are what led to those behaviors or results, self-harm or suicidal behavior, no need to specify in detail what was done, only that a hole in my wall was made. Its everyone after late to an equation, that sees things minimally, that's not that they don't care, but upon looking back on your life, as assembled and articulated and timelined by you, are quick to pickup and point out what they feel was the point of disillusionment or illness, and even if they are wrong by their assumptions sizing up your issues in life, you are always responsible for correcting the faith of your haters, that's basically what everyone is seeking to find some control over, what is viewed in private, what is viewed in public, and figure out why what goes on in private, not shared in public, is affecting people in real life, connected to private discussions. If I am not having private discussions, and only assembling in private in my google pictures, or in my computer, or phone, that's not a shared consolidated timeline of my thinking and exposures stated out loud, but an assembly of what stands out to me, whether made in reference to me, or a theory highlighted for explanation of the energy at the time responded to. How is freedom of expression related to faith? Who controls how we feel, and why is it important to have a basic comprehension of the effects of what we see, feel, and know? I don't think its by common knowledge that respect is built, nor is it by political ideologies that power is maintained, anyone can look stupid at this point. Its to what lengths are taken to ruin peoples lives, and in the process of ruining someone elses live, assume guilt themselves, I have always been one to believe "that you cannot hurt anyone without also hurting yourself, that as a human being, you naturally empathize with what or who you have harmed, and that's how you intrinsically become harmed yourself." If we are a summation of the pieces of our exposures in life, than those pieces of exposure in life, must in some way have become apart of us, whether we would like be related to those exposures or not, we have to account for what we are connected to whether we are aware of the process or procedures for getting people out of our systems, or pictures out of our minds.

Trust, Honesty, & Respect ...

In uneven terrain, its easy to get lost, lose sight of whats important to you, forget your values and better sense of judgment, and be controlled by what others think, how others behave around you, by what you hear be affected, or feel "under" the authority of another, that is what "fear" does to us, it either makes or breaks us, and separates the weak from the strong, or so it used to, be the best determinant, of wellness at the time of chaos, understand who is affected, who is not affected, who changes, who becomes stronger, who becomes weaker, who fades, who lightens up, who feels empowered, what is justified or not, is always based upon how you appear, how you treat others, and how you feel and present self in front of others, it doesn't matter therefore what is thought about you, or what has been collected as whole known, to judge you as being in a positive worth forgiving or not, not all is lost until you yourself are lost, remember that much about life. Always retain your capacity to overcome, moments of doubt, or conflict, you'll need your brain for that, there is not such position as a losing position, or a shared loss, until you understand the value of your own life, and with faith understand the capacity to overcome a feeling, a set of circumstances, beliefs, not call into question ones own abilities to overcome an emotion, a feeling, an understanding, an interpretation, or any heaviness weighing on your outlook and current understanding of concepts. Call it controlling, but sometimes, unless I control and keep track of my thoughts and what stands out to me, and contribute daily what I am thinking and how I am feeling, there is otherwise no accountability or scientific means for judging what is coming from me, a feeling, what luck has transpired outward, that doesn't give back to those who used to have faith and confidence in feeling a apart, and leaving some who were once well connected, feel disempowered or outnumbered, that's when happiness and strength leaves the middle, those who were once unaffected by everything, literally lose our place in life, as bystanders to the outside opinion held of whats going on within, it then becomes the position of the public, assumed, to not be brought into controversies, and as bystanders have the benefit of observing losses without suffering any losses themselves, that occurs when there is an exchange of luck or perspective. We are all afforded opportunities to reserve our right to privacy, and few expose themselves in public, that immune from controversy feeling that occurs upon anyone hurting me, speaking badly of me, now or past, curbed from being denominated or assumed to have been a deserved treatment or series of reactions, is now viewed in the positive light they felt at the time they were hurting me, and change in appearance or inability to see in the positive, comprehend those changes inward and around to themselves, is what can be observed but not known to the one being affected, that's the power of loss and speaking badly about someone without them knowing it, and the power that a lots itself to those in the know, and leaving the one not in the know, not understand what any togetherness is about while being nice to me, and not anticipating anything hurtful to come. By the time you recognize your own importance, you understand why you were treated as small or left for anyone else who was more lively than you taking life less seriously than you, its that intensity about your work that turns others off, that's not a drive that attracts that's a drive that looks stupid to most, who see the end of the road, by their understandings, and instead see your drive or compassion exhibited in life, as fake not headed in the right direction in life, for the purposes of making onself look good. That scientific benefit of looking at everyone in a room, and seeing those who are well and apart of as bigger or better than someone who appears small and trying too hard, is what establishes a sense of confidence between people looking at each other, one serious, the ones at ease, judged to be carrying more confidence, because carrying less burden to prove themselves in life, the less burden you carry, the easier it is to accept you, that heaviness detracts from your value in life, doesn't matter where it is coming from, whether you recognize why you are enduring a heavy feeling or not, all that matters is that it can be seen and was placed upon you, and the fact that you appear this way serious, just makes you look stupid as not being apart of the lighter side of life not on the outside to a controversy, but dead center. -Which is why people let go when you appear "gone" or "guilty."

Like Yourself ...

We all feel insecure from time to time, you're not alone. And sometimes our insecurities manifest themselves in our lives in the nastiest ways, we all have demons to battle, one of whom is "insecurity." What is insecurity? According to psychologytoday.com, "Insecurity is an inner feeling of being threatened and/or inadequate in some way." [1] How exactly do our insecurities ruin our relationships? When you overburden another with your insecurities, that is things you are unsure of, you threaten the peace of the other in any relationship, when you yourself are feeling disturbed or less than adequate, blame the other for making you feel that way.

What types of behaviors do our insecurities lead us to do? Constantly seeking "reassurance, jealousy, accusing, and snooping—erode trust, aren't attractive, and can push a partner away." [2] Don't be irrational, recognize "that most insecurity comes from inside ourselves," [3] not necessarily having anything to do with anyone else. Those are your feelings, such as not feeling good enough or feeling inadequate. Note: feelings centered on yourself, are selfish feelings, that's feeling things are being done to you to cause you to feel that way, without taking accountability for what it is you are doing with yourself and in your life that is causing you to feel that way, unstable, or insecure.

So what is the solution to feeling insecure? Instead of pushing people away from you in life, and in order to begin attracting things back into your life, start by keeping a positive head on your shoulders, that's for one. And if its better treatment that you demand from others, than be a person worthy of positive interaction, it starts with what you are doing for yourself in your life.

Nickwignall.com reminds us to: stop being "disappointed in yourself" [4] and "break out of the cycle" of being "defined ... in terms of other people's expectations and values." [5] Ever notice, that feeling of exhaustion following catering to everyone else's needs except your own? That's exactly what he's talking about, sometimes in doing things for others, we forget to make ourselves happy in the process of making others happy, and then expect the same treatment in return. So DON'T do the following: "ignore [your] own suggestions and desires, disregard [your] own recommendations and commitments, and flake out on the plans we make for ourselves." [6] That's not love putting your life on hold to accommodate the other, there has to be a happy medium, where one another is allowed to live life as separate but still feel together bonded while apart, that's the main goal to any relationships, not feeling that physical withdrawal. -Listen we all have different personalities, genders, ethnicities, backgrounds, different upbringings, and lets face it, not everyone was raised to go out of their way to make others happy, and some were simply raised to be around when things are good, and ignore you when things are not good, make an effort at the beginning of a relationship and expect you to chase them for the rest of the relationship, that's just how some relationships are.

No one can convince you you are worthy of how you think you deserve to be treated, and sometimes they simply just don't know what you want from a relationship unless you ask for it, so don't blame them for not giving you what you want out of a relationship. Some of the strongest women I know are good decision makers, have the biggest hearts, have been through the worst breakups, and overcame the most insecurities, and where are they now, married and with children, why? Because they believed in themselves, in spite of what others thought about them, they valued themselves, in spite of how they were treated by others, and they didn't allow themselves to be defined by the expectations or judgments of others, and were later on respected by all, whether that's family being hard on you, or socially others being hard on you, sometimes we are hardest on those we expect more from.

So find your balance, suggests nickwignall.com, "balancing the wants and needs of others with the wants and needs of yourself," he explains "It's just basic psychology: In order to feel good about yourself and be helpful to others, you have to make sure you're putting fuel in your own tank. And one of the best ways to do that is to keep your promises to yourself." [7]

How did I get my power back as single? I started blogging, and decided to finish law school, then go back out into the world, and face the same obstacles as anyone else does, single and unemployed, except with the security blanket of a blog to bolster my self-esteem and confidence, something I worked on everyday for a year and am proud of. Something to talk about, doing something for myself that also helps others. And share an example of something I have done for myself, and have found success in doing, writing and blogging, and why I would be of value as an employee to any company I have applied to for a job. That was my strategy for acceptance, bettering myself, building my resume: with a degree to increase my chances for interview and hire, showing ability to start and complete a project, and built a website, illustrating that I am a self-starter, and how with little direction was able to achieve success on my own online, while establishing myself in competition with many other websites and online personalities, stood out in a good way.

Top 100 Personal Development and Self-Improvement Blogger
Top 50 Blogs and Websites Los Angeles

My biggest challenge has been despersonalizing posts, and giving more generic advice, without mention of specific examples from my life. The goal is to be a reputable blogger online, a trusted source, and an reliable opinion on subjects and topics of my choice. In order to keep things “fresh” its become really important for me to avoid “repetition.” [1] I have written two books, one manuscript of all my saved favorite shares online on lulu.com, and one book that has yet to be published with Amazon Book Writing Inc. In addition I have written approximately 826 Blog Posts on my Website, that’s just my front page not including writings on other pages. Im a work in progress. I feel so lucky that I get to blog online, with the majority of everyones blessings and share my thoughts and life with everyone, hopefully without offending anyone, and I think so far, its been an awesome personal growth experience! Ive improved so much through writing, more collected thought wise, and have made vast improvements to my life overall: clothing, makeup, free read books filled up my book shelf, blogging gives me things to do, and forces me to have a life, so that I grow and have things to talk about, so glad. Ive always loved writing, since switching majors to Sociology my Sophomore year, from Psychology, which I couldn’t get a minor in, and didn’t take Statistics and a couple other courses to double major, o well. Im really not good at multiple choice questions, but I always seem to manage to get As on essays, even if its Law School, straights As on both essays Criminal Law and a C on the multiple choice section. For some reason reading comprehension has never been my strength.

Fixing a Bad Attitude ...

Losing your sense of faith can be a very painful experience, when you lose all motivations in life, when your days become difficult, and life becomes challenging. Its easy to lose your sense of self, “blaming others for whats happened to you ... won’t help make your life better.” [1] Here’s what you can do, crosswalk.com tells us to first recognize that “you can’t control situations or people, but you can choose how you’ll respond to them.” [2] When looking inward during a moment of pain, is causing you more harm than good, then that’s the moment when you may seek advisement from others during a time of need, such as asking God for help, asking for forgiveness, or praying to be free of the poison affecting your heart, that bitterness inflicted upon you, is not your fault. Taking a more positive approach to life, is a “lifelong process that requires perserverance.” [3] And doesn’t come easy to most, to put aside negative thinking, in place of more helpful ways to put things in perspective, without beating yourself up in the process of finding your inner peace again. Social media can be a very helpful way of reminding us “Our battles can make us feel negative and isolated. But we are never alone!” [4] avalonchurch.net reminds us to not lose faith, in positive thinking, and not lose sight of the potential for “everything coming together for good,” [5] especially when you’re thinking has been offset by the words or discouragement of others, who may seek to make everything come together for the worst. According to yetnotibutchrist.com, there is so much power in “positive thinking is a “technique” for changing your attitude and fostering optimism.” [6] Here is where humor comes into play, “think[ing] about [things] in a positive light,” has many benefits, one of which is to limit the “potential [for problems and inner turmoil] to affect [you] adversely.” [7] Sometimes we can’t solve our problems on our own, when we focus on our faith, it’s the type of inside out thinking that is necessary when outside in thinking is tearing you apart. [8] Restoring our sense of faith, is not allowing the bad to prevail in our lives or the lives of others, casting a negative shadow over life, seeing the bad can sometimes disturb us, and cause us to lose sight of whats going well for us in life, and in order to not make matters worse, step forward with kowing that “Faith knows that everything is good, even things that have the so-called appearance of evil.” [9] Know that you do have control over what becomes of you, that no matter what happens in your life, so long as you do not give in to the pressures of discomfort, you will not enable others to cause you to not like yourself or become ever more distant from reality and assimilation, that fear induced that causes you to distance yourself from others, is coming to believe that you’ve lost your potential in life, or left feeling like you have nothing to live for, like your options are limited in life, questioning your purpose and value, that’s your self-worth. Sourcesofinsight.com suggests that “Life reflects back at us what we put into it and pay backs can be tough, so throw some sunshine Karma’s way.” [10] So when fear is intruding upon you in life, its okay to take a step back and choose a course of action that doesn’t feed into those pains in life, that’s no ignoring what's causing you pain, it's just not enabling that pain to worsen, stopping in our tracks, and losing all momentum forward. Don't lose your enthusiasm for living life, and loving what you do, if you're a writer, it can be extremely exhausting and trying when you go through something personally, that then comes out through your writing, it's like you can't speak freely, without first addressing the hurt and the issues that arise, in the process of coping with what is being done to you. If "Attitudes are contagious," [11] and if everyone else is living their lives separate from you, be cognizant of how sharing your experiences can cause inner turmoil to others, or bring up feelings that they too have not yet addressed for themselves, after all you are sharing your mind, and they too are processing within themselves what you are saying, to see if they would be affected the same, don't induce any emotions that you have yet to figure out a solution yet for.

"We all live under the same sky, but we don't all have the same horizon." — Konrad Adenauer [12]

Figuring Life Out ...

You cannot be expected to know everything, and if you are, don't pressure yourself, to figure out what it is that is known about you, that is causing a dislike, or for you to be viewed as a joke, not taken seriously in life. Building a company, or a set of ideas is a difficult task, to speak freely, especially under criticism, or assumption of being about others, or with reference to other expressions, be viewed as someone reacting in response to thinking things are about them. There are few quiet considerations you make, and a few subtle references you may notice, but the point at which you become unwell, none of that matters. You will always be judged as someone, who if on their own can achieve success without connections, or be viewed as someone who does not work hard, or who is "hyper" "up" in life as though by "medications" made to feel good about themselves, a false sense of wellness or positivity, which is frowned upon, someone too energetic for comfort, or too strong for acceptance, met with hesitancy. When you start to feel sick, think whose fault is that? And without discussion past, or with reference to the conditions of others, or displays by others, think, what is going to help, with appreciation for the health of others, be best, how to better oneself, in light of others' hardships in life, not be someone who threatens the conditions of others, as not well. Once you become not well, you become an unwanted connection in life, or association, well associations, make others feel well to see or to hear from them, it's like an automatic sense of things being okay, but once you get sick, you are hard to talk to, hard to listen to, hard to see, and hard to be around, that's how mental health issues affect people around you. Expect that much disappointment in life, it hurts, but what can you do, so long as you allow yourself to be led by acceptances of you in life, and automatically accept others without question, then that is a gift of your acceptances of others, empowering them to take on your gifts in life, as though you have spent your good luck or not fit for employment, or marriage. If no one can fix you, then that's when you have a problem, that not even God can help you with, voices, or acceptances, rejections, turn off, or other inappropriately uncomfortable consequences of dating and then have you displayed in public as advertised, as someone worth rejecting who does not value themselves, or the opinions of others. As someone greatly affected by what others think, I always take into consideration the feelings of others, their personal limits, a never push for more than I am capable of giving in life, whether it be love, job, or friendship. I am someone who can only focus on one thing at a time. If your attentions to others makes them feel special, and if you believe in others, and they are found to be special too, that's your acceptance of the condition of others. However, don't expect anyone to mutually accept you if your condition improves, or if you become likeable, that's the present difficulty faced. Even if it's a song, that I hear auditory delusions to, or voices I hear questioning my behavior in private or motivations online, so long as you are punished, then that is what is thought of you, someone who was doing things for attentions or respect, if that was something lacking previously, or someone who was liked on the basis of attentions given, happy. Then there is the term "co-exist" which is happening now, when I'm assuming, its already been thought I was gay, and trying to understand what stimulated arousal from me, upon being alone, whether it was who I was dating, or because of drinking alone, and that is who my power was given to, or feminine edge, as someone trying to be like, or in competition with, less than or threatened by, and that's who gets empowered, the woman that makes you feel inferior, or not as strong, or without enthusiasm continue on in a professional way, be yourself. When you are being sized up on the basis of your: (1) face, (2) sexuality, (3) behavior, (4) writing, (5) progress, (6) sobriety, (7) dating, (8) friendships, (9) addictions, (10) connections, (11) mental health, (12) or intelligence ... that's to dehumanize you. That's to knowingly pry, and derive content disagreeable to your tastes, to benefit whom? The side who thought you were gay, who saw you as grose, who views you as a reject, and sees you as someone who masturbates to women, when and for how long, as a justification for emasculating you as a woman, or as a human being be treated as a woman, and that's for the added justification, or hurting your femininity, to say that those who slept with you, were misled, thinking you were straight, which I was at the time, then to argue that their psyche is hurt, because you did not stay and continue on casually, as though you are not grateful for those who gave love to you, as though it was not an expense to you mental health wise, and image wise. There is a such thing as coming down too strong on people, especially me as a woman, in terms of making things about, and that shared feeling of it being deserved, as though my condition now, has ever been intended to cause harm to anyone not in my life now. I'm assuming they have better more normal lives, and that's with understanding that nothing lasts forever, and because it is too much commitment for attachments and to take care of one another in Los Angeles, that was accepted by me, not questioned by me. Not continuing on, is with respect for your condition, nothing demanded of you, or from you, acceptance of what you're able to give, with no expectation of more, or for lasting for a long period of time, a commitment, that's dating casually, knowing that its not a long term commitment, and respecting the health of one another, then there is rejection. If you are viewed as someone who feels inferior to other women, or who does not like themselves, or is not intelligent, then you as reject are treated that way, if they know they can do better than you, then that's how you are treated as less than. It doesn't matter therefore who you know, if you do not have the confidence to be loving and to be sweet, and to represent yourself well, then that is why no one is attracted to you as not well, not feeling sorry for you, or for your condition if poor, that's what is expected to happen to you as separate from everyone, hurt. That's in retaliation to viewing you as someone who leverages their own wellness by who they connect with, judged as an addict, who builds a good feeling off of a good feeling, as though a bunch of good feelings creates wellness. I'm 35 and smart enough to know that I only have one life to live, and that once I become sick or not well, then yes that makes it difficult to connect with others, and understand what creates a turn off, or heartache, or heartbreak, its expectation of wellness, and disappointment with results. When even at your best you are not good enough and viewed as grose, that's when you have to take into consideration who has bedded you. And wonder why anyone new views you as grose?

Personal Update ...

Writing an Inventory of all my posts on my Website, and reviewing what's been written as a whole. Not sure whether I am going to include any of these posts in a book. Thaw out, or re-assemble. Right now I need to finish working on my first book, then can consider drafting a THIRD MANUSCRIPT, which is my writing in the raw, without editing or review, written and reviewed only by me.

I think its getting to the point, of the reader controlling the writer, so that's as reviewed, thinking about, and based upon who I'm connected to, I think about, and as I am reviewing my own work, stumble upon things I have said, that have already been used to make an example of me, with my own commentary already stated. Its become clear that if you share your life, as examined quickly by anyone else, can relive those traumas or experiences in life, as a joke for them to decipher, whether you were honest about your past, and if relived whether you have become a smarter or wiser person because of those experiences or whether you get treated the same by all people, having read your personal history, or after overhearing your story, respect you less, as different now than you were when you were respected as a law student, as a girlfriend, as a daughter, as a blogger.

The point at which someone is wrong or looks stupid, seems to be a clear invitation to hate, or gives ample opportunity, without limits for attack on my credibility or livelihood, before I have even realized the process in which you present yourself to the world, then made of, treated as though everyone knew you before everyone knows you, so as you get recognized, so do all other things. Maybe with the intent of your story, not being the point of attachment, the only deficit to being important, is that as watched or recorded, if I do not stay on point moving forward, have the capacity to be lead by what others think about me if in the negative or be lead by what is said, have scripted interactions with me, where everyone's on the same page in life, except for me, about me.

No I don't think that "lead or be lead" is a proper response, and does not explain why I am writing online, if there was something that needed work, I worked on it, and if there is something likeable, that must mean whatever was a turn-off before about me or my writing, has since gone into remission, disability wise such as "voices," which I have now learned can occur again through discomfort, that's whether or not everyone or specific groups are on a certain page about me, looking at me, that I cannot cure, the distance I feel when someone is nice to me, or the separation that occurs, upon one's inability to get through to me, and just because I feel different than most, does not mean that I'm hiding something bad within, or have any bad secrets, or a dark side, maybe it's just not feeling loved enough. supported, encouraged, when it's needed like now, and hard on me, when I'm lost, leaving me feeling alone, which must mean, upon being on my own, expected to find my place again, that cannot be done for you, as painful as it might be, to do something for yourself that makes you proud of yourself, how easily the little things that made you proud of yourself, can be injured.

Cycle of Trauma ...

What to do when you freeze? Eventually, you can't rise above anything that is causing you harm, and embarrassment. Especially when you don't like the way you look, and didn't want to photo in the first place, observed as someone taking a photo of themselves, usually we take photos of ourselves in the positive, be viewed in the negative, that feeling is mutual. If I don't want to be seen, and if someone wants to see you, then that is the energy read off a photo, that is taken, to please another, and not to your liking. As a writer and distributor of my own content from my thoughts, and from my life, I've always been careful not to overshare photos of myself, and just recently began showing photos of myself 2019, writing only for the most part.

So yes it is shocking when the worst photos of you are shared in public, something we want to control about ourselves, how we look to others, and be seen under a different light, can be very difficult to comprehend, and to experience yourself. How should one "react when a situation confronting you overwhelms your coping capacities and leaves you paralyzed in fear?" [1] That's a loss of power, when you cannot control the reactions or responses to looking at you, something you are ordinarily in control of, how you present yourself to the public, without crossing any boundaries, when it comes to acceptances of you, being what is expected.

This leads to unnecessary confrontation, when unwanted feelings are felt, either from the displayer, or the one photographing, which can be felt by the viewer, who then feels an unwanted reaction, and change in course of emotion or feeling about someone, that generates disgust or disappointment, how could someone be so stupid? Why would she subject herself to that? Why would she pose that way to someone who is disinterested in her or does not like her? Why would she pose if she is overweight and does not like herself? Why would she be vying for attentions from a man, in a sexual way, if she is already uncomfortable with her body and her image? Why would she explore her sexuality with a companion in private, and not just date online. And other uncomfortable discussions, the list goes on, that's the type of unnecessary hurt that is caused when someone who should be valued gets devalued, or someone who should photo well, does not photo well, or someone who is expected to keep up with appearances, and who has invested in doing so, purchasing clothes, fails to do so. That is someone who does not respect the length of time to recover from mental illness, the length of time to earn back trusts, the length of time it takes to earn respect, the length of time it takes to establish oneself online, the length of time it takes to earn a following, and the length of time it takes to feel good about oneself, all of which can be lost at the flip of a switch.

Then there is the typical response in a painful situation: “Under such unnerving circumstances, “freezing up” or “numbing out”—dissociating from the here and now—is about the only and (in various instances) the best thing you can do.” [2] The expected response, addiction, or self-harm, that is a dislike built within, which manifests itself, by voices heard, resulting in one to either try to make themselves feel good, by taking meds, or allow those bad feelings to fester, and become self-destructive and self-harm. For someone who does not experience inner turmoil or who so chooses to react in the negative, is their choice to be negative toward me, and their goal to generate negative reactions toward me, “destroy me.” And if I’m not crying it’s because I’m frozen, and if I’m not warm it’s because I’m keeping to myself, and if I’m difficult to talk to or get through to, it’s because I’ve been hurt.

What it looks like is embarrassment caused by my own poor decision making, allowing this person to scare me, and trying to deal with problems on my own, and as directed by his hate toward me, a worse result. It later becomes unnecessary what the relationship was like, only necessary for him to make me look careless, as though there was a monogamous bond, which seems to have been claimed only after bad things happened to me.

It’s obvious then, that because things were not working out and because I moved on, he sought to console me, as though if things were more bonded then that would not have happened to me, you are the luck you bring to the world, is what gets sent back to you in life. So it’s obvious if I am not strong or if I am not bonded well enough, and something else comes along, understanding of my disability, may seek to make an even worse example of my mental health condition, make me look stupid and take $7000 from me, as though money can buy happiness, marriage, or is needed to meet anyone of value.

Clearly if I am not of value, I cannot be around anyone of value, nor can anyone of value relate to me. So that is what was done to me, and on top of me seeking marriage, this is how he is treating me, as though it was not understood that my goals were to date again and try to get married, which he supported at the time. If I am hurt, it’s common for those who did care about me to get mad at me, as though it’s my own fault I got hurt, not the fault of those harming me, for causing me illness. That’s having something of mine, money, which was of value special from edd.gov and my Charles Schwab saved, and now having money that was in my name, under their name, that’s money belonging to me, to benefit their health, while subjecting me to illness, voices, and leaving me without money.

There will be moments in life where you will be disciplined and going, feeling good about yourself, and that moment is not now, a hard earned moment of peace, with opportunity before me, was easily ruined, upon socializing with the wrong people in life, who did not treat me as special, who treated me as stupid, and to their added benefit felt special, convincing me I was worthless, while convincing others that I am worthless, as though I deserve to be treated that way. The smaller of a world they make for you, the bigger they feel, the smaller they make you feel, the smarter they feel, that’s how a writer gets changed, from being at peace, open minded, to everything being about them, whoever hurt you, taking pride in themselves that they made you look small and unimportant to the entire world, so that no one takes you seriously, so that everyone looks at you like you’re a joke, so no one understands you, so no one reads too tired to try to understand you, so what is said hurts the mind, is difficult to process, or sounds unintelligent, without solution.

If you’re feeling stuck it’s hard to share or talk about, because you run the risk of leaving the reader feeling stuck, and what’s even worse is someone who is hurting you, reading what you have written, and continuing to criticize you, as though you’re lying, while trying to write under a condition caused by them. Wellness you cannot fake, happiness you cannot fake, love you cannot fake, you are the way you are, disposition wise, based upon how you are treated by others, and by how you treat others, and respect occurs upon acknowledging how one another is, without being personally offended by one another’s demeanor. And if someone looking at you perceives you to be someone who thinks highly of themselves, how quick will they be to put you down in life, to see how you respond to others looking at you or talking to you like you’re stupid.

What’s contagious, now is the feeling of anyone who has since disassociated from me, taking the side who is upset with me, as though they are on guard, as though I hurt others, or do things in private that make other people uncomfortable, and by sharing photos of me “being sexual” that’s using an aggressive posture by photograph, to offend others and generate a reaction from all, as offended by looking at me, my body, or my face.

That harm cannot be undone, when there is a mutual discomfort felt between two people, that results in not getting jobs you are interviewed for, hostility toward you as though you are headed in the wrong direction in life by the choices you have made, and everyone feeling bigger than you, as though you were trying to outsmart a system or take a shortcut in life, and got caught believing in something to be real that wasn't real, and if you talk about your experiences, only be made to look more desperate or stupid as compared to other women, who are trying to establish themselves online, look worse, look unattractive, look stupid, not deserving of time or attention, a waste of space, a "wannabe," a "bad influence," or has "bad luck," seeking to "demonize you," take what was beautiful about you, and destroy all that you have left in you.

Moments in Life ...

(1) Pride: Usually experienced after completing a project, or arriving to your chosen destination, a place you encounter a few times in your life, having worked hard, and able to sit back, review your progress, and make a better version of yourself. It's a starting point in life, upon completion of a job well done, that makes you feel like anything is possible, and that you are capable of growing once more.

(2) Feeling Stuck: Once you've exhausted all resources for coping, and only left with yourself, feeling less than average, and incapable of getting out of a feeling you feel you were put in, when any step toward improvement hurts, and any step forward feels challenging or difficult, it's an emotion to be overcome, with faith in better days to come. It's when looking at you, everyone else has lost faith in you, and you have to still believe in yourself, in order to come out of a difficult situation in life.

(3) Feeling Alone: When everything you do cannot undo a feeling that you have been situated in, when nothing feels good, and when all your best efforts went to waste. Figuring out what your goals are in life, without subjecting yourself to being harmed in the process of achieving your goals in life. It's being scared of the future, what you feel incapable of achieving in life, and living anyways as best you can, with all the pressure.

(4) Happiness: There are rare moments of happiness, sometimes shared with others, and sometimes, not shared, a feeling absolutely content. Either everyone is being nice to you, and things are starting to get better socially, professionally, and with family.

(5) Disappointment: When either you fail to live up to expectation past the point of improvement, prove yourself incapable of taking care of yourself or those around you, and are once again ignored, not acknowledged in a room full of people, occurring when a shared understanding of you in the negative is established, whether by your own conduct or by another's hand at life. When you feel powerless, and not moving forward.

(6) Difficulty: It's not seeing eye to eye, not understanding the causes for hardship, and not able to undo life's challenges, faced. It's when everyone is strong without you, and you have to meet them half way, and get better on your own. These are moments when you distance yourself from others, and stop engaging in activities that benefit you, whether it's exercise, socialization, attending meetings, trying to date again, or network, it's when you take a step back and disappear from reality and keep to yourself. Such as now.

(7) Addiction: It's doing the same thing over and over again and expecting a different result, such as engaging in loving relationships, or shared comradeship with those around you, and expecting for that feeling to last, basing your togetherness, on acceptance from others and trying hard for things in life, to have things in life, and wind up empty handed. What you invest your heart into, should be something or someone of value to you, not something you have to try for, love is something given to you by another. The harder you have to try to achieve a feeling, means you are not in the right place at the right time, you may be well, but any turbulence, is a tell tale sign of nothing positive to come, there's no such thing as a future relationship with anyone who does not accept you initially as important or special. It's having future hope, being nice, then getting hurt again, it's being looked at as stupid when you are nice, and then met with horror should you change or be less loving, become distant, or leave a relationship that no longer suits you. Nothing that begins innocently, ends that way, it's always who looks better, and based upon your wellness judged, as someone who got hurt, deserved to be hurt, or deserves to move on in life, none of which can occur so long as the other asserts themselves as victim, with pictures to support their position as wanted, you as reject.

(8) Loss of Power: You are only special a few times in life, it's upon meeting you, being met with acceptance in life. That dark cloud looming overhead, is illness, and how you feel is you absorbing that illness, and what is projected from your being, is something that turns others off from accepting you. What is attractive? Someone who is at peace, who recognizes their self-worth, and who likewise makes others feel good about themselves too, it's a special power you hold in loving another that makes them feel good. That's being approachable. Then there is being unapproachable, when you bear resemblance to someone who has lost beauty, or is disfigured, meaning not themselves, not uniquely identifiable by looking at sharp looking, meaning has been touched too many times, has been played with too many times, or whoever was hold their heart, caused them to dislike themselves, and that feeling of not looking good can be seen by anyone watching you, the lack of light within, the darkness overhead, and not feeling good to others.

Losing Value ...

The point at which you become devalued, shamed, and ridiculed online, is when you begin to question your own motivations in life, what is it worth to write, what is it worth to love, what is it worth to talk to anyone, what is it worth to apply for jobs, and what is it worth to be accepted. It seems if you're going to be successful in life, and if success is the story you seek to share, then whether or not you are successful in life, will be the point of attack, by anyone who does not view you as a person of value, to be respected. It takes a lot of hard work to write a book, and to assemble ones thoughts, to live life, and then to share about ones experiences, that was my planned goal. And then things happen to you in life, that make you look stupid, and not feel good about yourself. And you wonder why? Why did I open up to this person, why did I do things to please this person, and why was I scared of not listening to this person and complying with his requests, because in the end it is me that's being hurt online and embarrassed, it is me who looks as though I brought trouble onto myself, interacting with anyone in private, and it looks like I was coming on to people disinterested in me. As someone who is not that pretty and overweight, attraction, and sexuality, is not my go to mechanism for seeking attentions in life. That's not what has gotten me jobs, and that's not what my relationships past were about looks. So if those are not your strengths, then it must be me as a person, that feels good upon looking at me, without worry, or turn-off. That's a privilege in life feeling good, upon looking at someone, means they are doing the right things in life, they are presentable in private and in public. When someone records you in a different light, that's not just to get them hard, as they may seem in the moment, attracted to you and want to see your body, or how you would behave toward someone you wanted sexually, that's a provoked demeanor, and the permanency of recording such behavior or look, is devastatingly embarrassing, and forever tarnishes your image, to anyone who did respect you, and for them to try to understand why you would behave that way in private with someone who just wanted to get hard. Its actually very painful when you open up sexually to anyone in private, then they turn on you and shame you, question you, or accuse you of being something you are not. Its like they expect you to constantly light up for them, be in love with them, and unconditionally each day be the same toward them, as though they deserve that much for giving you love in exchange for you sending photographs per their liking. You would never think that they would share those photos to the world, or for what reasons that was done to me? For what attentions, or to appease which jokes in life, about women associated to OJ Simpson. To me, he is just looking for the wrong attentions in life, and using my face and body to direct those attentions back to me, in my life, face harsh scrutiny, and without awareness, of the repercussions for overexposing me online by picture and video, I don't think he really understands, crime, and why victims of crime are offered protections in life, and why would he beat up a victim of homicide, and make light of my experiences in life, as though they are so unrelated, and not respect that Im conservative, and photo on good days, and not respect that when I am not well, or if I don't feel like photographing or video-ing myself to respect that too. Theres nothing more unappealing that something distasteful, stupid, or done without care, and nothing worse than a representation of self, as provoked by someone who does not respect them in the first place. If someone is not in the mood to photo like that, then don't make someone photo in a sexual way, simply as agreement, not to defame them, then use those images to defame someone who does not deserve to be hated, or disgust others by my image.

Getting Into Life ...

What happens once you get hurt doing something that you love, such as blogging? Then what? That's exactly where I am in life. Yes it's a gamble blogging, and no there is no such thing as guaranteed success, after having written online for 8 years, I finally developed online (2019-2020), which took a lot of hard work and dedication. Still you can invest so much time and energy into something and still get hurt. Respect is a huge part of success, its upon looking at your life, and observing your progress, not going out of your way to make someones life a living hell. This is why as you improve and as you make progress, only to share those results in a therapeutic setting in which members observing your progress, are told to keep things confidential and to not judge you. Unfortunately the real world is not as kind. And while you may have experienced something special wellness, you cant expect anyone else, to respect your improvements. Ive been through very difficult times in life, hearing voices, self-harming, much of which I kept private to myself, not something I shared online or video'd. And because I have a condition in which I am bipolar and hear voices, that is how I was preyed upon, for reaction, to cast me in a negative light, self-harming and hitting my head, aggravated, and taunted, and insulted in private, so that in public, I would appear sick, disheveled, and disoriented. And that was what was done to me. This is why if you have bipolar, not to get too close to anyone online who does not respect your disability. Who decides instead to treat you as though you are emotionally available to fight, or put up with insults and not get hurt physically and mentally. This is upon sharing your life in private, with someone who feels like their entitled, to share their story about you, as though I have not been sharing my story online for the past year in front of everyone, to watch me improve, and see me make progress. For someone such as myself, who does not have any friends presently, and no boyfriend, that was really hurtful. This person acts as though I did not waste time too, responding to all his emails, and texts, and threats to expose me, as though I never treated him as important. Ask anyone from my life, Im not close to anyone. Its really hurtful that after years of being alone, I allowed this person to get close to me, to be in my life, to share my progress, and share my sense of peace with. If this person no longer respects my sense of peace and stability, then that is why we are not talking anymore. Some people take things too far. They always seem to want more and more from me, a greater commitment, a deeper bond, know every secret, this is for the purposes of generating content from me that is personal, things that are not shared online, so that he can be the first to share things about me, as though I don't already share everything about myself online, openly writing everyday, sharing my thoughts, and sharing my life with everyone. Im not sure what hes trying to do, but hes not helping me, and hes hurting me on purpose, because he expected the relationship to continue, past defaming me online, on Facebook and Twitter, making fun of me, asking for pictures, then writing very hurtful captions, calling me schizophrenic, schizoid, prying through my medical history, trying to diagnose me, called me Lesbian, and posting other hateful content about me. Things are only amicable so long as there is mutual understanding, and once the other person, who claims to love you, no longer seeks to support you, then that is what is happening now, he is trying to destroy all my progress, defame me online, ridicule me in public, and make all sorts of outlandish claims about me, as though I am not an authentic person, an honest person, a loving person, a kind person.

Right to Life ...

What are you talking about right to life, what harms have you suffered that you have not caused yourself recently, recently not really at my best, cant really win with people, its everyone above you or the highway. If youre forgetting that's a good thing. It doesn't really matter at this point. I don't really care to share anymore what is going on within me, or about any miracles, or fun ways of seeing things. It doesn't really seem to matter, treated as though I don't appreciate, or given things without effort or hard work, its so I am not treated poorly, I went shopping, that was overtime, collected. Im really getting tired of being compared, please leave everyone alone, and don't compare struggles or successes they really have nothing to do with me, and I really don't care who is doing well, what matters is the continued effort to shame me and make fun of my law degree as though I did not work hard. I understand its funny to you rehab and break ups and blow jobs, obviously I am not the winner in life, please don't make fun of my experiences as though it was easy overcoming those embarrassments in life or treatments public, and be screamed at by the ones who loved me, I was not really expecting things like that to happen, and later doing anyone who was attracted to me, who I picked back and talked to and actually had things in common with, really didn't seem to make me look special either. You aren't really special if you are comparing yourself to other, that's just how it is, based upon who you date seen as a gold digger or opportunist, I understand one was married and that was to fulfill his fantasy not mine, I was not of the age yet where I was attracted to older men, I think talking about things past, Im not a match now, not especially after rehab and punishment, its about "how I feel" "what I look like" "do I obsess" I don't look at people I don't care what they are doing with their lives, I don't even assume they are reading for that matter, as though my condition affects them as connected spiritually at all on any level, that's something that happens upon separation, illness. Maybe just needs more alone time. I don't think that sounding smart or being upbeat or expressing love really helps, its seems my story although honest gets turned into evil and evil and more evil and then make me look stupid, as though Im some OJ promoter, Steve-O naked online, that's not my racism, that's you turning me into a puppet, to make others feel better about themselves, inspire, lead, remove yourself from equations whatever.

Example of: I don't care writing, whats this about, what a waste of time, no heart, garbage. Then there is everything else written by me with heart then there is my MSL, what do you care. When I was able, I got things done, when I got punished, that was so embarrassing, I never smiled again, o well.

This would be a typical feeling I would cheer up, usually requires someone sweet with a good sense of humor, not trying to outsmart, or cause anothers head to hurt, or feel intimidated by the issues. Thats being kind. As a writer, on a bad day no matter what, its important to keep your energy up, you never know who is reading or will become disinterested in you, or lose enthusiasm of care. Its really no big deal, people should come and go as they please, based upon their own wellness. Thats not being controlling, allowing people time to heal, allowing people time to think, and adjust themselves to any standards of reality, that we are so required to comprehend, whether literally through reading, or as a majority held, an understood feeling upon being with others. You cannot read the thoughts of others, and no one can read your thoughts, unless you speak, and no one knows what you know or why what you know is important unless you articulate the significance of being you. Not at fault. Whats a disappointment? What is the expectation. And by what standards compared, insulted. Is that deserved, when one is found to stand out among, and others convinced that caring means "understanding" or "comprehending" failures among others, what is provoked upon being confronted by someone who appears well, thinks they are more well, or clearly in need of some understanding. It seem like there is a loss of compassion, when really its just a lost of clarity, dont get too paranoid, life is a learning process, and when any number of blames gets placed upon the well, by people on the outside, assuming leadership within as to what is thought outside of an issue, dont be surprised, when someone from inside the issue, sheds some light out loud, online, for all to review, be kind.

Thinking About My Health ...

This year was productive, there were good moments, and a very rough start, a lot of trauma, and losses suffered at the get go, without explanation. I don't think as a non-scientist its for me to discern, the causes for illness, falling over our Country, and the reasons why, Im not a COVID expert. I just know that if I am not doing well and paranoid and unstable, chances are things will not feel right around me. You are given so many opportunities in life to enjoy the moment, and should you fail to participate or be available for moments of rest you miss out on a lot in life why they say to "stop and smell the roses." Sometimes, it helps to keep going, and sometimes its necessary to slow down, and think about what you are saying and why you are saying with some kind of plan or agenda or main point of bigger point to arrive to that explains why certain stories are being shared, as though you understand the male mentality in life, or whether you are commenting from a woman's perspective homophobic or being judgmental toward straight men, I understand. When it comes to sexes, if it looks like you are trying to play victim as though my mental health concerns have anything to do with a mans mind, you are sorely mistaken, no one can teach provoke this type of mental illness, not unless its thought deserved. Im sorry for sharing how others were with me, that's not trying to invite public review of my relationships as though there was something wrong with my relationships then, I was a star student and star athlete my whole life, never a trouble maker, there for my friends, worked hard, and dated monogamously. I think writing online, made me look too carefree like I did not value my intelligence and was giving up in life, and the fact that I was being creative was frowned upon being "multi-genre writing" was taught to me at CU, and no one likes CU, because a "psychology student from CU" was responsible for Aurora. I am already connected to a famous case, that was an unwanted insight, as though I am connected or drawn to cases in life, standing out to me, from an educated standpoint, if it stands out doesn't mean your connected, and if something affects you, chances are there is something you could be doing to make things better, or add to stability around you, not falter during moments of instability be attacked.

Allow Yourself to Be Called Out ...

Theres an unwritten course of action that occurs whenever it is found that you are either unfit, not strong, embarrassing, not smart enough, thought things come easy to you, that comfort and expectation of you continuing on to produce notes, outlines, essays, read, highlight, thinking that your some bottomless pit driven to perfection or high on meds feeling good about yourself in life. When someone does not think you deserve to look or feel good, then that is how you are treated, to see whether you understand what it means to suffer, be rejected, not confident, or not sure of oneself, that's to test to see whether you are confident in your surroundings, with the content overhead, or communicated to you, or whether, you think things are about you, the more aloof you are, the more appears around you to confirm your identity, as though its an equal playing field in life, of equal opportunity to solicit attentions from, to call you out as knowing code, and having assembled all your memories prior to law school, no I only put together two arm folds, and that was that. I did not really understand how to deal with that energy around me, or distance, or lack of enthusiasm, it seems, the outer perspective lets know about this this or that, interest, although flattering and scary, took hold over my more balanced viewpoint, of what was and what is, and then I got sick. Trust your instincts, and if you want to be weird, be weird, study whatever provides solution to your wonders about life, things in your google search, but don't go around telling your boyfriend what youre doing, that will only make them think you are stupid, or not smart, paranoid, or not settled, if you have information, that doesn't mean that upon sharing respect will be granted, or that you will be more understood for that matter, sometimes looking at things and you your home, your life, your study habits, mistake you for some idiot, thinking big thoughts about life, dreaming the wrong dreams, like helping others is a “fraudulent” effort, especially if you have sex, and later in life having experienced mental health issues, have difficulty in close contact with others behave and respond weird, and if attached treated as stupid, or offender, more whole than you. When you walk in sweet, and leave stupid, what does that tell you, you are trying too hard for acceptance, take a step back, and don’t bring up information, otherwise private to you, not shared with everyone around you, and allow yourself to be attacked as though withholding information to a case or people.

Knowing People ...

I would by lying if I did not talk about my experiences in life, and self-harm as though Ive not lived a special and blessed life. Im not sure what happened, but I got mental health issues, and Im not sure that mattered to anyone in observance of me, if you can get yourself out of a condition in life, and take meds, then wonderful, that makes you a winner in life, and so I cried. Being smart is tough it was my dream to go to law school performed well on some exams, but like most things “if your hearts not in it” its hard to keep going and do well. That explains the trouble with dating and going to law school, if you are a woman, that didn’t work out at all. Examples of honest mistakes you make in life, following your heart, sometimes not everything works out. Then you take ownership of your problems in life, its like manning the station, a space station, sitting up at the control tower, and managing your issues one by one until you are able to be present again, in the moment, damaged, gone, or tired, life is tough. But never quit and give up, the only one you are letting down is yourself, of course you’ll feel tired, of course you’ll lose faith, of course, you wont excel, if shining was your thing, doing well no matter where you were in life, how quickly that gift can be lost, once a positive opinion of you is changed, that’s knowing about you, and not thinking anything less of you versus, knowing about you, and hearing things to make you think less of someone, that’s the disappointment, of your 4th step and doing your step work, sounds like a current issue, but really is the past, sounds like it explains now, but really was a precursor to all positives, avoidance of trouble, and dating, keeping busy, studying, and getting into law school. Those are friends, there when you need them, and waiting during difficulties, with faith you’ll overcome what is it you are going through. Everyone else, is just a test, have fun in life, and don’t forget to be playful, and leave your dirt in a diary or with your nearest #scotus companion. When there is room for acceptance of you pat yourself on the back, you’ve earned that ability to speak to others with ease, no burdens too heavy, no stories too difficult to explain, and no guilts to revisit in fear, just emotions and feelings presented by what others think, that’s the most difficult part about public speaking, they can be very unforgiving, and remember everything, maybe remember more than you are able to remember yourself, as the writer keeping track of everything. You know yourself best, and never doubt that, and so I wrote. Writing is not to solve, resolve, cure, make sense, or gain advancements in life, that you would not otherwise be privileged to in life, you are always afforded wonderful opportunities in life, blogging was never necessary, (playing with my voice now, caught that), but when in Rome, and not when your defenses are up, that’s the worst time to speak, its to every pitch wrong, and every pitch offensive or insensitive, read in the reverse and backwards and upside down by anyone who thinks youre remotely offensive or of low class. (And now that’s the English impression being put through me as though that’s how they feel as though I am reading the energies of someone who thinks my commentary is obtuse). At this point I don’t feel like writing anymore, not when I cannot be myself, and certainly not as anyone else, that’s the difficulty with sharing your story online, no one influences you for the better, except her. That’s past the point of punishment and odds, your life becomes a joke to every onlooker who perceives your generosity and bravamente be a delusional and paranoid response to posters and shootings in movie theaters in Aurora, simply because you spoke. Tell me for how long was I known, that if something like that happened, what was I expected to be apart of, and was that known generally. For that much don’t hold either of us responsible, as though that moment was a joke, or what has been since, has been a joke for anyone, trying to move forward, without empowering the wrong teams in life. That’s being smart, that’s not avoidance, that’s not seeing someone who is educated as bad, thinking that they are mentally ill within, and poor decision makers, capable of being made to look the same, it doesn’t matter how many photos, or notes, or tests failed, I will always be me smart under any conditions, that’s knowing me. What you cannot predict or anticipate is not of my concern, that’s called being controlling, when someone who seeing you, fears what your forward is going to be like, and based upon watching you think you are someone who enters lives and victimizes as though dating was that, as though correspondence was not helpful, as though Im expected to hear voices and get along with voices or be treated as a traitor, as though if those voices were government or some social body of individuals watching over me, like what they think is from a better viewpoint than my own, is judging me in the wrong. That is watching to collect, watching to observe, watching to predict, then watching as people die, not say a word, make no reports, and expect me to respond, as in defense, something done for me.

Looking for a Fight ...

You can't fix anyone looking for a fight, and reading into the causes for their feelings toward you, will only bring you down further in life, as responded to. I may not be CIA or some powerful government official, with a paycheck, and people to talk to and help me do research in life, Im on my own. I don't have anyone to help me, confide in, or advise me in life, everything said is solely coming from me. Whether its to my benefit or not speak, on good days and bad days. And whats especially not helpful is being forced to speak on days when I feel like giving up, and all hope has been lost, that's feeling beaten up in life, as though everything you have worked hard towards in life, has been ruined, or spoiled. When you are of no value to someone, be of value to yourself. It really doesn't matter who you get through to, when you try to assert your intelligence in life, or what has been done well, share. Don't squander your assets, if its what makes you feel valuable and special, then continue to work on yourself until youre proud. No matter who's attacking you. At this point, I don't think I can handle another defamatory tweet. I apologize for saying things suggestive of me being attacked as though Im being treated as terrorist to the best interests of my Country, as though I am creating a version of myself online, that does not accurately represent who I am in real life, a better version of myself, this is me right now. I may not have been vocal about my bipolar in the past, but that does not mean its proper to discuss my delusions out loud now, especially not if it puts my health or the health of my loved ones in jeopardy to discuss things suggestive of guilt, that's not whats causing me pain, its losing that's causing me pain, to someone who thinks theyre better than me, who thinks I deserve pain and suffering, and who think me being devoid of continued relationship to them, means for bad purpose I am keeping myself separate as though Im not allowed time to heal. I think there is a false impression of me as watched, that I get energy from it, or am rolling on a high, or things I say, or excited to state deductions as though that makes me feel good to comment in a way that simplifies the struggles of others or at least my own. I just know that I have always done my best (now representing myself in the positive), and have always made it a point to help others during times of need (although now may not be one of them), and have always done my best to (assert a boundary where one is due, alone time). I don't understand what is expected to be not human about me, expecting me to "feel good" or be on a medication like "adderrall" that keeps me lifted, Im on depression meds, learning disability meds, and night meds for sleep, whatever that translates upon looking up in your psychotherapy dictionaries I am not sure of, but I am sure that upon disclosure of the medications I take, think for reasons having to do, with drug abuses, or failures due to mismanagement of medications on my own behalf. What does losing feel like. When you get beaten up in life, for instance a "website" would be the equivalent of an additional blow, causing me physical bodily harm, whatever legal definition that fits, which I think is being done in retaliation, to say I was well when Sydney was not well, and therefore hurting me or exposing me, is to support her wellness, well it doesn't, when I am doing well, there are improvements seen in all my friends, so that does me a disservice, and because we haven't re-attached talked, not as painful for them to watch as it all unfolded, why I live a very public life, I don't keep secrets, and if there is disappointment, that's not a surprise, Im sure everyone has an opinion of their own about my life as lived, thinking they could do a better job of being smart, that's not being under the same pressures, disabilities, or hardships as me, staying stable and being normal no matter what medications I am prescribed, and be a successful career girl, I actually thought I was going to finish law school, I think I finished at some point this year, I forget.

That's the Thing with Mental Health Issues ...

No one can advise you of your maladies in life, tell you anything remotely comforting when you are feeling ill, that's a disposition acquired, of someone like me, who has been hospitalized 9 times, that is not being able to figure out why I lose composure, and how I lost my smarts. There is a such thing as others being convinced that you have done something wrong and depending upon how foul they believe you to be to the health of others, justify themselves, as having done the community a service, by hurting you or injuring your ability to help others, that's what is done to someone who is viewed as being stronger than they are, that's the misunderstanding with mental health issues. With regards to jail or punishment, when you go in, that is not something you can control. Being put in jail, that is not something you can argue your way out of, if someone complains and is unhappy with you or does not like you, that means that you do not belong, and if you do not belong, responding in the negative only does you a disservice in life, allow for the blasphemy to continue, no one can affect you in life, not if you allow it, not if you pay attention to it, and not if you allow yourself or others to believe that you are in harms way, respond to provocations in life, and fight. I have always been one to say that fighting causes mental illness, maybe that it just something others do not understand about me, basing how they feel about me, or think about me, as deserving of being controlled in life, as though I don't have a mind of my own, as though I cannot make decisions for myself, that is just how you get treated in life, if it is determined that you are the cause of their unhappiness toward you disappointed, that's just how I am treated in life, WAS treated in life, as an "embarrassment to my family." And that is how I was treated, and because I was treated that way, my relationships did not work out, because I was no longer confident and feeling good about myself. That was God "or my doctor" deciding for me that recovery was necessary or rehab following hospitalization the second May 2011. So long as I allow other to be convinced Im mentally ill, then that's how I will be treated as the cause of illness, as though with expectation I was being watched, and disappointed others, and was made fun of on a grander scale, because I deserved it. This is why you do not hook up with anyone who you meet at a bar, that is how you get treated as damaged goods, and that disappointment, you feel within, is heartbreak, that is was feeling good and no longer feels good, and everyone else who is hard on you, is hard on you because you don't feel good, because there is something wrong with you, that's not acting, that's my health. And as amusing as it may seem, there is nothing I can do to adjust my condition to meet the needs of others, in order to feel welcome, past the point of me not feeling well, which is reason to stay home. You can either not be known, and treated like youre up and put down as stupid, to make you feel bad about yourself, or you can keep trying in life, and not allow those who did not love you, to continue to have the power to cause you harm now, shame, and embarrassment, look like an easy lay, so what if that's not rape, that movie was about her experience in life, I was 22 years old, and in law school, "what difference," some things are done in love, and some things are done without leaving a number and a name. And so long as you blame a consensual encounter on the other for your hurt esteems, the longer it will take for you to realize the beauty in life again, and come forward as a new person, not one who is complaining about treatments past, that is how you get treated in life, if you are drunk and alone, as someone who is lost, who upon connecting to loves, and upon loving, gets drained, that's then not their fault that you are a woman, but it's a learning lesson, that even someone who does not look pretty, who is nice and friendly and talks to you, does not mean that she needs sex, passing out drunk getting in a cab. I have never really complained that much, because it was not technically rape, it was just an experience that did not make me feel good later, nor did the second time, seeing him maybe just meant not a match, that's the lesson with meeting people when drunk, you may be nice they may want more. Don't take your racist energy out on me, and accuse me as though Im telling a story about racism, to project myself as victim, and be controversial on purpose, if the majority of the Mexican population does not like me, because they think Im claiming victim, than Im sorry you lost your gusto in life, and light, as associated to someone who was "Samoan" and from "Hawaii" lived with his Uncle and Aunt in the Mariners Village a block away from me, and "sold T-Shirts on the Boardwalk." -That's just how people are feeling good without you in life, wanting things from you and not needing you in life, and making you feel bad, when you recognize a quality within them, confidence, which you used to have.

Personal v. Public Issue ...

Recently I have just overcome for the interim, and personal disagreement with someone who was a pen pal, who proceeded to humiliate me online, on and off since Friday, not respectful of a "Getty Image" photo featuring me in attendance to very famous Funeral, and collaged photos of me sent to him, requested for in my underwear, sexual photos, per his taste. Let me see this, let me see that. And that is what happened to me, the photos were requested for to be used, to post online, not in compliance with his statement of taking everything down and not sharing them online, that was not to my knowledge, the purpose for the photos. Once a relationship has ended, remind yourselves that you are under no obligation to cure someone elses upset with you, not matter how deep the relationship was, you are not their therapist, and you are not making them feel good, then a photo of you being sexual will not make them feel good either, which was what was requested for. Trust your instincts, when you feel things are over, its okay to focus on other things, and if that is not allowed, you do not have to respond, no matter how connected you are, and whether you are being aggravated through all hours of the night in retaliation for who sued you, that's is to treat you as they think you treated someone else and were sued to see how you feel being spoken to without the necessity to hear from someone, and tired, not in the mood to respond, or to engage with someone who is being demanding of your time and attention. That is beyond an update, beyond checking in, that's not a brainstorm, that's not trying to help me, that was trying to hurt me, thinking that me begin robbed $7000 has anything to do with him, as though his identity or previous purpose to help me flashing a Facebook page since March was brought into the picture. What was done to me, caused a change in me, and that change in me, caused me to be a poor decision maker, and that lack of focus, was taken advantage of, and my loving side, was too nice to people, and that comfort, did not exist elsewhere, that's hurting someone seeking a feeling from you that cannot be provided to them, that's not my fault, nor my responsibility to cure anyone who claims to love me or hurt me, of their anger toward me, as though Im not well enough or smart enough. That's when you need to learn to back off, and trust that the person to whom youre hurting in life, means well, and when they need to time to heal, or recuperate, not take personally, or attack as though they have done something wrong to you or to themselves, that's just a consequence of not being good enough, someone else scoops you up, and is nice to you. Im not an expert in who did who wrong, and Im not even an expert at my own health, mental health, bipolar, and voices, all I know is that things got worse. Im sorry for being upset, a video of me naked dancing was shown on Twitter and that's permanent. That was very upsetting, very provocative, and very shocking, and that was intended to destroy me. People for some reason think self-harm is about "hate" or "frustration" or "not liking oneself" or "unhappiness" or "jealousy" its about AGGRAVATION and voices just like people can cause aggravation leading to self-harm, that is a pain you inflict upon yourself, or a pain inflicted by another, as though that feels good. In this scenario it was someone saying love you, and sexing me, and being sweet, nurturing, then hurting me insulting me, and calling me names, and defaming me online, that's hurtful on many levels. Don't make things about me doing myself, then not liking myself, because doing myself as gay, and then hitting my head 2020 like I was hitting my head 2017 after getting Syphallis and my head shrunk and looked like an old man, in a photo I took and deleted. That was really grose. Im sober now, and not on drugs, why hurt my heart in ways, you think cause my heart to hurt, that is doing myself, to someone who I think loves me, and then rejects me, as though hurting my heart causes me self-harm or suicide.

"Disarm[ing] Hate" ...

What does disarming hate mean to me? Without bringing up how self-harm and suicide have affected me in my life, its hard to think beyond your worst moments in life, or weaker versions of yourself explain. To me it means not enabling others to create battles within that can otherwise be fought on ones own, that is not bringing in the issues of one, or others, to articulate, paint, draw, cast, mirror, transcribe, or create a visual representation of a feeling or a set of beliefs about what they feel or think, if it means to cause harm to another. Thats not help, that maybe isnt even hate, but its starts with a discomfort, taken out on another as the cause for that discomfort, as though someone who is around is purposefully causing harm to the comfort of those around them. Then there is mental illness, or mental health issues, when you are in your own world, not bothering others, and going through your feelings on your own, thats allowed, singing in your car, writing in private, journaling, writing poems, experimenting with self-care, recording yourself by selfie or video, liking people, talking to people, and then there are rejections, that is upon seeing you not wanting anything to do with you, or becoming aggarvated or annoyed at your presence, as though its your presence that is causing a discomfort to the room, as though its you of "low intelligence" thats causing an inequity of harm around you in terms of the balance of interest in wellness to a room or to a group of people upon being around others, thats when you are being viewed in the negative. Everyone finds comfort in different places in life, and one should live where they feel most comfortable, thats not to communicate a harm, thats not because one thinks theyve been harmed, thats to situate oneself, to be more well liked, to be visited more often, to be more convenient to whomever loves them, so that they dont have to go out of their way to be seen. Thats love, following your heart. Theres a such thing called likeness, that used to happen upon being around people, seeing one another as normal, today however, its about who likes who, who wants who, whos above who, whos more well than others and why, and if it is so determined that you dont deserve to be well, then that is an example of a cause for attack to the wellness of a person, who one does not think deserves to be well or happy, thats being around people, and not being able to be happy for others, thats being around people and offended by the happiness of others, or their wellness, thats being in an environment to which you have grown intolerant of, whether its the people who comprise that environment or whether you as a person, have become less in tune with your surroundings, respect less the environment or the people and start to not do well yourself, thats not taking responsibility for your own health, expecting others to change, or seeing your failure to adapt, as a weakness on your part or on the part of another, we cant all be strong at once, just go where you are most appreciated and valued in life, and not waste too much time or effort, on those who you dont do as well around.

Where You Come From ...

To not make matters worse, now would be a good time to hold a discussion of remembering where you come from. If you have it good in life, and if you have worked hard in life, there is no reason, to speak to others fears about you, or play up to anyones chaos, assuming to be affecting you, upon insult. We are all allowed to reach moments of peace on our own, there are no directions to peace, that is something you have to figure out for yourself in life, whether that's "coming to terms" with your past, your present, or your ability to prepare for your future, some tasks are less daunting to others than most. You can't pretend to be something that youre not, whether that's refined, educated, or street, not all of us were made for the real world, or jobs, and some of us are best left at home to work, at least that is what I have discovered for myself. Although working in the private sector "internships" were good experiences for me, there were not money making opportunities for me, simply experienced based learned based upon wellness kept, encouraged, or given privileges in life to be apart of. That's working at a fun job, you get a cool boss you admire, and you get to apply what you have learned in more academic based internship opportunities, to a real world setting, you either have skills that benefit your tolerance for assignments, able to complete, and figure out as trained, or you struggle to maintain momentum, its all in your work ethic, are you a stable person, why or why not. You don't really have time to have personal issues, disabilities to overcome, or lawsuits to worry about, basically anything keeping you from focus, is something that needs to be dealt with, prior to starting a new job. That's wellness can you work, are you able to work, and what is holding you back from being able to focus your time and attention to the task at hand and be present, are you where you need to be, do you feel fulfilled, and what is keeping you from not feeling like you are in the right place at the right time, that's placement, sometimes you feel good, settle in and adjust, and sometimes you don't, that's work, you either make the most of your surroundings and do your best, or are particular about where you see yourself and where you will be mos comfortable. How hard are you willing to work to achieve your goals in life, you'd expect would be taken care of by schooling alone, but schooling alone doesn't guarantee you a job, not if you have things constantly resting on your conscious about things or people past, or even words or things said, that you cannot prove, such as voices, which is what I have bipolar. I don't think that much is accepted about me, I don't really think that someone who doesn't have voices really understands the concept of disability, just recognizes that they are well and doesn't understand why you are not well, thinks you are "lying" or based upon your experience "well years" not working hard enough, or not trying hard enough, or look at you well, and think "things are given to you" or "things are handed to you" or "gifts were given to you" "you were born with it" "you have it easy in life." That's the type of understanding that someone looking into your life thinks seeing you well, that you arrived there by plane, and that wellness was delivered to you by God, because of wealth, that's not true, we all go through difficulties, and we all are challenged to perform and compete in any environment in which we are expected to thrive in academic and work settings, and that determines whether you are sensitive to the needs of others and able to make others happy, working hard, or whether your demeanor, dress, and attitude in life, poorly represents the companies purpose and mottos in life, if they had them transcribed somewhere they forgot to show me, as to what standards of wellness they considered proper of who they ever felt represented by as though I did not meet those standards, that's looking at where you wanted to be in life, and judging you from what you look like now, as though you are a joke for ever thinking that you were capable or ever in an acceptable condition then as well to work among the well, whether that be in law, or for #scotus applied, told it was a one year commitment. I was that well, to apply, and was once accepted to a job: DC Law Students in Court. Summer 2011, which I could not attend, when I was taken off all medication and sent to rehab 2 months. It is by the stories you share, that you are forced to relive situations, as told by someone else, who then represents the maker of those circumstances then as though in defense to who, decided it improper for you to go back on meds and work in DC, and decided instead to make a different life for you as identified as "addict" in a professional environment "law school" to discredit you as "smart." That was what was done to me label me "addict" discredit me as "smart" and then lost all confidence in life, confidence meaning "intelligence" the basis for my intelligence is confidence. So when my confidence is hurt, asked to do things in permanent form, such as pose nude, that's to hurt my value to others as respected and when my value to others is not recognized, then I do not feel good, as obese 192lbs., then lost 26 pounds and got down to 166lbs, then just gained weight now 170lbs. Weight matters to me, maybe not to me then at 140lbs, when I left my last relationship for marriage 2012, but eventually upon being rejected after losing 50lbs, from conversation, lost running, it was how I was and how I looked that made others determine I was "so far gone" "beyond repair" "something wrong with me" and because I did not sound smart, or look smart, and because I am someone or something that doesn't represent to others what beauty or intelligence looks like, after having been classified as an "addict" that made me classified among another class of people: rejects, wannabes, delusional, criminal, stupid, and ugly. Ive never felt pretty my whole life, Ive never been the smartest my whole life, I just work hard, Im sorry if my condition, as not being on point enough, or of the caliber sought to represent your ideals ever made you feel shorted in life, as though you did not get what you bargained for, as though Im supposed to awe, or impress, enlighten, or bring good luck to who is around me, as though I don't already do so. The times are different, and when you mislabel someone, that is not something you can return from, a condition a thought of in the negative labeled: addict, or alcoholic, easy, slut, or stupid. That is not a condition you can return from confidence wise, and maybe why Im bipolar now and have been hospitalized 9 times twice suicidal, and now with a new condition since 2017, punching my head. Its obvious that I am not good enough to work in DC now, given my health on day and night meds, and it is obvious that doctors had difficulty caring for me, or empathizing with me, seeing me or treating me as a difficult patient, and not believing in my intelligence, or obstacles faced professionally, and it is clear I am much slower now than anticipated would be, after having accomplished so much in a year. At some point I failed, when schmoozing on messenger, and as a result I look stupid again, not empathized with, and while my effort to inform an individual who harmed me to stop is important, it only makes me look bad in the grand scheme of things, that I am paying attention to who is hurting me, as though I am threatened by this person, after having suffered losses myself, and then have to try to understand the losses suffered by others (40 shot) and Justice Ginsberg passed away, that's not a rhyme with a reason built in, that's me taking responsibility for loving someone or talking to someone who I thought shared a common interest, who treated me poorly because he did not understand my interests, again that's representing his behavior in the positive, and as a result things that mattered to me were harmed, in the process of responding to someone, whos respect, admiration, or love was not as important, as impressing other groups of people, who expected progress, not worse than what I was sued for, nude. With everyone knowing you that can be a blessing or a curse, and at this point that is the last interaction personal I will ever have with a stranger who is not a government official, and hereby wish to speak, bond, or correspond, only with government officials, who understand that gravity of my questions in life, who are understanding of my disabilities, and who understand why it is difficult to return from labels. Whether placed on you under false pretenses, or thought deserved, it's a disability I cannot seem to overcome, the negative interpretation of my life as lived. I rarely went out, and if so with friends. Your lifestyle choices, can change those bad opinions of you, to not being able to comprehend you at all. If you are looking for things in life, you wont get what youre looking for, but you may get something else, like a job online writing, self-respect, smarts, and confidence back, but that doesn't mean that all other systems that were based upon you failing, or becoming something grose from where you started, will be pleased, or equally be doing well, that's the consequence of not improving and giving up in life, its really hard to push past failure, and its really hard to overcome disability and mental illness, I know where I was in life, and I know that I can improve, not all are capable of the same abilities in life to overcome.

Have Some Class ...

It would never be safe to put lives on the line when it comes to image, that would be an irresponsible antee in terms of making any bet in life, when it comes to what people think, that's something you cant bet on or predict, that's just an earned trait, people skills, when the odds are with you in life in terms of acceptances and sounding well to others, that's not class, that's tact, and that's not a vocabulary ability to speak to others in a way, that levitates you or places you among the best, that occurs overtime, not by communications public or private, but by communications on paper officially submitted in conjunction to the opinions already held by them. I am not someone to represent someone poorly, but I am someone who others do not want to be represented by. And just as its not okay to make Hitler, "Odole Rules," Osama Bin Laden, jokes about me sharing my thoughts, or my ability to move forward past trauma, does not give you ammunition if mentioned to say that if stated in reality I would take personal offense to such commentary, as though trying to teach me how to think evil or make evil jokes like a triple axel Barack Obama joke, that's like if he "shot a Father and son responsible for 9/11" overseas and found them, that similarly committing suicide if my Father dies, would be to communicate a similar message of blames, as though assuming that is something evil thought about my family and I. Because if mentioned as affecting thought to literally be something plausibly connected as though in my power to DJ the correct songs prior to 9/11, and that my DJ-ing abilities were responsible for 9/11, I don't think so, but I do take all assumptions into account. Triple axel meaning quadruple homicide, that would be two people dying for a crime, then two other people dying as though being framed for the same crimes, as responsible parties, via DJ-ing rap music, or alluding to Rap Music being the song DJ'd that inspired the taking down of the Towers as though Black People should be threatened that a Black Rapper's song was alluded to in the terrification of NY and our Country as a whole, that any medium we produce could be used for a negative purpose, by another culture who understands what brings us pride, our differences, not our similarities clearly. For anyone new not from 1985, its seems ridiculous, how much we have improved, doesn't seem to see the value in anyone who is not evolved. I choose not to evolve, not to be adept to trends, but have done my best to evolve when it comes to technology building a website of my own without advisement from anyone. As far as Im concerned, my beliefs don't seem to matter in a culture that was so fixated on "predicting" well they were gonna free OJ that was predictable, and she didn't have to go to law school, and its not because she visited that he was freed. To argue that it was my drug or alcohol use that led to my suicide, not what I comprehended and wrote about, and that it was because of my own instability that I committed suicide, not having to do with anyone elses beliefs or non-belief in me, while trying to go to law school. If people respect you they don't think less of you, and if someone does not see you as having "overcome adversity" doesn't understand what I have overcome, and was advised to write about, as having overcome "adversity." I don't have dirty thoughts about others, I don't even look at people, and to be treated as though Im a dirty person, who comes on too strong, is typical of who is thought to be above me, as though I am a lesser caliber of woman to be involved with, not solely because I am older, but because of who my family is, treat me poorly, as though my decision making when it comes to men, is poor [removed -Called the DA today, not a requirement to speak].

At the time this page was made, I refrained from bringing into discussion anything that would make me or others uncomfortable to speak about, and since the turning of events, have decided to share. Whether this empowers or disempowers me that is something I am not sure about, whether its too argumentative or opinionated for anyones tastes to be mentioned, I forget now, what was discussed and why, but at the time of discussion always do my best to be as detailed as possible, sharing.

There was a password to this page, to not make mass produce these opinions or blog posts, nor to be mass produced privately in secret as though the sharing of informations secret is how any bond is made, no of course not. The sharing of informations secret is what is of concern now, whether something known secret, is what hurts someone on the outside, treatment wise, as though withholding opinions to hurt others or themselves, by not disclosing publicly opinions held, on a private page.

Repercussions for Your Actions ...

There will be many repercussions for your actions, that is a distance occurring between you and any number of people who are either listening, or not listening to you speak, reading, or not digesting what you have to say, or looking at you or your writing, and looking for something that remotely indicates guilt, that's is when you are writing, from a high profile case, are you aware that guilt is what is being looked for, and do you transcribe a guilty understanding of events based upon who is watching or do you have a better understanding of the ramifications of correspondence to someone who is a stranger to the case. That is someone getting to know you, then after getting to know you wanting to hear more about cases, controversies, and more detail concerning your life history, that is what is done to someone who opens up in a loving way to someone or in a sexual way, what occurs? When someone feels as though they have been "molested" either by the actions words or thoughts of another toward them, does that change your disposition to behave in a way that is malleable to their tastes, and are you someone who is conservative, or easily opened upon communication, easy to get through to or difficult to get through to, and what makes you feel small. All of these factors are to be determined, based upon my communications and connections judged as the connection causing others to behave that way toward me, as though Im asking for love or in need of love, or difficult to get through to, that it becomes uncomfortable to be around me when not well, some are better opened up, and some feel hurt opened up. I don't think at a later time, feeling good talking about my life past, or sharing recollections or memories, does anyone a service to lighten things up, not especially, after what today symbolizes. Who was in error, thought, and as described whether it was me who generated trust in a way that was inappropriate, or whether I was professional in my discussions about self and others, whether I take the courts seriously, and respond and report to them, and then whether I am taken seriously, or not, treated like those who have been arrested, whether or not their disposition or demeanor was directed toward me or not, behaving in a sexual way, I think at the time feminine content was king, and sexuality was not offensive, but when the times get tough, its no longer appropriate to open up in that way toward others, let alone oneself, for the privileged viewing of another, who just wants something to share or to prove "I got molested" and "she molested me" I was "not interested in her" and then I grew to "love her" and then became "disinterested in her" then she "left me" and then she "got robbed $7000" and "they got caught by the FBI." -Now its become a her situation or her condition is not my fault, although he was making fun of me on and off for 7 months on Facebook with funeral pictures and my body half naked. And told to stop on several occasions and complained about. But he continued to punish me in that way, as though deserved as not being loving enough. If I have bigger problems, and other things to worry about such as my health, then its therefore not my responsibility as pen pal, to respond to all texts and emails, never playing the silent treatment, and be punished as though I am cold or not responsive connected, that is abusing the system of communication given my record, turn me into an offender to your interests to play victim, to my sexuality, as though its about your health, and your wellness, my ability to love myself, and feel good in my own skin, and be proud of myself in public, and having overcome bipolar and delusion voices. I will have voices for the rest of myself, that is my condition its not my phone, I broke 3 droids, and its not my iPhone, turned off, still get voices in the shower. That means that there something so connected to me, that upon watching me, their thoughts have a stronger gravitational pull toward my thinking and decision making, than my own ability to think, comprehend, feel and understand what is going on within, communicating for them not myself. -Thats why I call the LAPD, "if the voices are controlling me" then I go to the hospital, if I am in control of me, and the voices are just bothering me, then I understand whats me whats them.

Dodging Obsessions ...

You are what you fixate on, it doesn't matter what others are thinking of you, whether they know you or not, this is when you have to see the positive. So long as you allow yourself to become fixated on the negative judgments of others toward you whether inflicted by words, or by actions, that is what will become of you, whether you are consciously aware of the purposes for heckling privately or publicly, is what is being tested for whether a series of words can be implanted in your mind, that causes you illness. That's to say that my words online, cause illness to others to be thought about. That is as though words or what is heard read or understood, is the basis for the creation of all other thoughts, that is just the lense which used to read into my work or to look at my face in that way, as a product of voices, when all I hear are voices, my face looks disgusting disoriented and ugly. When I am running and after reading, talking, or singing, I look like myself again. I don't really understand the science to it quite yet, I just know that I am the only one capable of repairing myself and that is why I choose to be alone. Its not as insult to anyone elses condition, to not engage socially, or romantically, its not that I was well and choosing to refrain from social or sexual activities, its just that I valued that moment of wellness, to use that energy for good purpose in life, writing, not for social purposes drinking or being around others. Everyone has a different physiology, and as studied, everyone can appear stupid to anyone who is sizing up the other, that is when you look at someone, including yourself, and your thoughts move from the forefront of your mind to the back of your mind, and make focus on oneself or another, what do you see, someone who is human, or recognizable as human, or someone who does not make sense to you. That is called having a judgment of someone, when you see nothing in them, looking at them, and that disinterest, is seeing someone, and not looking into them, or reading them, that's listening. How long does it take to step out of your shell, a long time, especially if you feel introverted, that's not being shy, that's just not feeling strong about your own identity, and not being comfortable around others. This started sometime in college, living in the engineering quad, no one talked to me, my roommate was very positive, she attended an all girls school in Arizona, she was pregnant, at the time, and had an abortion, I think, or some kind of procedure, in which she was questioning her pregnancy not sure whether I forget. That was when I started eating every meal alone, that was for 3 years until the end of my Junior year made friends with a group of girls, prior to which my only friends were neighbors for 3 years, I was the girl who lived alone and studied for 5 hours everyday, kept to myself, and they would always greet me excited to see me, and talk to me, and sometimes, we would do activities together like wakeboard. A misunderstanding, then is looking at you hurts their head, thinking about you hurts their head, and reading from you, hurts them, that's hearing from you and not liking you, and then when their head hurts thinking its because of something you have said that is causing their misunderstanding in your head about you. Then there is pain, that is a withdrawal from a feeling of wellness to illness, and so forth, then there is understanding and compassion and heart, when something that is said makes sense. People will always have their reservations about you, thinking that they can control your thoughts by saying things to you, to gear or affect the arrival of what you have to say to encompass that concern or that judgment of you, or be pulled from the whole, a bigger picture of what is being said or that last stroke of the paint brush across the top of what you are saying, as having to do with something, some word inlaid in you, to see if everything adds up to that something, or whether you are thinking about them as you are writing something, in avoidance of them or their thoughts or actions toward you, that's allowing someone to get close to you, and upon being close to you, get through to you, and upon getting through to you change you, and upon changing you control you, I swear we are not that weak. -This is when a recollection of something previously said, amounts to a name and upon recognizing that trigger, a feeling of pain to the head, and then heat to the heart and then a head tightness, of no thoughts, that is something being said helpful but doesnt help one continue on thinking, and if to continue on thinking causes anger, thats not feeling good and this is already the end of this post, which was my specialty once stated "saying things in a nuanced way." And generally a good day, is everything ending, with a peaceful quiet, never not enough leave others in a position of pain, that is not feeling like anything has been said of value, which is now.

Beginning to Understand ...

Feeling the impact. The gift of being a good problem solver remains in your ability to stay calm. The moment you allow an effect to take place, is the moment you have lost momentum, that is your forward thinking ability to separate yourself from what it is you are feeling and think correctly in terms of whats important, and whats not. That time clicker, that's pushing you, is falling behind in your sense of reasoning, lifes not a race remember that much, its about what you can do that differentiates you from someone successful, versus someone who is found to be reacting for personal reasons, without the best interests of everyones sense of peace as a whole. Remember that, "Positive as well as negative moods and emotions can facilitate as well as inhibit problem solving, depending on the nature of the task." [1] What spurs creativity? In not knowing what to do, we are often times forced to think, literally thinking yourself out of a problem, whether or not you put yourself in that position, to think "outside the box" or the place you have been positioned in feeling wise, alone. What is creativity? Creativity is defined as "the production of effective novelty." The word production implies that some act or action is involved. Thus within the field of cognition, the act of creation." [2] To me creativity means recognizing problems without causing problems, and in order to be in any solution, there needs to be a good feeling about what youre doing, as youre doing it, that is without fear of repercussions, and without discomfort, being sure of yourself, and does not require you to be sure of others for that matter. Sometimes in working toward goals we "encounter some barriers." [3] This may occur when what we are feeling, cannot be overcome by what we are doing in life. Does that mean that what we are doing in life, is contributing to the feeling of not being sure of ourselves, or are there other intervening factors pressuring us to think that what we are doing is wrong, or that what we were doing then was wrong, to ourselves or others. If you don't know what the problem is, chances are you will be viewed as the problem, someone who does not recognize that what they are doing is wrong, no one will tell you therefore what it is that is wrong about you, that is something you have to figure out for yourself. What is it about you, that people want nothing to do with, and why has it been determined that you are a source of problems to others, is that their understanding of you, or is that thinking that you have misunderstandings about others, and therefore consider you the problem to the equation of who is right or who is wrong based upon how you are feeling, what you are thinking about, and based upon how others feel, and how you respond to others, is the basis for that determination, do you contribute to the wellness of others, or do you disturb or attack the wellness of others. That is how someone is determined to be a threat, based upon what they look like or feel like, sucks the energy out of a room, or the wellness from others, or benefits the room, and the wellness of others being in it, that's the difference between someone who is strong versus someone who is impressed upon changed. How easily affected are you by others, and depending on how sensitive you are, determined to either be the cause of that energy toward you, or because of you or what you have said, treated that way based upon what you look or sound like the problem. If others view you as small, and heckle you, its to see whether you shout back, behave in a crazy way, or become an ugly person, that's treating you as an offender someone who on the inside is ugly, and seeking to bring out any ugliness within you, to be seen on the outside of your body behavior and face wise. Note that "emotions do not just effect organizations but contribute to their structure." [4] Just like feelings give us a sense of whats to come, positive or negative, that is how people are treated too, based upon feelings, and if your feelings do not match the feelings of a room, don't expect to not be recognized or looked at as the odd person out that is you carry something, noticeable to others, a recognizable energy, which in general is determined to be bad, that is why everyone else seems obnoxious to you, or not bolded to you, upon being in a room of people, who see you standing out, as a position of guilt, not wellness.

What Speaks to You ...

Remember the days when we were naturally drawn to things that used to make us feel good, whatever happened to that feeling, admiring the wellness in others, or seeing the beauty in good people. When that quality is lost, ask yourself, what is causing you to lose faith, and what is going on in your life, or in the lives of those you see on TV that is causing you to re-prioritize the level of importance you place on connecting what youre doing in life to what your seeing in life. What controls what? Have you ever asked yourself that. There will be moments in time when things may feel whimsical, living in the humor of oddities, or discomforts upon knowing something about someone they do not know you know about them. Then there is the sharing of our lives with others, always holding high expectations of ourselves, even if we are met with criticism or low expectations for the quality of our work or words. Not all will be impressed, especially anyone vain enough to think that their beauty was made on their own without credit to their surroundings, the people in their life, or those that love them, contributing factors. What is love? Recognition of your gifts, and upon recognizing your gifts, shining, and upon shining respected, what is that? Its called making a good impression when others are nice to you, its partly to do with how you carry yourself, and by what experiences in life you decide to represent yourself by. Those who do not wish to see you as important, will always put you down in life, that's whether you are confident and doing well, aloof and focused always try to get through to you, not bask in any glow of admiration for you being on point, usually someone who sees something to do with you, not allowing you to arrive at any better points of wellness in life, or be met with pleasant opportunities for further acceptances in life. That's upon viewing your life, choosing to take from you, that is a well perspective inherited upon meeting you, then cloud you as though they feel they were clouded as not being raised apart of those who are well to do or connected to people of importance, that's not jealousy. That's pride in their lives, and seeing based on where you are, and what you have in life, as given not earned, gifted not learned, and takeable, not irreplaceable, to me I was raised to believe that "anything that can be replaced by money is not a problem." So where does that put me in terms of my views of health? I think that if I can fix my condition, than anyone who tries to change my condition, no matter how hard they try to leave their mark, or impress upon themselves their decided exposures to me, I will always be myself. As a woman you think about these things, who tries to hold your heart, who tries to change you, who tries to manipulate your emotions, who tries to control you, who wants your love, and who punishes you if you decide to focus on your own health, we are but girlfriends, we are not your doctors, here to fix those who seek to be loved, to be nurtured, to be made confident, to be believed in, and to be set free from harm, we are not your bodyguards in life, we are not your saviors, we are not your forgivers, we are not even your best friend to be put down, as though we bear similar egos traits and confidences the same sex. -Meaning, maybe amongst guys you put eachother down to test one anothers spirits in life and its funny, but women are not built the same in life, are sensitive, require uplifting not put downs in order to bloom.

When No One Understands ...

When everyone for some reason asserts their superiority toward you, whether that tailgating you parking next to your car at stoplight, that's not leaving you alone when you deserve to be left alone, and if that's to insult you, move you around, or manipulate your condition, then that's what is done, I pull over, I can do better. Im not out in the world to socialize, be met, gain new connections in life, or please anyone unimpressed by me or who thinks low of me, I can do better. There are certain moments when you want to be left alone, and that involves my present, past and future. For whatever its worth, now someone wants to share their story with me, I only knew for 7 months, as though that time period wasn't also important to me, treating me like he owns my content or identity or wellness. That was wellness earned after 8 years of struggling to adjust to the conditions of being known and being treated as stupid, everyone with an "eh" whatever attitude toward me in life, as though I care or have interest in anyone elses wellness or attitude toward me in life, ride your high horses and do whatever it is you need to do to tell your story, even if its to make fun of me or to allude to a connection to me, as though Im deserving of negative attentions in life, or a source of shame or embarrassment to my country to anyone I have met or interacted with in life, if you didn't want to meet me, then, if it took awhile for me to warm up to people, its because I am shy, and now my energy is nothing but comforting and everything made to feel uncomfortable, unhappy, and all interactions private short lived and fake. That's what feeling stupid feels like, its an energy of not wanting to be around people in life, that's not feeling good, and especially not feeling good around others, that's nothing specifically directed toward any peoples or cultures its COVID, nows a time to keep your distance and be alone, and for me a chance to work on myself, as I have been alone at home in my room for 4 years anyways trying to work on managing my symptoms of bipolar, and be compliant with whatever "settlement" and probation set was done by the DA, as told to me by my Attorney. When I decided to write again that was after working on myself, so that my content did not appear stupid, out there, in poor taste, cocky, or insulting to anyone who thinks they have a better understanding of the world or their specialties in life, its not my responsibility to make fun of a game in existence, a series of jokes on a roll, or types of understandings that best suit their interests to see me as beneath them or less than, and depending on what schools you support or have been associated care. I am in a position in life where I don't want to be close to anyone, and after years of being alone, opened up by video to someone in private, who then treated me as though that wasn't an earned or improved condition or a special experience, and made fun of me at the end like Im some Kim wannabe as though I was not offended that that tape was made of her, considering her potential and stature, scolded whoever did that online, and Mayweather went to a springs overseas and took a picture where one of my quotes was made from my original blog they were friends, I found out that tape was mad sometime 2012 I think living at my moms house. People feel so entitled to thinking that you want to be them, or be close to them, or want to be included, or don't appreciate when people are nice to you, that they feel personally offended when you seem disinterested in talking to others, Im shy, and if I try to hard Im quickly made fun of, that's how they treat someone who is not lit, lights on, well if Im prescribed Provigil then it was because I have wakefulness problems, sleepy, I have been taking naps all through law school, some people are just not awake enough to live life, and that terrain demanded of those who see themselves as better than, that everyone else is floating under, does not mean that what Im floating under is stupid or not smart, or that Ive lived a dirty life or do others dirty in life that's not how I treat others and that not how I should be treated as replaceable, I don't make people feel small, I don't belittle women or make them feel not good enough, and I don't emasculate men, or make others feel uncomfortable, Depending upon how well you look in this country you are judged as floating in a quality of wellness you don't deserve as though you have not struggled experienced pain, or have ever been mentally challenged in life, I have.

Being Special ...

What you later become known for, is measured by the quality of your interactions with others. Its upon rejection, or fighting, that you are measured by weakness instead, whether you are in control of yourself, your body, or your mood, or whether youre so broken down on the inside intimidated that you have the capacity to be controlled by others, sure you can think big, but that doesn't mean that you wont be treated as small, or picked on for your disabilities in life, affected, or put under unwanted pressures in life made to feel frozen or be affected as though anyone is toying with you emotions, body, or face, simply because its easy to get to you or get under your skin. That's life, it's a tough world, and that's reality, if you are known to society, as you make the transition from being not known or private to becoming known or recognized you may or may not stand out to others in a good way, impress upon being recognized by others in public, not all are paparazzi solid or beautiful, that's the difference between a writer and a model. A model enjoys attention, and does not fear others, and when called upon to be in a spotlight displays a well picture or a well face, if on the other hand as a writer one is tired or not in the mood to be seen, or cannot look at themselves, unhappy with themselves then they will not light up for others that's the difference between someone who is of value look wise, versus someone who is not for modeling, appears obnoxious in wellness, and turned off by in sickness. How far can you get career wise, based upon your wellness, so long as you are well the skies the limit, but if you are someone who is easily changed, and not recognized as gifted, impressed upon too easily, or too easily made tired, and if you lose your head upon confusion, or fun, or become too serious introspective, then that space is not respected, you are more likely to be “perturbed” or “disturbed” and that’s to wake you up from whatever it is you are focusing on, any rapid eye movement, or drop of the eyes, or failure to make eye contact, is deemed to be a weird trait, someone who glances looks at others, or is sizing others up, no one wants to be looked at by anyone who they think is weird, its as though their wellness, or their feeling of normal is disturbed by someone who is looking at them they think is for wellness, of for self-identification purposes, recognize how to be, as though one is not well within on their own, but needs to be taught how to be likeable. Once there is a rejectable quality about you, that is what others use to determine to reject you or ignore you, treat you as though you look weird, or look sickly, or have bipolar loss of concentration, because of your sex life, or because of what you have to say, is inappropriate or not funny, and doesn’t make sense in time, reasoning, tangent, or communicates an unwanted message which is attention to something that brings up a different unwanted set of thoughts about you or others, and that is how you become rejected as writer, a poor representation of who you are, where you come from, and informations made known about you shared, that affects your psyche, as an unwanted communication to, or suggestive of sexual pleasure within communications wanted, that’s when someone does not want to be around someone who looks at them, and knowing their sexuality, does not wish to be thought of, as though one who is in themselves is thinking about another person while concentrating on their own wellness and bodily movements in life, anyone who does sports knows that studying and playing sports is hard, Im either running, or working more, and running less, if I have a lot to get done, means I can best concentrate on one thing at a time and by concentrating on one thing at a time, able to do things well one at a time. If youre not judgmental you will not be able to tell the difference between someone who is well or not well, that is you accept everyone as well and adjust to them accordingly that’s being nice. No one can look at you and become you, you are either well and make people feel well around you, or you become sick, and when you become sick even looking at yourself doesn’t make you feel good or give you ability to be as well as you were then, that’s more than just the aging process, its acceptance of a good work product, and not being too hard on yourself to recreate the same image more than once, if youre having that difficulty in life, that’s because you were treated as though you don’t understand the beauty of the human body and its capacity to rebuild itself, as though I wasn’t a runner at the time I was made to feel bad about myself or rejected, or not paid attention to, if they think you are used up, or if something happens to you, that is being done by someone who devalues you, means you are not street enough to be out by yourself with an attachment feeling safe, and as a weaker set heart given to another, see how you are treated as an airhead when you are nice and not looking for trouble, is how you get controlled and made to look stupid with love, as soon as you are loved, is as soon as it is lost, once that is seen by another wellness.

All Lives are Beautiful ...

All lives are beautiful, there is no one way to live life, think, feel, behave or sound, and that’s the beauty of life, that people from all different backgrounds can come together and mutually observe their own humanity, when one another can recognize eachothers presence, and without judgment live life. That’s in an ideal society, not rattled with racism, and concerns over image, well being, health, intelligence, and superiority. What is wellness, is it something gifted, is it something imitated, surely not, if we are to value ourselves as human and capable. Its not by the attentions we seek, that let us know when we are well, but its upon recognizing ones own condition, and accepting ones own condition as human, is what speaks volumes of anyone, no matter what their condition may be. We all wish to have a shared sense of peace upon knowing one another, and that does not always occur, not to sound speechy, but sometimes in the aftermath of hate and disgust there is quiet, that’s recognizing your own sense of peace, and whether you so choose to bother test or look into the peace of others that’s your choice of exposure. You don’t really need to compare yourself or observe wellness, to achieve wellness, you do however need to stay well on your own, no one can live the days for you, the hours of your life, or even minutes, and it can be painful when you are in moments of sickness, and not sure when you will retuning back to wellness, or when you will be seen in a positive light, or just plain viewed as human. Being human does not mean you are immune from controversy, as unfair as it may seem, that someone famous knows me, there is nothing I can do, when I am discredited as though living was simply following in footsteps prearranged, to come out of messes in life, or challenges not difficult to comprehend, when no one is encouraging you in life, and when you do not talk about what you know in life, and if you feel like something should be done, that is a painful step forward you take on your own, and often times with convincing others, that you need to do something, in order to make things right. That doesn’t mean that the solution at that moment in time, can provide solution to now, or is always the solution when it comes to facing questions in life, some of the biggest questions in life have no prepared answers to meaning there is not cookie cutter established set of responses for responding to some pressures or questionings in life, no one can teach or prepare you for being defamed, insulted in public, or fought with, every fight is a challenge, especially with individuals, who may have known you who no longer want anything to do with you, that is someone who feels as though they have been wronged by you, and its in the support of their surroundings that they feel loved absent minded you, that’s upon separating from you moving on in life no matter what your life looks like, no matter what youre doing in life, and no matter what you are saying online, able to enjoy their sense of peace no longer being in your life, and no longer feeling like they have to help you, represent you, talk through to you, or help you.

Remember the Good ...

So much of life requires us to remember the good. Looking back, as improved, and appreciating had you not tried, or sought help, would not be where you are today, speaking in public, or doing well in life. When you put your heart into it, any number of things can go well for you in life, if you are so dedicated to self-improvement, focused not on errors alone, but what has been done right, accept that much about life. You cant always fix the past, by trying to re-order events as you comprehend them to have taken place, that's meddling with history, there is a such thing as leaving things alone. The more you harp on subjects, and the more blames you accept, youre only casting yourself away in life. So be at peace knowing that what has been done right, is the only well input needed in order for one to move forward, and realize their fullest potential in life. We are all given gifts in life, the gift of knowing, the gift of learning, the gift of exposure, the gift of connection, the gift of insight, and the gift of foresight usually occurring among the last of our gifts to evolve, our ability to anticipate, prepare, and hold steady and weather any storms in life, that's with experience and know how, and that stability is what translates to all other things in life, amounting to good things to come. Stay true to yourself, and it doesn't matter whos watching, or earns the last laugh. Never think in terms of how things look, and if you have ever been rudely awoken to things you later comprehend that disturb you, learn to let things go. We may all at times wish we could be the same person we were then, or before trauma, or unusual hardship in life. Im telling you the more you focus on positives, and the less leeway you give to negative inputs, the stronger hold that positivity has over concepts, drowning away all doubts, including self-doubt. Have the courage to represent yourself, from where you stand, at any moment in your life, and learn to be proud of yourself, no matter how wrecked or ravaged your life may seem, never to an onlooker are things as hazy as they feel on the inside, youre not as lost as you may feel or seem, and maybe not even that far from return, as you make things out to be. We don't all have cornerstones, precursors, or given directions in life as to how to live our lives, and do away with whats causing us displeasure, it takes a moment to process and years to decompress at times, and maybe even months to get things out of your system, that's just life, inheriting things we don't want sometimes, whether that's power, fame, attention, or humor, you just have to learn how to deal with those discomforts in life no matter whos dominating or feels empowered in life by your story, we cant all be leaders and influencers at once.

Sources of Stability ...

A previous disappointment, will never be a source of stability to you lets just agree to disagree that so long as I look weird, am weird, lose beauty, get offended, threatened, or look or am made to appear jealous, then that means that another "has something" I do not, meaning in possession, a talent, or set of friends, or respect from someone I admire, or trust, that doesn't really interfere with my respect for someone, or change how I represent those interests, but yes, if my own interests are not strong, then I think that is what is sought to be proven, whether my blog causes violence, I can only say that so long as that is thought that is what you will think and there is nothing I can do to change someones opinion of me as uneducated, not smart, well minded, or bearing some talent, worth earning a wage in life. Its really not a big deal, we all have dreams, not everything that seems intense, is purposeful, such as writing, or communicating, some people just don't know when to stop, and I think people are reading into things that I say, as though, I thought then, as myself as big, or as communicating to others, a showboat, or performer, I was confident, I didn't know many people, and respect is something that people talk about, not a conversation I am privied to. I had tons of friends in Colorado, just a little out of place in Los Angeles that's okay, it's a different setting, tone, and breed of people, in sync or with respect for one another, tip: be sensitive, either having gone through mental health issues. As you get older you think more about how you are made to feel by others, and even think can what someone is thinking change me, and how do I know whether one has the power to read me. Its just based on how focused you are, whether you recognize when you are smart, sound stupid, or not making a good impression. I think general disappointment is the goal, failure to meet the mark in terms of acceptances, discomfort. Especially if one applied for a writing award or requested for professional review today, already slow. You do your best when you can and shine, and when things are not going well, its best to share only things that will help not call attentions to yourself, if it was your mismanagement of private relationships that caused others to think you were stupid or not smart intellectually -hardworking. -And Im sorry I mentioned who I dated, Im a much different person now, more paranoid, after having been hospitalized 9 times, to myself home, bipolar. Meaning has to think how one is put together, and by careful assembly of thoughts think properly.

Hearing Voices (Untreatable) ...

There is not cure for voices, not 63k following, and not staying separate from all, that's something connected to you knowing you and like a telephone talking to you within you, without you being able to prove to anyone from where the voice is coming from, that's how challenging it is for me, to be alone, without being read connected to in life, that's how little privacy I have as though my mind is transparent, as though my life is being looked into for negatives, so that is why every experience is shared as it arrives, that's not sued by anyone, some things are first shared online, not in my phone, I do not share anything privately in my phone anymore, because I do not want to have any unwanted feelings toward me as though information is being shared to self as overlooked not shared in public, as though what I am going through needs to be stated in detail, in order to understand or trust from where I am coming from that's treating me as though I have something inside me not being stated to protect self while subjecting others to harm, as though my story as shared is to stop harms, or to articulate how harms have occurred toward me, in order to not subject anyone else on their own to harms, upon trusting anyone new, who does not understand their disposition that is not my fault, whatever happened to me, I am always doing my best, but if you are being judged by someone who does not want to do you, then that is how you are treated in life, based upon whether someone is sexually interested in you punished, I don't come on to anyone, I get picked in life, and I don't dress up sexy in order to be picked, and I do not show off think I am better than anyone, that is not how I light up by standing out in numbers compared to others, that's me at my best whether you like it or not, see me get well, it just so happens that after four years of rest at home in my room, I am starting to get a positive momentum from writing everyday and just lost 5 pounds sprinting following the funeral of a beloved Justice. That was me not complaining about things personal make public, and get back to myself, that's pushing through depression, that's because as weak or complaining trying to report, and nothing getting done, meant that I did not have an emergency worth addressing and once you begin a relationship you cannot complain of treatment or rejections that seems to be allowable, and if you are to be loved, if someone does not love you anymore or thinks less of you is allowed to broadcast that to the world, make you look bad, that is how I am treated, with me until loved, and then stronger without me, doesn't need me, I do not put others down, once you become disoriented or lose focus, then that is how you are treated by others, how whoever rejected you sees you, allowing others to relate to them, and not relate to you, and at the same time, send voices until you hit your head, not allowing you to be alone in peace, and it doesn't matter how hard you work, no one cares about your condition, wellness, or voices, will not be happy for you or proud of you, just waiting to see "who your next connection is" as though when no one is bothering me, will meet someone new as though I victimize others, I don't = #selfharm. (This is an example of choice, reaching a moment of peace writing, then punching my head "#selfharm" choosing to leave you in peace, and cause myself pain, so that I do not have to be apart of your peace, and stay separate).

Condition of Hesitation ...

Many things can cause you to hesitate in life, not feeling well, not feeling up for it, not into it, not feeling drawn, hearts not into it, feeling insulted whether specifically or now figuratively as interpreted by others, if its not in your control don't worry about it, and don't allow others to control you or try to influence you by hurting you to see what you come back as and then then try to take credit for the changes you endure if in the positive say that they were apart of that or because of them had it not been for them you wouldn't be where you are today, credited. As far as Im concerned, there are two ways of looking at my success so far online, a valid effort at combatting hate, discrimination, violence, racism, and segregation, or being online has done a disservice as though Im responsible for someone who upon knowing me and seeing a few popular representations sees me as being given a mold of jokes to work with as though not affected on land by people. That's not being apart of, which mostly has to do with how you are feeling, no one can fix you, others can help talk you through emotions, but if you are not well it is always your job to get well, you cannot hook up with someone well to feel well, that's not what I meant, benefited from the wellness of others, not the creator of my own wellness. You cannot force people to love you, like you, respect you, not even if you are a website, if someone rejects you and does not think you are special, does not value you, and does not think you are of positive influence or connection in life, seeks to treat you as a “problem” or bearing problems others “do not want to deal with” “not attractive “into self” “confident” “not special” “doesn’t feel sorry for” “no empathy” that’s seeing someone and not recognizing that they have worked hard based upon where they are without a JD “as though not finishing a JD speaks for the subject of gun violence as volunteered for” that was a later reaction, 2015, upon the passing of the Founders to Brady Campaign decided to get involved, and get some community support to help resolve the pandemic, that is non-action, or not affected by. That’s a blessing whenever something happens that doesn’t shake your core, or ignite a set of reactions that cause you to attack people as though they are responsible for curing you of your social ills, misunderstandings, or unhappiness in life, it’s a difficult subject therefore leadership when it comes to non-violence, and Im not saying that because of who I am I have 63k monthly viewers, and that’s not to be compared to my life in reality without friends living close by, there is a such thing as recuperating after trauma, hardship, or failure, then going back out into the world and being social getting jobs, that doesn’t mean that I understand how to keep my light, and that’s not because I think socialization dims my light, that’s not what Im saying that I am affected by others wellness or demeanor as though my disposition in life is an ideal disposition to have in life, where I am now in life, which is not a choice. Its not an easy subject wellness, and others will be sure to be insulted if they think their condition is being described as being seen as being at fault for your condition now, not well, or easily affected changed by others, that’s the consequence of not being trusted, and viewed as deplorable by something or someone who sees themselves as above you in life, and doesn’t wish to be associated to you, as though connections pass guilt, as though my connection to Sydney Simpson created a condition of confidence in me, which led to good grades, and athleticism, or popularity or wellness, that’s not understanding the value of hard work and why its important to be smart, not just go by what other people have to say or by what other people are feeling, and that’s a gift the gift of remaining at peace and being able to speak well and be articulate no matter what conditions you are under figure out what the problem is, be sensitive to the needs of others in upset, or disagreement, and not be blamed for a shooting in which he blamed a girl for the reasons why he shot the entire school, that’s saying that he was defending himself as though OJ defending himself in that way alleged to have been responsible for his wifes death, that’s saying that me supporting Brady Campaign, shined light upon another case OJ if the color chosen was Orange, and then blame me for the color chosen being Orange, to say that his life should not have been highlighted by an association to him, volunteering for an organization trying to prevent gun violence. That’s not seeing me as good enough, not seeing me as smart enough, or saying because Im Jewish, was why a Temple was shot by someone, because someone Jewish is attached to an anti-gun violence Campaign, that’s blaming my identity treating me as though I do not represent myself or others properly, and if photo nude, do not deserve respect seen as used up devalued, or asking for it. Then that is putting me in Womens shoes, whether we are to be defined by the Men who do us, who think they are responsible for bringing out the beauty in a Woman by making her feel good, or stop taking credit for the wellness and beauty in others, and respect peoples right to privacy, that is what they do in their alone time to stay well, not be judged as being dirty, or unattractive simply because one does not want to bed them or see them as sexable, judge them as not being smart, if not desired or seen as bearing traits of someone of value, and if someone looks of value, not judge them as being into themselves or rich, and treat them as though they are hard to look at, because you do not think they deserve respect or attention to see what they look like without love, or upon rejection, judge them as abandoned. That is an unwanted study of my face and my body, making fun of my jobs, and treating me as the client who I provided support to, to say that I am not intelligent enough to recognize myself as different as though I am influenced by others including clients, and treat me as though I am not a combination of traits that I have achieved in life via hardwork not by influence of others in a room, competitive, or learned from. You can make a lot of right decisions in life, but once you are influenced by others, easily affected by others, then you are forced to assume the interests of others that are not of your own making, and that is why people are punished, light dimmed and heart broken, that’s to put their light out so that others can shine and feel above and not attached to a human body of lesser strength and confidence, that is the purpose of the Justice System, to innately not empathize, to see as small, and to treat as stupid, and that’s what gives those who are not punished confidence in their wellness, that they can do things in life, and test their own limits in life, and get tired, and not be viewed as guilty, that’s the power in the publics perception, and sense of togetherness, that in their own wellness, cannot relate to someone with mental health issues, or lacks confidence, doesn’t light up, dims, or whos body is not strong enough to manage criticisms and whos heart breaks upon being attacked someone being mad at them, or hearing an auditory delusion a voice, saying degrading comments about my sexuality and body. Seeing my body is treated as undeserved, thinking I have boobs, because I am friends with women, who were beautiful then say that I am not beautiful, and without women in my life, look manly, to say that I was not born with beauty, and that my beauty was acquired from growing up around wealthy students. That's not true, depending on how well you take care of yourself, you will look, it's not by birth: wellness.

Most Are Not Immune ...

9/30/2020

Jealously: It's not a trait I was born with, and not sure where it comes from in others, but it must be seeing something and not liking something well or not, with the false impression of wanting to be something that you're not, that is seeing something and not respecting what you see or recognizing it as a well impression, and instead seeing something and thinking that if it were you would be different. That's not respecting the length of time to produce or become something worth looking at, and putting down something you do not think deserves to be where they are, looked upon for advice, or listened to kindly. That is someone who while looking at you or reading you does not feel good, does not match in terms of words or reactions, or reads and thinks that what you have to say is easy to produce or based upon something existing, that's the difference between acknowledging a thought as original or judging someone as imitation of a concept already presented, or something commonly thought known, not respect someone for what they have to say, as though speaking is a waste of time compared to what is common knowledge or already accepted, some are insensitive to others, do not see the value in others see themselves as smart and see others as stupid condescending, and then there is relating that is not intimidating and acceptable to most, which is what I am, not jealous, enjoy being myself love my mind, and my abilities in life, whether I became bipolar or suffer from imagined discrimination that is voices, whether those negative voices are being directed toward me or not it still hurts to hear negativity. Some are immune to negativity that is talking about others or speaking badly of others is second nature to them, for me it hurts my heart, and not a type of activity I engage in. I understand that being online is a choice, and to expect to be talked about and do not recognize being talked about as jealousy or hate, that is where unnecessary defensiveness takes place, that's someone knowing you who you don't know, feels bad about themselves because they know you and you don't know them and you don't notice them. That's being known, it's not an interaction that lights up a room if you know someone and they don't know that you know them, it usually causes a light to go out in one or the other as an imagined connection takes place, that's you standing out to someone, and because you stand out they dim, that's not recognizing oneself as recognizable, and that's where jealousy takes place, who can be identified as smart or intelligible, and who is identified as stupid, usually demarcates who is well and lit and who is dim in a room, so when I walk into a room, they light up, but I do not, that is the consequence of not being respected and feeling energized by the fact that this person i.e. me does not know that they are widely known, and treating them as though they should know that they are widely known. Widely known does not occur until you have done something unique and been credited for a skill or a trait that stands out from the rest, for me that's writing, and it doesn't come easy to most. It's a learned trait, blogging, that occurs over time, comfort speaking in public and making sense to others, that's feeling comfortable with yourself and in your surroundings make sense to others, it's not a high pressure zone, not unless you have been heckled to hear what you have to say in the negative as produced by your changed tone, or feeling on the inside once your feelings are hurt, then a different voice is heard. Within I am very talented athletic, an academician, works hard, doesn't go out only 2006, and afterward only once a year with friends, until done, then I stopped going out 2010. That's in your younger years making choices that's not strategy for lighting up or being original, that was how I got good grades, and ultimately get picked in life, based upon my abilities, ability to work hard, and be loved for it too.

What Does Being in Love Mean? ...

Everyone has automatic skills in life, something you're trained in, something innate, or something from the heart. Love is one of those automatic skills that comes from the heart, something you do willingly, without end, that's not addiction, that's working until someone else feels loved, that's is appreciated, valued, recognized, and completed. It's amazing how capable we are of treating others with kindness when well, but if we become sick, addicted, or drink, how trapped in our own worlds we become, as though nothing in reality exists other than what's in our minds about life, without regard for the feelings of others in that same space of time, remember not all social/medical/interpersonal ills are shared, and most of those problems only exist in your head until stated out loud. And this is why love is so important, think how important is it for you to share something personally bothering you with someone who brings you peace, how willing are you to sacrifice that rapport of peace and love, in exchange for expressing something within that brings you discomfort, think before you speak, will something shared in the manner in which it is shared bring about a similar feeling in another, if so, is that feeling positive, or is that feeling negative, and if negative how have you been reacting in response to those feelings, not well, then maybe it is something to be discussed under professional advisement who can redirect your thoughts which are derivatives created based upon feelings you presently have, how do you think someone who loves you will feel if you are not feeling well and talking to them, not well either, one because they cannot help you, two because they cannot fix you, and three because the power of their love cannot rid your mind of the feelings you are presently having toward yourself not feeling well. That is the one weakness to love, no matter how powerfully drawn to one another we are, it cannot cure sickness, not unless we allow our thoughts and our actions to be redirected by the ones who love us, toward better conclusions and thinking in life, and that is how love protects us from harm, that's not shelter, that's your mind worrying about who loves you, instead of worrying about who doesn't, and that's how you don't give your power away to people places or things, that bring you unhappiness, which is a manifestation of how one feels about themselves unhappy, not proud, not found, at ease.

Meeting in peace (2013), then after it was known that we met, how I was treated afterward not well. And as a result, other issues came to mind, and were trust on my plate to discern, illnesses about gun violence and causes for gun violence, and treating me as responsible for curing the social ills related to non-action, or fear with regards to the pandemic, did my best to write.

"Superpredator" - Extracting the Devil ...

What can you do to extract the devil from your life, and not focus on the negative, some battles are not worth fighting such as the conditions around you, empower others to create conditions to control any number of people, that includes me, speaking, although I have 61k monthly viewers that doesn't mean we are attached making promises in life and letting others down, its awareness, we are human, we are fragile, we get burnt out, and we don't have the time and energy to fight with anyone who cannot achieve peace first within themselves and blames others for their conditions, that's not the solution. Taking accountability or responsibility for your own health is not just for addicts or alcoholics, you don't have to destroy your life and drink and have casual sex, just to show up and say hey I F-ked up my life, and this is how I F-ked up my life and why I lost everything, except most are not acknowledged at their lowest and grossest moments in life unrecognizable as coming from wellness, looked at with the beauty in the heart and encouraged to "speak with you head up." That's being shy, listen life is short, the longer you wait to get strong again, the more pain you will endure for having waited too long and not taken on the challenge or adversity faced along, that's coming out of hardship that's F-king up in life and then improving your life so that you can live life "live long" dont be careless and be appreciative of the life you have had and dont waste an entire lifes work on one disagreement or foul opinion of you, that hurts everyone, when you allow a failed image to the masses toderrail all your progress in life, as though you deserve to suffer for others opinions held of you not knowing you well enough to set limits when it comes to attacking your good character. "Teaching people to hate our Country" listen we get the World jokes, superleaders who got put in holes, shot thrown in Oceans, and jailed a religion to spread whatever he felt was smart at the time, listen if you destroy everything, that is for who to thrive? That's a bad example of conquering any opposition in life, to destroy people, or even worse end lives, I don't care if you're a drug addict have faith I don't care if youre an alcoholic have faith I don't care if you lie are a $hitty person get tested, I don't care if you have no friends, make friends. The minute you complain is the minute you are required to pick up a mirror and put yourself in everyone elses shoes who have lives and do not have the time to fix your mini problems which are interfering with your ability to influence or stop bigger problems, if you get voices hit your head, don't talk to them, exactly. And if others feel like its too dangerous to support an anti-violence organization then go to the baby shower, I went to the baby shower, and was given all the chocolates on display, that's my best friend I was the only friend at her baby shower, it was just her Moms friends. How would you feel if they were forced to go through what your going through, I would be in so much pain, and do my best to make sure they don't get hurt, that's how to be a caretaker in life, not someone who gets lost and creates burdens and problems for others, if luck is not on your side, the best way to respond is IN THE POSITIVE RISE ABOVE! -Listening to the debate in the background, I feel bad, lets combine problems send energy my way, and do not absorb the illness and then become less motivated and clear speaking please.

Socially Cued Out (humor) ...

Allow people to move forward, note that how you work is not indicative of how any games work in life, and if one is not feeling well, no game is to blame, for any inputs, whether or not you think things are about you, its by what you speak to, you give power to in life. If the opinions of others is something you worry about, then it is for sure not by my opinions that others feel better about themselves, example of awkward conversations to have. (Movie: Billy Madison). I don't think its possible for anyone to mold you into an ideal in life, to fit with all the jokes, but if you are so disciplined, to inquire and look into things, then these are things that may pop out to you "Movie: Black Swan" and Movie: Billy Madison, and "nudey magazine day" in which he sees in delusion a "penguin" among other things in his driveway. I think the Swan imagery is in reference to battling something capable of taking your place in life, meaning someone you don't have an issue with who has an issue with you, from the 5 minutes of the movie I saw, and stopped watching when she started cutting herself. When I mentioned previously to walk through movies, that was in reference to the Movie: One for the Book I saw once on TV, in which President Reagan poured a glass of milk, to me that symbolized something beautiful whether it was in reference to something that has not happened yet (1947) [1] now searching Google when was MLK's "Dream" Speech? (1963) [2]. Content organized in timing with as found deductions in real time, shout out to Emeril (Google Search: "known for." ... quote: "bam" keep searching). "Emeril Lagasse was born on October 15, 1959, in the small town of Fall River, Massachusetts, where he was raised by his French-Canadian father, Emeril Jr., and his Portuguese mother, Hilda. While working at a local Portuguese bakery, the teenaged Lagasse developed a penchant for cooking. In 1973, he enrolled in the culinary arts program at Diman Vocational High School. Also a talented percussionist, Lagasse led the high school drum squad, playing at dances, banquets and numerous local religious festivals.” [3] I knew I cited to him for a reason, hes a musician too, and knows how to work an audience, “leave things alone,” Im currently throwing up, from hitting my head, not exactly the same professional skill set managing anger toward me, upset, questioning, or digs at my current condition as representative of what pains in life, as told. Then if you add all of these assumptions, its like casting onto stage, everyone else's interpretation of you, on behalf of who they think you have harmed, and whoever does not respond to you in the positive, when youre gone youre gone, its hard to talk to anyone, who is not presentable positive, you either keep going in life or you give up, and that's why my Brother doesn't have friends over at the house anymore, during my nieces birthday concert, called 911, because they guy I accidentally crushed on my 21st birthday gave head to, murmured something while I was at the fridge, because I had 1 margarita in a plastic cup. Obviously he knows we'd never hook up unless I was black out drunk, and because two friends liked him hooked up with one during middle school, meant he is physically attached to one or both, the other hooked up with my brother, and that's who confronted me about hooking up with Benjy on my 21st Birthday, meanwhile my Persian friend said that I kissed everyone on the limo on my Birthday, and I only remember making out with Katie in the limo, that my Brother was present in, why I don't talk to his wife, and was not present while they were getting ready for his wedding got ready separately, so that I would not be present while everyone got dressed made up. That's recognizing that smoking weed while watching Sklyar Grey topless jumping from bed to bed, meant that I was gay, something they knew I don't. -Got into UMASS Amherst.

Be Gracious ...

If you know that things can get worse for you in life, then you don't need to explain your reservations to others, it doesn't matter how much you improve, its really not worth it to me to be sweet with anyone, seeing this is how I am treated, and the fact that that's allowed, is “unbelievable.” If this is what is thought of me, I think “than why am I alive” for what purpose am I to live life. If being happy or talking to someone is seen as an opportunity to make fun of me “as reject” or “wannabe” to another persons wellness, then as compared is not why I am treated that way, that would be blaming women for having it good in life, and watching me suffer, as though I go out looking for love, and reject love, all my relationships remain open, only a phone call away, with no clear ending, that's what “hooking up is” without commitment and without a breakup, left open, that's being done, without complaint. However because I allowed other people to do me, people who don't even want to do me, were judgmental towards me, and the choices I made with my body including a statement in work “well you did that to yourself” or “you allowed men to use you” if I have mental health issues, what does that have to do with sex, maybe it has something to do with what is thought of me, my soul rests in me, no matter who does me and feels like me, and if I need to get f-ked by someone with a Porsche and an M3 well that means I have found the solution to my problems, to be done by someone rich, with a nice car. I don't even think I was that to others, Im sure all love is exciting, Ive just never experienced it, where I am excited about them upon meeting them, all except for one who I shared “laughing until we cried” and we didn't even know eachother, passing a bong around, we had just met. -I am gracious, Im sorry if I ever seemed too confident or not grateful for the men who loved and adored me, if I thought “they could do better” then that is why I left, so that they could find someone who everyone loved and adored, and was not threatened by the attentions from others received while we were together, intimidate me. What you leave behind in life, actually makes you look like a chump to others, or a loser, is what happened when I left relationships, and bad things happened to me, and they moved on, that life you create for yourself post breakup makes or breaks your recovery from leaving a loving relationship, in place of more casual encounters with men, and that's how you get sized up by the rest of society treated as though you deserve to be devalued or not remembered “that is if you devalue yourself, then they don’t feel bad if you get sick, and think that you got devalued trying to find a better match, and if you get sick is why society puts you down in life, seeing them well and seeing you sick, then treat you as the waste of years to their life being cared for, as though you were never good enough for them to begin with, well.” It is very insulting when others hold you to terms on your Twitter, with a “that’s it attitude ZERO respect” or a “NEVERMIND your worthless attitude, you must be the problem hurting my image.” And that’s how you get treated in life, if you are not well then by “AIR THEORY” you cannot create wellness around you, I just shared a funny story about looking like my Boss I had a crush on he was male, this one was female. So now I am alone, and if I cannot stay well can go to the hospital no matter which direction “essay no direction home by Bob Dylan” while on drugs did not turn in papers barely wrote, and got an F in documentary film, in which I was exposed to Michael Moore videos and there was no seat for me in the classroom sat in the back on a table every class and arrived late, and took notes, it’s a no win situation for me, and requires a lot of “not mentioning” and “forgiveness” for those who did not fully accept me, and relished in feeling special as connected to me, then dumping me, as though they were found without me, when fires happen, it is you that gets blamed, and once the trauma passes, you get let go, that’s them coming to terms with micro-managing you as the problem, get their power back in public, rejecting you in public, that’s them making an offender out of you, why I stay home, do not work. NOTICE: If I dont improve will go to the hospital.

Personal Update ...

When things get to be too much, which is right about now, usually you are given the opportunity for alone time, to rest and recharge, however as a blogger, you are not expected to become sick, no matter what you talk about. There is a such thing as illness inherited through the discussion of sexuality, and whats currently an issue, “mental illness,” versus what was previously not an issue: confidence, beauty, look, attraction, intelligence, reputation, defamation, wellness. Ive been an athlete my whole life, usually these are conditions I can control on my own, I just know that Im more balanced when I exercise, why I became a long distance runner, the one element missing while dating in law school, gym time, and present while getting As and popular at school meaning could talk to anyone invited to dinners and karaoke with classmates and beers, which I stopped attending upon dating because my boyfriend got jealous, thought I still like “John” someone I dated before I dated him in law school, and left that “hook-up” situation, to be “monogamous” a commitment demanded of me at the beginning a serious relationship without knowing the person well enough to commit to the rest of my life with, then upon agreeing to the commitment, he messaged with another girl and told me about it. I don’t do people dirty if that was what was thought of me, hook-up and hook-up with other people while hooking up, I don’t cheat, Im either taken, and if I “get kissed” by another man, who tried to bed me, left a 4 year relationship, without fully explaining why, and it was because on a break, someone else tried to do me. Usually its when you have love, or something going for you in life that you attract the attentions of others, there are a lot of fish in the sea, and although you may feel special, that doesn’t mean that you are regarded as special to others, doesn’t matter who your parents are or who your Brother is. In the real world, you are not recognized as your Brothers little sister and respected among the popular as a sibling to someone who was popular, and if you do not have friends presently to prove popularity, then you will not be seen as anything worth investing a ring to, without friends, doesn’t matter who attended your Brothers wedding with you, that doesn’t make you special, to have one cool friend, and no other friends in life, not close to anyone. It takes a minute to digest, how your life was changed, which you don’t really think about until after your life has changed for the worst, how things were, compared to how things are now, that you have to let go of, what people thought then, compared to what is thought now. Then there was no cohesive group think mentality on any of these subjects, but when in Rome, you generally speak to what you feel, those are the words that come to mind, and that’s what being a writer is all about, what comes to mind, as communicated makes sense to others, and then there are your worst moments, even if recorded, get frowned upon, as insensitive, or not well enough stated. You cant make a better life, out of a bad life, that’s how things appear now, as though a nicely made website, can undo those hardships I endured, or judgments passed toward me as deserved “The People vs. Leslie Fischman” that means DO NOT TALK TO HIM OR TALK ABOUT HIM PROBATION FOR 4 YEARS. That’s what that meant. That’s not intellectual property, that’s someone who felt victimized by me, which is why I don’t talk to anyone anymore, if being loving toward someone, while building a website was considered “CIVIL HARASSMENT” then that explains why a situation happened again, except this time with someone talking to me, THEN I received no replies, there were no communications back. To the families I disturbed upon knowing me talking to one of their family members Im sorry, and to anyone who feels like “this is too much” information to know about me, I don’t mean to overwhelm, and if you are feeling sick or overwhelmed, its because Im under pressure, being made of in public, by someone who “had to convince me he has a high IQ” “to get me to talk to him” is admittedly insecure.

Internal Communications ...

It has been argued by idealist.org, that ““Effective, authentic communication is a critical ingredient for change.” [1] In telling your story, understand that others may already know you under a different set of judgments, given your history, upon their own examination, judge you, without assuming that others have gone through your personal records, or after having seen a different side of you, reject your well moments, your good moments, or your happy moments. Just accept how people are, whether it was you who talked about life, and they changed, treated differently, or whether you talked about life, and yourself were treated differently, remember those gone moments between family members, as being the causal factor contributing to that disillusionment occurring when things are occurring that cannot be communicated or spoken to, also known as mental illness, that is the ill interpretation of events or of your life, as thought by others, upon looking at your life, and then treating you as a “sell out” to your own family, for having made the wrong deductions, about a statement provoked by Petrocelli, which doesn’t matter at this point, as my health is failing, and so could my families health, means no added discussions, concerning that moment 2009 held privately, should be re-introduced, via football kitchen table to my Father who shouted yesterday “get away from me” did not want to continue discussions, about having a website, as I am currently the one who has wronged my family, sharing private communications with someone who is now making fun of me in public, and who is trashing me, and trying to trash my entire family, who other than me, have normal lives. This is when youre the odd one out, and that’s when things have been “taken too far” whether that’s you currently taking things too far, that is peaking past the point of illness, as though explanation or sharing can rehabilitate whats gone wrong in your life, or as though acceptance from others can repair which parts of you have been injured, in the process of getting back to well and trusting anyone with your heart for that matter. If you have been distant from your family for many years, this is probably why, too much to think about, with no one to talk to, and kept busy in law school, and kept my problems to myself, then you move home. At this point in terms of wellness, I am not now physically well enough to work in a job, its “the street or jail” my Father says, he will not support me financially with a website, that’s being cut off, as a result of nude photos being requested from me, to see my body, and as a result I am now ill and so is my family who are conservative, not into politics. Remember who was there for you when you had no one? A substitute Attorney “Ceballos” not Richard Sudar, who then showed up, talked to me, and I cried. “This person doesn’t care about you, he doesn’t want anything to do with you.” And I cried. I didn’t know why, people will meet you, know you, and you may NEVER know why. They just hear about you and stick together with all the jokes, and stay among the well, and if you are not viewed as being among the well, then that’s where you roll amongst, the sick. This isn’t helpful and its not controversial, its not helpful to me either to discuss, I feel indifferent to others, not angry, I don’t feel connected to others, alienated, and I don’t understand what was causing others to be so as a matter of fact with me, and I don’t think sharing about is helpful. If you are vulnerable, you wont know it, in life, things will happen to you to make you look stupid, and any proud moments dressed in Bebe, will be frowned upon, like youre out looking for sex, not proud because you just lost 50lbs, and going to your first professional mixer, Im sorry if I did not impress anyone, Im sorry I signed up for your pop-up shop, and Im sorry I did not get the email telling me that all spots were taken, until I got to the doorman, who rejected me at the door. The constant theme is hearing about your life, then treating you the same: arrives and reject, as though its my demeanor, that is worth rejecting or calls negative attention to me or others, or as though I behave inappropriately, Im sorry I took a picture inside Rhubarb Studios.

Commentary about #KUWTK (2012) etc. ...

When Everyone Looks Good Except for You ...

That's the gift of writing, that no matter who is mentioned, or what experienced referred to, you always look worse, having been the one to mention or discuss, that's everyone else being outside of you, and no one wanting to be you, judging you, as though you are in some kind of comfort zone, that they are not privied to knowing, whether that's presumed to be above, up top, connected, or with reference to supported. I am the type of person I once described, as "everyone jumping to the other side." That is if you are found to be in the wrong, then that is the side that is defended or supported, not what you have to say. These are experiences you have in your typical younger years, then you learn what is called "compassion," understanding others, without needing to hear from them, or anyone for that matter. I think being online has been a great learning experience, but there are still setbacks, when it comes to feeling good or better about oneself, that doesn't happen automatically, doesn't matter whether 60k are in support of you, if 4 people don't like you, who you know, then that's how you will feel, threatened by the four people who know you and don't like you, and the more you respond to it, the better they feel, having known you or met you, and not liked you, feel justified, and that's how someone new coming into your life, hurts you, sees you as well, sees everyone else's condition, then hurts you, so that you don't feel well, then feels better having changed your condition of wellness, to suit their needs, to feel like they are victim, the one who has been wronged, and to illustrate that create conditions for you that cause you mental illness, so that if you are mentally ill, they then have a stronger position against you in life, as having been mentally ill, and knowingly spoke or engaged in conversation with another with mental illness, if one knows that I have bipolar and on a schedule in bed by 9, on meds, then that is to see me nude off day meds, and to argue with me off day meds, to see what I sound and look like off day meds, and capture that moment, then call me the devil, like I'm asking for sex from an Angel. There is sharing your life, in support of one another, then there is making me masturbate to him, it's a solo activity, cherished in the company of oneself, it's not an activity to share or do in tandem, in company, that's not unless you are having actual sex with someone, then all activities occur, naturally. -I just don't think he understood me, and I think to make himself feel better is defaming me, labeling me mentally ill, and grose, like I chose to be infected with viruses, and given STDs from sucking dick "syphallis," obviously I loved the wrong Dick in life, otherwise I would have gotten STDs, and almost died of full-blown ovarian Cancer, with hpv dysplasia, going up the tube to my Uterus, they had to partially cut, and had them remove skin cells, versus option two to freeze parts of the Uterus wall, containing the dysplasia. That was $4000.00 worth of surgery, caught by my own examination of myself, following CVS treatments, then saw a Doctor, then was diagnosed, then had surgery and was treated, that's dealing with HPV. So yes it does matter to me, to be photo'd nude online, I stopped having sex 2014. Don't label me, retire me, or defame me, to injure my chances of acceptance in life, like I deserve to be labeled as diseased. This is why I stay home and don't work. Who cares what happened to my cunt, if I'm not trying to put out, and if I don't need anyone to love my cunt, then why am I not allowed to be accepted as well? Apparently no medications is required to be treated as well, and if you have a history like 3 moments in life when you lost confidence and went to the hospital and put on anti-psychotics, that was the treat your condition as "gone" or "lost" or "paranoid" or by looking at you with no sleep "mentally ill." That is what I do when I need help I go to the ER, they interview me, then they reset my body & my clock, rest. -That's my inner turmoil if anything, loved Men, hurt by them.

What Defines You? ...

∆We are all defined by different things in life, we all have different exposures, different upbringings, and some more confident than most when it comes to speaking their mind, and especially toward anyone who they think doesn't deserve a shot at life, or an opportunity to earn a living, talk at, talk about, or talk down, anyone they do not see as deserving of wellness, and that's when your true colors show, are you composed of well parts, or are you ugly on the inside, like a candle I once compared finding your beauty within, and when I did not appear well, when I focused within, and worked on myself, that is how I became beautiful on the outside, more attractive and with a prettier face, just as I had guessed. Which is why they always tell you "beauty comes from within" and to "focus on yourself." Everyone wants to know your secret to success once you've found it, while others are in denial, and do not recognize you as having overcome anything, while others, moved on in life, lived life, and went through no years in question, no years in torment, no years treated as guilty, and no years defamed, put down in life. At what point is it important to become human, that when you leave things alone, accept the conditions as they are, and challenge yourself, to improve despite what is thought of you, that's the challenge, once everyone has lost faith in you, to believe in yourself, and even if people are hard on you, continue to set goals and improve, that's without encouragement, that's having faith in yourself. Blogging requires you to have some technical skills in website development and creation, its not premade, you have to visualize and assemble, in a way you think best communicates to others, what it is you are trying to say, and present in a way, that equally supports the sharing of that information as important as it is to you, be viewed and appreciated with the same care and attention you pay to your writing, no matter how your writing, is made, be of value. It takes many years to get comfortable speaking in public, get used to a crowd, or just a few people, and open up, its not a skill that comes naturally to all people, everyone goes through phases of being self-conscious, and gradually as you become more and more comfortable sharing, confident, and that takes time. And with writing online comes risk, my Mom just got worried, with regards to what happened to me connecting and getting robbed, said that its so bad anyone can just break in and shoot us, how she feels about Men from all Countries looking at my body being displayed in the nude online. And my Dad doesn't like my website. That's like multiple let downs, in one month, defamed, trashed, parents upset, and many passings. Which leaves me alone to think about a few things, how can I make my life more positive: get a job. -This is when things become painful for me. Then disliked.

Not Feeling Good ...

They always say, "its just a bad day, not a bad life." Let's face it its easier to cheer someone else up, than it is to cheer ourselves up. And some of us, just don't feel good, and can't stay feeling good even if we tried, Im one of them. I used to be someone on the go, always keeping busy, never thinking about life, sleep, without worry about the future, I was on a schedule, and getting things done, and then you get tired. Im not sure what happened, sudden loss of motivation, and giving up in life, I wasn't suicidal, I was just underperforming in life. Today, I face a different set of circumstances, being myself and feeling good, without feeling bad about myself, feeling in control of my emotions, without feeling manipulated, and thinking about my past, without being triggered presently to talk about my past. Its gotten to the point where I am not longer present, Im not sure whether that's trauma, or just not feeling good, about where Im at in life, and how Ive been treated recently, but that's life, some people will be nice to you and some people will be hard on you and that's not something one should take personally. I wonder how it feels on the receiving end of my writing sometimes, in real life, its other people feeling good and then I don't feel good, Im not sure what that is, its not jealousy, and its not their fault they don't make me feel good, it might just mean I have mental health issues, not feeling good around others, most likely a product of "social anxiety," that is worrying what others think, and then not feeling good, in anticipation of what you think is being thought about you. Some things you can't control. When I first started taking adderrall I felt good all the time, capable, and got things done, kept busy, and slept at night, I never had addiction issues, I didn't drink or do drugs while I was prescribed the med, except for summer and one semester 2006, when I turned 21, and started going out to the bars. Then gradually the medication stopped being as effective in law school, prescribed the med abilify in law school but didn't take the med, I think based upon how I was talking, too fast or too hyper, made the Doctor think I was disorganized or didn't make sense and prescribed it, because hospitalized, once 2009, after swallowing a bottle of kolonopin, after my adderrall was flushed down the toilet by my ex, had a bipolar episode. Im not really sure how bipolar happens, but its an imbalance, today is no different, it seems once others are aware of a condition it happens, even if it was just that once 2009 I attempted suicide. Knowing that, its important to do things that make you feel good and keep you moving forward, sure its nice to make other people happy, but not at your own expense, such as sending photos, that was a huge mistake. If you're not feeling good about yourself, yes it could be that you have done something wrong, that is enabled someone else to read you by sending them photos, that is a mistake I will live with for the rest of my life, treated as disposable, replaceable, an airhead, or a "slut." That's not me, that was what was wanted from me, not my doing, but instead was displayed online, as though that's how I talk to people sexually. Im not a flirt, so to be treated as someone who uses their gender to get their way in life, was really insulting to be treated that way, especially if Im very conservative in real life, that's where things went wrong. You can want things in life such as love and companionship, but that doesn't mean that you wont pay the price later on in life, for bonding with someone you accepted, who did not accept you and did not see you as special. I guess a blog is not an impressive profession, to that person, nor is my work history an accurate indicator, of my capability in life professionally. Seems these day you are only judged by the job you have and the amount of money in your bank account, which has been $0 for me for sometime, I don't have any money. So because I was doing well I was given edd.gov money, and because I was in a good mood and loving, was nice to others in private, and because I was nice to others in private, I got robbed, that was them assuming that my life is easy, or that wellness is plentiful its not. Everyone faces difficulty staying well, and feeling good that's not unique to me. But because of where I come from, and because of who my family is, that was how I was treated, like life is easy for me, or intelligence is easy for me, or law school was easy for me, or socialization is easy for me, or dating is easy for me, no its not, all of these things I find difficult and challenging. The most important thing is that no matter how bad anyone wants you to feel or look, you don't stop loving yourself, and lift your head up, and do things that make you proud to be who you are and be where you are at in life, happy.

Destroyed Originals ...

No one ever warns you of the problems arising upon telling your story, or sharing your life publicly, usually its by complaint that others do not wish for you to be heard. That's seeing you, and not having faith in you, and not believing that you are sharing in good spirits, not on foul pretenses. Whenever someone comes forward and shares, that's with acceptance of everything past usually that one is able to put together oneself, and present themselves to others, not in disarray, and not in a disorganized way, but after having made sense of things, seek to make sense of things in public among others. Theres something special about being special, its being one of few to know, and be gifted a way of compartmentalizing ones understandings of reality, upon meeting another, whether that's in shared humor to onlookers, or whether by expression public, shed light or help others to make sense of what has occurred looking at who is in the neighborhood, or who is known to be living in a neighborhood. Take all things in stride, sometimes, what looks like a communication congruent to an idea "American Girl Dolls" does not mean there is a connection to American flagged homeless tents in Brentwood. That would be an unwanted attachment or communication about me, illustrating me as "schizophrenic" upon my own doing "talks to self" or "talks out loud" to say that because President Trump blamed the fires on someone "homeless" in the news, that that gives the right for the homeless, to designate another source of blame to someone without them knowing it, me, someone whos pen name is named after a Doll company with the word American in it since 2013. My mental health issues, have nothing to do with anyone else, present or past, and everything to do, with my ability to be confident in my surroundings, and comfortable with myself, whether anyone understands me, that's not my job to be understood or to communicate for understandings in life. I just know that as an OFA Fellow, when the homeless community first moved to Brentwood, I passed out hygiene kits, I made at CVS Pharmacy. Recently a member of the AA congregation I attended, BBQ for the homeless, on Instagram, filmed herself and was awarded a flag, she had framed, with a card. That was her servicing her community. -I think there is a misunderstanding with concern to a poster I took down before Aurora happened, defacing President Barack Obama, and blaming me for taking a poster down, and was retaliated on, by taking all my blogs down, as though I am the problem, as though that poster being left up was okay for viewing. How you share things matters, and if you alert others to what you think happened 2013 on your website, and then don't follow up, with a clearer picture of the direction of influences in life, you get made to look like you brought illness or hardship upon yourself, by doing something you are not supposed to be doing, removing a poster from public view on the side of the road on Wilshire. I also called the Colorado DA to report my poster, in my apartment in Boulder, of a French Artist who passed away, with the line "love life with Cora Americano" on the bottom, and picture of a girl turning and snapping. That was a vintage poster on canvas, I bought on Pearl Street at an Art Store, it was one of a kind. However rumors start, or clubbing starts, I think it begins with a communication to all, who then looks at everyone, and identifies, communications by or by what they look like or by whats around them, be identified by those who know them, or who have been privileged to be exposed or see the inside of their apartment, it is them who are gifted the big picture, and it is you who is being looked at by them, without knowing what you look like to others, that's the difference between what you see, versus what others see looking at you. -There is a certain discomfort, in being talked about, whether that's in the negative or the positive, its that upper edge that others seem to have over you in life that you wonder about, why you used to be well, and now are sick, and whats causing illness to you. Maybe its an unwanted connection to the homeless, and an unwanted comparison to the homeless, as someone who speaks in public, with no one listening, or compare me to someone who speaks in public, that no one wants to hear from bothered by. -I was just thinking today about Justice Roberts, who I have mentioned, who I noticed while taking notes inside the US Supreme Court, had his hand on his head, when I returned to the Court Room, I took a break and left sometime during the 3 ½ hours I was present taking notes, and listening to those speaking within the Courtroom. Its very disheartening to have have undergone, mental health issues, with no way of communicating to others, past the point of non-acceptance of me, I think that's fair, when someone is done talking to you, and no longer wants to hear from you, ignores you, makes sense, only in the sense, that they do not want to talk to me, that's fine, that doesn't mean Im talking to them here, it just means that they have their own understanding of things treating me as though I was put in jail, for a misdemeanor drinking and driving, but was to serve as punishment, for a bunch of other things they thought I was guilty of, as though I am a trouble maker, not a peacemaker, as though I am not smart, and bring trouble to the Country, or as though I misrepresent self or others, punished in life.

What is Spiritual Awareness? ...

According to compellingtruth.org, "spiritual awareness is being conscious of spiritual ideas or matters. Some think of their soul, a spiritual path, a spiritual leader, a religion, or the unseen forces in our lives and in the world." [1] Whenever I don't understand something I ask for help, whenever I feel confused I look for answers, and whenever I care about others I try to help. No matter what stage in your personal development you are when it comes to accepting what has past, be kind to yourself. Notice when we are too hard on others, its often to do with something not right in our own lives, we could be doing a better job of, remind yourself you cannot control others in life, we can only do our best to see the good in others. Everyone makes choices in life, its not our job to prosecute as we go, cast blames on people for things not going right in life, always think what if in the reverse I were to be blamed the same, thats why we are told to "put ourselves in other peoples shoes." What would it be like if someone were to think the same about me, that's called empathy, its treating people as we would expect to be treated ourselves. That doesn't mean that what the other person is doing is right, its just choosing not to care or worry about what someone else is doing in their life, and make it matter to us, that's not unless we are required to care, and this is where professionalism takes place, its being there for others when we are required to be there for others, and not enjoining ourselves to the chaos that surrounds them, being a sound voice of reason. There is so much confusion in chaos, and so much confusion in trauma, and so many reasons we find difficulty speaking up, and figuring out what needs to be spoken to in life to correct whatever is going wrong in life, that's being cautious. Whenever there is a problem you have two jobs: (1) stop the problem and (2) not make the problem worse, just like a band-aid, stop the bleeding, but not make it worse, allow it to spread, get infected, or remain open. Most of the common solutions are based upon basic practices in medicine, you would think that social ills, or social confrontations would be treated differently, its not as abrasive as you would think to confront an issue, you cant exactly prove, and action not in writing directed toward you, but if you feel as though you were of influence, and made fun of once, then sure you have the capacity to be a solution, if you were focused on once. That's the beauty of life, we continue to change we continue to grow, there is acceptance and focus on us when well, and that translates to wellness elsewhere, then there is failure when its hard to look at you and hard to think about you. What you should always remind yourself of, is the beauty in life, even when times are tough, and more you forget about whats important to you, the more you allow things less important in life to take hold of your thinking, such as the way you are feeling. We fight feelings all the time, laziness, unmotivated, sadness, and doesn't it feel good when you arrive back to a place you are proud, that's not letting a condition take hold of you, that's rising above, that's having a sense of faith in your wellness and the wellness of others, no matter how bad a condition anyone gets placed in.

When a Loss of Respect Occurs ...

Politics isn't for everyone, including me. It seems that in the event respect for you has been lost, that's the minute you look stupid to everyone else, that loss of respect usually occurring because of something you have done, which gets looked at in conjunction with whomever else is in your life, or no longer in your life, by comparison treat you as different, and upon being treated as different, meaning not nice to you, you are introduced to a new form of living, that is not as well as everyone around you, not as special as anyone you see, someone different, less than, or not of influence. When you appear in front of others, and are not well, that discomfort can be seen, and if you are comfortable with yourself, that confidence can be seen to, but once you are made to look stupid, all moments in life look stupid, all your happy times, all your innocent years, all the years you were never paying attention to how you look, none of those years matter, compared to where you are now, which is what others are trying to figure out, why you sound intelligent, or smart or aware, and why during other moments in life questioned, as not being good enough later on in life, that is after having hooked up with someone married, then dating in real life someone who went to another law school, and should have married. Once you leave a good life, there are no well moments past leaving a good situation, in hopes of finding yourself, or creating a life for yourself, if it was intended for you to create a life with another and get married and maybe have kids, then that was what was expected of you, and should you leave a situation in which all of that was possible, is how you get viewed as a poor decision maker, it doesn't matter what failures you have encountered academically, not excelling in school and getting good enough grades to continue on with the pressure of taking exams and learning material. That is what is being viewed in question, what were the causes for your disillusionment, and what did you do with your life, to do better in life. I think past the point of being known, there is an automatic discomfort, and a loss of respect that occurs at the point of you becoming aware that you are known, how you choose to respond, with respect for others, or whether you put yourself down in the process of becoming known, make no assumptions about it, if you share something only you know, and everyone else becomes knowledgeable about, don't expect to be known for good things in life, only be looked at in the negative, as someone who does things in private, to be known in public as something they are not, or someone who does not respect themselves enough to avoid becoming known to other standards of acceptance in life. This is what happens when no one respects you, when you cannot control what you have to say under pressures, and if you speak while another is resting, not composed, that is what is brought out of you, for the sake of viewing you as not smart, affected, or not having anything important to say, to make others feel better, offensive. If the goal is to create an offender of someone who is not an offender, the way they do so, is by creating a feeling within someone, who they do not like, so that they speak to the offense, and sound mentally ill, and upon sounding mentally ill, situated separate, and upon feeling separate, see if they can cause someone to look or appear different to see how they respond to others, and that's to create a situation of arrest, someone possessing traits, or having looked or appeared to be someone in possession, of a feeling or attitude of distaste in life, to judge their face or their body, as someone possessing the feelings body or identity of someone who causes harm to another, and upon having been influenced in that way, feels like someone is an offender, means that an offender is within them spiritually taken. When you get devalued, whether by photo, or by dating, this is how you get treated, as gross, not only do you look gross to people, but you speak gross, and anything you say sounds gross, that's being labeled. And upon being labeled. All instances in which you were treated as gross, get looked into, when have people argued with you, when have people taunted you, when were you not liked, in law school, which trying to get a JD, and that's why people f-cked you, and put you down in life, because you were up in life, intelligent and doing well. Its upon insult, that you get treated as though you have done something to yourself, in life to create a condition to your face or body, such as masturbation, which causes a womans body to gain weight, and face to lose beauty, it's a condition to the heart, which is the traveling of energy through the body, from the hand to the body, and feeling occurs, and what gets represented on the face of someone who does themselves, is thought to be what was thought within a good thought or a bad thought, and based upon whether someone is good or not, appear on my face.

Responding to Hate? ...

Generally someone who is more well than you will be indifferent to you seeing themselves as better, and their wellness is not a representation of knowing you, although those who knew me are doing well, that is because they are among the well, and were never brought down in life, not by my personal history or changed outlooks in life. That's wellness, you're either apart of, or not, and if not, always do your best to blend in no matter what condition you are in. You can never blame others for your changes in faith, or for your decisions to be alone, and whatever happens to you, look wise, be strong. That's just another's re-direction of attentions to you, and the impression they have casted on you, of what they think things should look like, also known as sex, someone who does you, and then feels better after having done you, and if you feel worse, that isn't jealousy, that they are well and you are not, that's not being well yourself in the face of them not being attached to you having done you. When wellness can no longer be exchanged, that is when people find it difficult to be around you, that's not feeling the benefit, by not seeing from where the benefit can come from, that's "judging a book by its cover." What is meaningful? Derived meaning from the telling of a story, is what is understood to the audience upon looking at someone, that is the strength of story telling no matter how sad a story seems, and no matter what the story teller looks like. As a human being you cannot change people, it doesn't matter whether you are of influence or not, and wellness whether based upon a mutual hate for someone, or based upon the togetherness, or a unit, who in comparison to one another compliment one another, that's how beauty takes hold. There is a lot of beauty to life, if you are patient enough to work hard, and enjoy the moments that make living worth while, and if you're sick and tired of hearing about how short life is, then you have come to right place. And just because I am sober does not mean that I'm living day to day, as though there is no positive momentum to my life, or as though I am working only to the opinions of others marked, re-directed, confused, triggered, or changed, we are all human, we both can be read, understood, view, and notice, but when you are forced only to look into yourself, that's punishment, seeing everyone else, and not feeling apart of, feeling looked at funny, and seeing them as whole. That's life, sometimes you inspire, and sometimes you are ordinary, and sometimes people think less of you for having shared your story, as though you are unimportant, or not important to another Family in time.

Negative Possibilities ...

That's not illness, that's wellness, and that's not paranoia, that's future tripping, also known as bipolar, when all the negative possibilities come to mind, that's a loss of faith in what is well now, and predicting negative outcomes, in anticipation of difficulties, acceptance wise, or belief wise. Always keep a positive head on your shoulders, and when in love, roll with the punches. Love is a beautiful feeling once shared, a feeling of natural peace occurs between you and the other, do not mistake that feeling for something bad, that's not created by either giver, it's a gift from God, when two people are together and feel well around each other, well enough to share love, or give themselves to the other. Okay good because we never have sex when it's foggy out only on clear nights, I'm assuming you guys were wondering about that, when does it feel like a sex night, if you were raised on booty calls, you also watch the weather channel, put up a dream catcher, and keep yourself busy, until your positive signal are emitted and felt by the other upon thinking of you, that's love, waiting for it to arrive, like any good feeling, not all days are good days. Have a sense of humor about your health, the body is much stronger than you think, often times stronger than your mind, if you can believe that much, how we wish both to evolve in the same way as a computer has taken us places, I just know when I read my handwriting, my body slows down, because it was written slower than typing, that's the benefit of typed writing, written 60 words per minute, and that speed can be communicate back to the reader, and energy is transferred. Are all smart thoughts quick, do all things smart occur quickly, I'm not sure, and that's where blogging comes into play, for me overtime it took one year to write fluidly about just about anything with confidence, but in the beginning I really challenged myself to speak opening up and see the big picture including past concepts of intelligence, and challenge myself to see whether those intelligences have been equally displayed now among us, whether past intelligence encouraged us to try harder, I think so, or was past intelligence more intelligent than now, and how so? That's a good question to ask historians, are we to benefit from informations and become smarter and stronger, or is information supposed to weigh us down, well if my readers are reading on average 6 minutes a day, and I have 60k monthly viewers presently, then that must mean they stay long enough to feel good, meaning it's a nice place to be, not a bad feeling felt.

When Your Wellness is Controversial ...

Yesterday I called a crisis hotline, because carrying on in discussions about my private life only did me disservice in life. Although I have moved on, sometimes being connected to who has passed through your life, doesn't feel so good, that they are well and you are not, or expected to be weller. That's just life, sometimes you connect and are well, and sometimes you improve, while they find better. That's just life, not everyone will see you, and at the time of meeting you see your value, they may love you and respect you, but find other things more exciting in life. This is why lifestyle is so important, how you feel and by what you have to offer the world, in presence, and as a homemaker, translates to the rest of your life, how you are seen. Just stay steady, its to the point I have shared so many "psychotic breaks self-harming" that I just cant be myself right now, its not fun being treated as predictable. Always be in control of yourself, no one can control you, unless you allow them to, and trust your instincts. How you are feeling matter, and how others feel matters too, and sometimes you need to be alone, that's okay too. Just enjoy life, there are so many facets of life, to explore: travel, learning a new profession, getting good at a sport, picking up a new habit of reading, finding a new website, anything that keeps you chipper, and with ample room for comfort, I promise you being social or dating will not result in what I have gone through, its really technical, history, legal, medical, and I have to improve and think, and I don't know the laws with regards to the subjects concerning me, a fast decision maker, on point. Notice today Im slowing down, after not having slept, that's just overcoming a mood, sleep is important, you cant think youre way out of a feeling, sometimes you have to pick your mind off of what you are focusing on and focus on something else, that makes more sense to you, Im sorry if I don't always.

No One Has it Easy in Life ...

Someone who thinks you have lives a Shitty life, or assumes that going to law school was to make oneself look important, or as though one knew that two Attorneys passed, as though one is insensitive upon having suffered bipolar from drinking attempted suicide, as trying to be like someone who has passed, to argue that to receive a relayed message was the cause of suicide, that's seeing me as imitation of real conditions existing in professionals with many years experience, as not being able to handle disappointment, assume that then I was aware that "I was being looked at as a source of disappointment, beyond my family and friends who were worried about me during my time using." This is the difficulty in sharing a story wanting to know what you were like then and why you are this way now, and trying to understand how you got into law school, if you understood whether you were a wanted connection or a difficult connection and why, as though you pretend to be something you are not and subject others to harm, after having heard your story, know who you have been connected to or who has supported you, someone whos house was raided in Boulder, and gun taken from a safe and passed around, shown to me, by the girlfriend, who was being attacked by her boyfriend shouting at her calling her a "cokehead" and then she showed me a gun, and then we hid the gun in one of her roommates suitcases in an attic, that she almost took to DIA International Airport. The first time I saw a gun was at my house on Leonard Road had a pool party and my friends friend brought a gun in a case to my room to show me and told me to hold it said it belonged to a rapper, she was later seen on the show with Ozzy Osbourne's family, and later defriended by my friend, my Filofax notes friend. And told her to tell him that the gun was hidden "by someone who cares." If you do not know how to manage a situation of bullying, and a gun is shown to you, means remove the gun from the situation hide it. Then he got nervous couldn't find his gun, and begged her for it back it belonged to Bauer, from his safe. They were staying at his house, while he was home or not in town, one of his roommates gave me a blue earring and told me "this is Bauers earring" and made me ship Heroine in CD cases in balloons at the Boudlerado their private courier service, and was later told my brothers friend Devin saved his life, meanwhile he took away my cocaine and called me "blowfish" and then I told my Mom I had addiction, and then went to rehab and graduated without going to Betty Ford, sitting on Bauers couch in my James Pearse ¾ length white blouse with a waist tie, his Mother greeted me at his door, said something like "I know you" in a nice way she used to be close to my Mom the shopped furniture at the ETrade building in Brentwood when it was a home goods store. My Father was best friends with his Father until one night eating on Ocean Ave at dinner, he said something offensive about my Mother, why he was defriended. I smoked Heroine out of a flashcard with him I didn't feel a thing, but my tire got popped in front of my building the car was stuck to the curb in the snow, and couldn't drive to his place anymore, he used to play Xbox against Kids from other Countries I was told, I met him when I was in 5th Grade in Mammoth. Explains why and how when I was at Bauers house, my brother walked in with Devin, awkward. We didn't have sex, Bauer told me he was scared of my Brother, maybe gave him a handjob, described it.

Afterword: I am sorry for sharing this story I understand how extremely irresponsible I was to connect socially and understand that I did not need to drink be of age to drink or try cocaine to be social, I couldve been conservative, I know its not necessary to understand the condition of others situate oneself similarly, as described by my Sociology Professor, in her Deviance in US Society class, this is not to showboat those incidences as having been an example of making a positive difference, and understand that if I tried drugs and became addicted and not able to have friends or date or maintain composure in school perform, means that I was disappointing to Professors who recognized me as a Dean List student, turned drug addict (Summer 2006), and understand that going to bars Spring 2006 making friends via Facebook messaged with a elementary school alumni, who was put together and worked, was not a bad experience that caused me to hear voices and and isolate with a hotel lock installed on my door, for safety. The hotel lock, was not a representation of an obsession with hotels I really held no theories with regards to crimes, nor ever self-identified as criminal all my friends were through my neighbors. That is by luck picked a cool apartment building the perfect apartment, and even made wood floors over the checkers contact paper on the floor, I was comfortable living there, then there was a blackout, and remember being outside my old building made a bon-fire in the barbeque, the last time barbeque was mentioned was by a neighbor above me cooking brauts who used to blast the song Lean Back above me, so I studied in the Library instead for 5 hours, his friend a Sorority girl said "oh I know Julius" and his Father came to my building looking for him and his Mom would call my home phone to check on him, we cohabitated Summer 2005 I think he stayed in my apartment while I was home for a few months in the summer, then he moved out. We flew him to New York and he met my Dad, but he was not approved, maybe because he was too tall, and slept together on the couch at the Waldorf spooning, he has family in Brooklyn, when I attended one game with his cousin he goes "so youre the girl who helped Julius got him playing ball again" and then he outgrew me, dated someone else, and went Pro.

Recognize a Historical Moment of Silence ...

What you have to say whether that's a Papa Johns joke, or a Kobe joke, or a Trump joke, or a Scottish accent joke, or a Hamburger joke, or a Lotion joke, or a Truck Driver joke, that is just something you have to deal with, that's seeing your potential to be hated, say the wrong things, to see whether you get treated similarly in life, as someone like Ashton Kutcher, who says something insensitive was most popular, then takes over a TV Show, after having punked celebrities scaring them into Shock. These are combinations of understandings in life, if one gets measured by, seeks to lead to similar results, to say that one is not different, with special privileges, and just like a Shopping Cart joke, saved as though one recognizing things to be openly about making fun of a family member, whether that's a shared understanding or story having been told to all from your perspective. The say that you listening to music, or your music choices are obnoxious and sexual, claiming you to be too much, or hyped inside feeling music that resonates with you inside, that's watching you listen to music, thinking your weird by your tastes, or have a quality within you that is not loved, why you like R&B songs, and trying to figure out what it is about you that you don't like, and whether you were friends with others, who you recognized beauty in as the chubby ugly pervert friends with tall beautiful women, as though you misidentified yourself as pretty, or judge people based upon what they look like, superior to others, thinking you deserve to date wealthy, well to do, or friends in common, when your world is small you see people as special, and light up upon getting to know them, speak to with enthusiasm or love, if someone has heard from you online and thinks you're a joke, or not a winning hand in life, sensitive to the passings of others, as mentioned, makes you look like you don't care for the causes for Cancer, as though being defensive, I was given Carcinoma Cancer I am one of the victims, of Cancer, and got surgery, that's not to say that those health related issues could have been prevented, had I not been asked "Who do you think did it?" In Colorado and West Hollywood, treat me as though I was someone who knew someone and was trying to figure out death, and that's why being introduced to cocaine made me look bad, as though someone knowingly experimented with their condition on Deans list, as though one is trying to be like, or is not an advocate to women, and lose all respect from everyone, having tried drugs, that's becoming addicted to something that makes you feel good but look bad. That's not understanding that I can only live life once through, therefore next time, not try cocaine, if its not needed, or unnecessary, and if another is feeling confident about it, its because they do not value you as smart, and see you as impressionable or stupid, that's taking a look at your life, and helping you to live life differently under another lense, and as mentioned, her Mother a legal professional, Father passed. I don't understand the guilt associated to me or to anyone mentioned I just know that as mentioned is being looked at to mention to say that my mentions subject others to death or look guilty for any reason, I never thought that anyones luck was riding on a system of luck built within everyone, that if one is found to have contributed to a condition, assumes bad luck or guilt or responsibility. His daughter campaigned for Brady on Facebook, went to her Dance recital, it was a Modern Dance style emotional.

Its not just Men, who get intimidated in life, to not feel as successful as, I promise you that feeling of being whole, and appreciating whats around you being right where you need to be, is a spiritual thing nothing to do with money, power, or privilege, from my experience it's a feeling you create for yourself via accomplishments, and as you work hard and make progress, THEN you feel good after working hard, that's the faith in the metrics, that if you give it your all push yourself, that you arrive to a state of wellness, called pride, that's something you do for yourself, to realize your potential, and then be recognized by others with 65k monthly viewers, wondering what youre about, how you arrived here, what you have to say, whether its current, or whether its something we've already heard and know. Does what your feeling have something to do with a personal interest, and if having to do with pride, should that be something you discredit a woman for, by not dating her in public, ignore her texts. That's an interesting concept "ghosting" Im assuming it happens to women like me, who seem fine on their own put together and not needy or controlling of a man, took shopping, gifted a handheld xbox, let them go to strip clubs on his birthday, and only went to one basketball game, and stayed home on weekends crying, that's not being an arms trophy, that's dating in Colorado, he was scared to get sandwiches at the sandwich shop in public together, with a theater downstairs, I once went to a show, and took two friends, to hear a neighbor play, he forgot the lyrics to his own song, we were three of one or two people on the couch behind us, sitting in chairs, while he performed his song. I was his biggest fan at all his shows, I told his friend Wayne who rapped, Ive never hear electronic and rap together before, that that was a really good idea, unique, he later told me that he would be working for his family as an accountant, we spoke last while living on 13th Street, I must have been attached to my old apartment, I never really got comfortable at the new apartment, with no garage promised on the lease, got a pile of parking tickets, then got a parking pass, where I parked, a family of racoons left the sewer. How to get your womanhood back, that is confidence and feeling safe and put together and well liked, don't do drugs, don't drink, don't go out alone, don't be promiscuous, respect when you get scolded by strangers, and told "Go back to California!" That really explains driving home to California with two guy friends, one slept in the back the entire time, the other drove for like 45 mins, and I drove the entire way, that's friendship, they went out and I went back to the room, and upon crossing a bridge in Las Vegas, in my leggings and Chloe boots, one said "How much for the girl?" They thought that was funny. Never fight with friends, when you look bad or don't feel well, its impossible to have friends that are women, they usually get upset with you or blame you for not being your positive self and expect more of you, that's women caring about women, you are either are the $hit or your pretending to be the $hit.

Letter to #scotus concerning President Trump ...

Dear #scotus,

It has come to my attention that now President Trump has become sick. I understand in my little world comprised of just me, that I am responsible for my own wellness, as it affects others as shared. And not to make a mockery of what has turned out beautiful in terms of our Country's story, be made to look unappreciative, in support of whoever was reported to have been "talking $hit about me" regarding "my spending habits" in High School, that is informing me that someone I am close to, speaks badly of me, and for those reasons, a bond was broken, that is feeling the same as someone, and then led to her crying upon me dating, saying "I feel like I don't know her anymore." As told by another friend a mediator, pictured with her at a bar all together, without me, while I was in town from Colorado not invited, out together. Little things in life, that make you not feel good, but don't say anything about. Now as observed by everyone, thought that I did not value my friends, with agenda to improve to spite others, as though recovering is for looks, that's just recognizing my condition as not well, and focusing on myself, detached, that's how hard you have to focus in law school to learn, maybe it was easier to others, but I read and studied very hard, and eventually burnt out, with later commitments made to care and figure out what went wrong, that was seeing someone leading from a hospital, and thought that it was important to help him fly to DC, that was my dream to work in DC, without momentum in life, jobs taken, you lose respect if you don't work, and then lose years to your life such as opportunities to be respected later in life, sometimes that has been predecided for you by others, with potential or thinks shes going places, and not if we have a say [with regard to the] past, which I would never credit them as being a force that pulls me back in life, as though that's how people connect as pillers separate and affecting one another, that's to get me to speak to private images, as though through my own mouth speak to private parts as though I have an obsession with others, as though Im an exhibitionist Im not. That's a source of heartache, friend loss, that's not empowering to better yourself without them, and if you get sick, or bring them up, in a moment of illness, that's to say that you were not apart of that, and you spent time studying and lost all of that friendship to what degree, and what other degree that's a law school but doesn't mean you are an Attorney, that's not making it in life, not able to manage an outside crisis, and perform well in school, and mangle everyone elses energy as unaffected, or not feeling urgency or responding, that's how you get looked at as connected, whether you are at ease, or whether while people looking at you know why they are looking at you, because you put a thesis in columns. There is no plan in crisis, there is just silence, I think that is best, nothing that's leading the sick astray, that's not how to help people, identify who is sick, or try to fix everyone with your own wellness that's not leadership, if I am not accepted as someone smart, then this is as high as I rise to the occasion a blog. And that is what makes me seem stupid or replaceable, I don't steal anyones thunder in life, or make others look like easy moves to achieve, that's saying I do things for response, like going to law school to then claim that I represent someone, or having shared my insights, credit self for anothers freedom, by his Attorneys, that's situating me in a position feared, as in defense of "a killer" like the Youtube we were required to watch in Law School "Defending a Killer" to psychoanalyze what an Attorney goes though defending someone guilty, asked to respond and watch a video, if that was to communicate to me, that I was judged as an OFFENDER then I don't need anyone in my life or to date, as though my energy causes that energy of up, or that my lack of abilities causes an energy of down. If I am best apart that is reading others, that is when things were best, but past the point of illness, you always stay alone, working on yourself, fixing your own condition, and not being apart of connected well.

Fighting is Not the Solution ...

And this is where the phrase comes from "the sick get sicker" its upon fighting that you max out in life, lose energy, that's speaking to terms, that do not make you feel good, and only improve an opponents condition of interest, who treats you as an outsider to the best interests of any majority in life, if it can be identified that you are mentally ill, addict, or alcoholic, someone who goes to extremes without limits, or has energy beyond reason, going for things in life, feelings, or goals, that are not beneficial to the health of others, to be in any zone of improvement in life. As soon as you get labeled one thing, how quickly you get disproven in life, as not measuring up to as described and that is being treated as "fraud" presents oneself in one way, and underperforms, or waste energies fighting with non-existent voices, then going back into addiction, and trying too hard in life, for the wrong reasons, more acceptances, as though that is how wellness occurs, with attentions drawn to individual needs, to share, compelled by questioning the standards of care one has been under, as though not well cared for, became sick. This is the challenge of being loved and in loving, staying well, and it will always be Gods gift to decide, who is loved and carries on to the next generation, that is by choice and by preference seen as being a human being to be duplicated, loved until duplication, or loved until one feels loved, bloom, that is with faith in the other, an easy union, where one or the other does not need to try hard in order to be loved, accepted. That is basic to life, not something you need to try for, looking good, or feeling good, and that is where my problems put me at odds with others, easily affected and not well among, that must mean that I don't understand, cannot comprehend, or not on the same wavelength as others speak, some speak to higher callings in life, as pronounced, speak on a more intelligent level, that others pick up on, that's being professional that air or arrogance, that's not understanding what is wrong with someone as quiet, or insecure, and when that condition occurs, fix it and listen to the ones you love, because if the ones you love do not accept you in the condition you are in, chances are those in public, or other professional settings will similarly agree without having communicated that there is something wrong with you, that foreign antsy energy of being late or trying too hard just to adjust and not being able to, that's being seen as stupid, if you are not at ease, there is no standard cool way of being, confident, you either are confident in your surroundings or you are treated as stupid so that others can rise to the occasion, and whether there is a larger story to be told, how you look, how you respond, what controls you, who friends you, who disassociates from you, who believes in you, is NOT the job of others to live your life for you, learn how to be behave think react grow provide love and get hurt, and fix yourself, there are always band-aids in life, such as reporting, no one is required to be street about trying to achieve the tough disposition of others see what real life is like around people who go out, let loose. When bad things happen to you think, what did I do, that enabled all of these things to happen, think? That is taking "responsibility" as described in an open AA meeting I attended, that directs one to think about what their own responsibilities for wellness are, upon communicating to others in a sober setting, how when one is well, naturally they are required to help make others well, and that's how trust and confidence get rebuilt, I don't think I fully understand the meaning of those posters, until I made a website and wrote everything I needed to say, with regards to how I have lived my life, and what I know now, don't expect anyone to keep up with your personal changes over the years, be proud of you either, not if you complain, when in pain, imagine all the negatives, and not upon delusion complain that because you think these things exist in the minds of others, why it translated through you, as sickness. That is blaming others for your condition, you cannot improve so long as you do not take responsibility for your own health, and if you cannot figure out what is wrong you can always go to the hospital to reset. That is putting your life in a Doctors hands, to fix your sleep cycle, your daily wakefulness, and help you to manage your thoughts, so that you don't play Doctor on yourself, and make sudden choices to quit living life, or make your life more difficult expressing grievances, and not appreciating the value of care.

How It Feels to Not Be Good Enough ...

When you are not good enough no opportunities avail themselves to you upon being well, that's others waiting to see what you have to say in wellness, and in anticipation of you being happy, cause you illness, to see how you react and respond upon becoming ill, as though your wellness is interdependent upon reaction to the conditions of whats around you, not understand that your wellness is offensive, that's if can be proven offensive, and knows that one is considered to be offensive, preferred to be obese and suicidal at home in bed all day, that's letting them win, assuming the condition of "pervert" as shouted at, to say that one gets down to the unhappiness of another, makes love to someone who is powerful as though that can resolve the diss-ease of others or empower them, that's to say the "Charlies Angels" shrine over the phone in DC, was making fun of myself or an admission to masturbating following being sent a bottle of wine and an invitation to inauguration, as though with acceptances one performed for love for another, as though there was some magical bond of acceptance, if now I know someone knows me, they do not think highly of me, and do not need an impression or love, in ordered to feel like their interests are recognized, why 2013, living in Westwood, I changed my Victim Impact Statement, and erased my name and rewrote it for Barack Obama, since he was the leader at the time, and suffered graver harms than what I suffered bipolar wise, that's acknowledging his life and job as real, a caretaker of the interests to the majority, and accepting my condition as mentally ill, and speak on his behalf, after speaking in SCOTUS, that is treating me as though I do not identify with someone who represents everyone, and did not help him out of a crisis by being myself, and reacting and responding natural, that's to say my experience in DC was mentally ill, or that my experience in LA was mentally ill, maybe that just means stay home, once it appears you are communicating to a crowd, that is when you know, you literally do not fit among, and if you do not fit among, means stay home, that's because you don't know anyone being out, why you do not belong. If you have a solution to a pandemic, don't hurt me as though I've been on the inside and as a figure looked upon, motioned signaled or did actions in my computer not school related and knowingly was subject to harm or interpretation, or for reaction changed myself my demeanor or computer space to be hospitable for entry by anyone, as though there was nothing of value in my computer, that as observed once did not benefit seeing through my eyes, or looking into my life, to figure out their own determinations of life, when it comes to what's important, or see patterns to empower themselves. We are all entitled to the freedom to choose, we don't have to listen, and if I am someone deemed to not have endured hardship that's not understanding my life as observed, and me getting sick as deserved, and the only way to stop that pattern, is to continue focusing on myself and improve, not by talking about others, or explaining the moments when I was not well, its not known or understood until said, and likewise its not memorized, or rehearsed until stated, and that is how a person shares and becomes controlled by what is known about them, waiting for just enough to prosecute or excuse their hate. That is how someone is not taken seriously in life, makes a good impression, then gets treated as mentally ill. And to make an even bigger win, say that someone who speaks is not smart, or a product of adderrall. As though that's not a naturally enthusiasm for the subject of law to try, then be the sweet one, while I am the one despondent gone, pretend like its okay to be different with me, but not give me time to think, alone, and be separate, figure out how to finish law school, that's not letting myself be treated as a cause of death, which is as soon as stated, becomes ammunition for attack on me, on those notes. This is why I cannot win with the public and I cannot win at work, and I cannot win in AA, and I cannot win socially, and I cannot win romantically, that with expectation to treat me however they want, based upon their condition, and expect me to continuously accommodate them, and subject myself to attack, that's not treating me like a human being if it takes longer to stop a bad interpretation for disgust, and not enough time to explain something said in the wrong, making fun of Barack Obama shooting a terrorist and his son in a notably wealthy neighborhood in the middle east, as though I can relate. That's saying that Barack Obama assassinated me and my Dad, or like him going to Russia, explains Micah putting a finger in me, and then showing me his dick, as though I did not report to the police and then that happened, if everyone is better off without me being alive, then that is okay too, it is clear my happiness is unwanted, food poisoned twice, and hospitalized 9x, that is when my condition is not well, that's where I belong, and because I belong in the hospital, is why I was put in jail as too stupid to live life, not well enough to be loved, too grose to be attractive, or too in the wrong to be valued speak. That is trying to protect Barack Obama, as though I was pulled over by the CHP for him, when I got him out of a bind, that is feeling like things were his fault, why he gave a Science Speech, then I remixed EMC2, trust. Trust those in power, who by the numbers educate others on truths to live by not go by the advices of someone who can barely manage auditory delusions and voices, "smashed my matching watch that I gifted Sydney, bought one for me too, into the sidewalk outside Barack Obamas house." Just like the Movie: Shawshank Redemption, that wasn't admission to guilt, that was movement in silence, when no one else was speaking, that was allowing myself to be watched, so they could get ahead, that is trusting those above me, and not letting them feel gone, or not good enough empowered.

Letting them Win ...

I can't explain why it took me so long to finish law school, but it has something to do with being paid for, and being well enough to have been invested in, that I cannot control, how others feel about my legal education, or whether they think its necessary, for me to continue on with my legal education. If I committed suicide upon being asked "Who do you think did it?" That is because that was what was asked after reading what I had written, that was my neighbor "Chris Sonia" who later moved to New York, and did special effects took me on a tour of his Workplace in Santa Monica, he was from Boston. That's to argue the Justice Sotomayor's name change was to call me out, as though I misinterpreted or read too deeply into a deposition upon searching my name on Google, then credit the Movie: Clueless. That would mean my education was paid for, and my family not represented well, treating me as mentally ill, or one of my Parents as guilty, or my Brother and I, maybe why he taught at Harvard, and grew up calling me retarded, and before I committed suicide told me "not to blame my Parents." That must have meant 2009,

I became ill on my own, drinking alone, which was not the solution to my problems, and what sparked the bipolar, or disillusionment, ignored, or not loved, or wanted to be around, that was another at peace without me, and me in chaos or mental illness by myself. I do not think that suicide is the correct response, that if you have a problem to communicate what that problem or incomplete understanding is on paper, maybe someone else who has a better understanding of life can figure things out for you, or maybe you need to be more patient, and allow for others to make progress too in life, whether you have figured yourself out, or whether they have figured you out in life, respect the time away from loved ones, as to their betterment, not to be extra loving or supportive of you, while you are under pressure, that is applying to law school, talking about things private, and sharing publicly, in way, that demonstrates that you do not know what things are about, or trying to sound important as connected, think you are important, without having any evidence of being important, with a few recommendations past to view you, not seriously, or not respectable, that is not mature, or not confident, a poor representation of a human being “shady” meaning not trustworthy. I think if you have completed something that you have worked hard for and was your dream to complete, as stated, that that happiness, only last for as long as you can apply yourself, and its not for respect, or permissions in life, to speak, or to be regarded as intelligent, that’s not what creates a speaker out of you, or listeners to your podium in life, that’s not how understandings were built, upon fights, or re-ignition of past lives, as explained now, to illustrate how things were when the times were good, to say my health now is a representation of the times now, which are well, situate me as not among the smiling, not among the proud, and not among the ones to be loved or remembered, that’s being ignored, until one fits the definition of someone who appears disheveled, obese, miscommunicates, communicates defenses, or without sympathies or empathies for the conditions of others strong, as though nows a good time to motivate anyone to believing in anything when their health is on the line, nows not a good time for any changes socially, or romantically, you cant go back in time, and everything you try for in life, will not be achieved even with the credentials, if in the past you were not included, means try for different things in life, not love, or to have friends, if those are things you left to study.

Being Driven in Life ...

If you're not sure what it is, it's not being in need of you, how I once defined what a "pervert" is, in one of my definition jokes as someone "in need," and once talking to myself described how I was running "as being in the positive" and explained I was not "running on negatives" that's thinking about someone or with obsession of another, hence not running too close to an ex's complex, stopping at the bridge, that's upon recognizing ignored, and responding poorly, expecting someone to explain to me, why I was not spoken to, or why everything else was easy to connect to but not me. That must mean that I am not well enough for conversations about life, or am someone who is not worth talking to about life. When you have questions in life, no one provides you answers, when I was growing up and in law school, journaled, there was no such thing as social media, and sharing ideas or having conversations about history or politics, or music, or film, those conversations were left to majors in professions in their collegiate studies, not for someone who does not specialize in the arts or communicating about the arts, those are larger discussions and larger impressions made, based upon the natural progression of a profession addressed, bettered, corrected, or improved, not for later discussions to detail too heavily on specific examples, as an accurate portrayal of the health of a profession as doing its job, which is to either contribute, or to not contribute, and focus on yourself, whether that was judged as being "a know it all" or "having a hand at life that situates me above others" or trying to "appear as though one knows or is personally offended and trying to improve as though it needs improvement" is judging me as though my timing is based upon what I know respond to others as small, and if it can be viewed as me being someone who thinks they are above others, that is when a closer inspection of one's life is made, whether one represents any ideals in life, or whether to disconnect entirely from public interpretation, as having a general understanding not with specific targets for acceptance, and whether one is drawing humorous attentions to examples, as though in memory of those films, represents now, highlighting a negative loss, and comparing one's Country to a situation further back in history. First, if you do not appreciate wellness, you will not appreciate in sickness, the condition of others presently or past, and if you seek to blame others for the condition of a Nation, that is not looking at things as a whole, and if what you are seeking is to transcribe evidentiary support for someone being a reject or bearing qualities that are obnoxious or asking for it in life, is to say one is not a positive representation of a Country or its people, as though my condition presents itself for attack, that my wellness, or smarts, make me look like I think I'm above others, and ignore others, as though they are below me, I am nice to everyone, and if someone is not in the mood, that means they are awake inside, and upon being awake inside are thinking about life, not about who is around them, and a break in focus, is a loss of light, meaning one is no longer alone thinking but being looked at and thought about, and upon others thinking about them, what is thought about them, is by what is said in writing and based upon how one presents themselves. You cannot judge the direction of a person in life by watching them, that is the main lesson, although it may be clear to you, where you think this person thinks they are headed to in life, employed, is a joke, and see their strength as stupid, that's not allowing one to focus on themselves long enough to arrive to wherever they are accepted, and if one cannot stay focused now, that doesn't mean that one was known to that extent, comfortably talked about or made fun of, as though their life did not inspire, or motivate others in positive directions in life without their help or present input. When someone changes, it's usually to accommodate another, for purposes of love and acceptance, that is being a woman, being monogamous, and not worrying the one you love, by staying put focusing on yourself. That's being loving, and in a humorous sense, that is when you discover yourself and your face, lesson. If you do not recognize yourself, that just means that you do not remember when you were well and why you were well, and if someone did not respect you as living a private life, don't expect them to like you now or look at you any differently in awe, or be pleased, with your life out loud online, that only creates distance, not improve social relations past, allow people to live privately, and even if you later become a public figure, always do your best to speak highly of others, or say things in the positive so that they do not feel like they are to blame, or have been the cause of you being harmed, or being off tangent and focus. Know when to stop, and if you decide to focus on school, then stick to what you're good at in life.

Once the Damage has Been Done ...

You can make due with the rest of the life you have to live at 35, or you can revisit every instance in question that you have ever felt separate from others, whether it was because you were new, or stood out in a bad way, judge others in the negative if spoken about, as having treated you differently. That's taking the past, and describing it now in the negative, or not having represented in the positive, having learned from those experiences in life, or become a better person, that doesn't mean that you can change those experiences in life, upon talking about the past, bring people back into your life, once you have left them, that's upon disagreement, do you work things out, or is law school more important to you? This is why a later condition is not valued, because read or understood as improving from a worse condition, to justify a condition existing for rejections, or for mistreatment as mentally ill. That is after having made an assessment of you past, decide for you how everyone is to look at you, disinterested, the more the merrier. And that is how you will seem to others, a latecomer to wellness, a wannabe to love, or a poor example of a human being or woman, ignored. That is not seeing the value in you, and it doesn't matter where you come from or how special others were to you in your life, its in chaos, are you negative composed of negative compartments of thoughts and say slanderous things or vindictive of the happiness of others, or are you trying hard on your best behavior, and if you are well are you withholding or not shedding light upon another side of you, that talks $hit, without concern for the health of another, speak badly about someone, and if there is question, explains why removed from friends, or from bars, or from apps, that means something within, that upon communication represents something held within that is not wanted to be associated to, an element of disgust, or improperly responds to others, who are well as connected, to say one is jealous, or the bringer of their own chaos, trying to be like, that's upon not being at peace, seen as different, and the more you lend insight to conclude in the negative about you, the more likely you make it to be, that those judgments were true. If you're not looking for a fight, don't represent a fight, or seem to act as though you know what gun violence is about past or presently, if you do not identify with negatives, then do explain how by your thinking in the positive or by representation of facts you can explain how you are now compared to how you were then, then explain why you were not offended by your yearbook, and why you were not apart of the happiness of others, and did not feel well, by your own misconduct "smoking weed" and because you submitted a yearbook page with someone who took your virginity and captioned the photo "I will never forget ..." and later blacked out that photo, because that was the mistake you made, submitting your yearbook photo early, and because you were given a picture of him, they treated you as offender in a yearbook, because they read that caption to mean you got hurt or remembering someone who came into your life, as though he would want to be remembered for having taken your virginity, and went to Georgetown, that's looking at a personal matter, and judging one on another level, as "voted most shady." That is why you are excluded from discussions, because when you were alone piecemealing all interpretations, when you were in moments of doubt, removed or erased things, from use by others.

It Doesn't Seem to Matter ...

It doesn't seem to matter past the point of non-acceptance, no one can benefit you, better you, if you decide not to continue on in life, and that is how one chooses to die unwanted life, because it suits the offenders to the best interests of someone who is doing their best mine. That is not seeing the beauty in life to my life, only to their own, enjoying their peace, without allowing me to have peace of my own making, and not allowing me to communicate or update the courts and the police, as though that offends their interests to make my world small as connected to me be of influence or control the direction of the imaginary crowd, unwilling to admit to the hates they bear, and their motivations to resent to extremes until disfavorable outcomes are created for any individual, sect, or demonination of human, they do not seek to be regarded with high esteem, if law school seems easy to you then go to law school and get into law school, and don't criticize the reality of acceptances or the procedures for letting people into the lives of others, there is no faking about it, wellness, life is not like the Move: Catch me if You Can, that's not my resume, that's not my upbringing, that's not the value of my work ethic, and that's not who I am, built for reactions or for respects from others, which is why respect is not given to me, or to the legal profession, in a society that handles things on their own, overzealously prosecuting unbeknownst bystanders, and without hearing what I have to say judge what is said privately as an open admission to being gay, as though that's the next step in my life, to have sex with a woman, I would never, that's an unwanted transition of treatment, to elicit confidences and experimentation from those who think by controlling what my face looks like and how I speak situate me in a way, that sets me below them, that's the predominant class: feminine. And that if one does not bear those traits feminine: means "jealous" or "trying to be like" or "threatened by" "or wished she was someone else" that's without recognition for the life I have built for myself, destroy as though my place in life is not of value to say "sex with men devalues" or sex with the men who picked me or I picked was for "self-betterment" or "love" or "feeling apart of" which I could not achieve on my own as a student without going out, dating, or drinking, like I had a need to fill, likeability, that wasn't already fulfilled in High School. How would you feel if you were told your story and others behave as though they already know your story, or worse, have seen another or alternate view of you, that gives them reason to hold disgust for you, as though you knowingly do things in life or purposefully do things for attentions, in a provocative way, seek attentions, that is treating someone as though they are invincible to hate or to public exposure, I was once well and able to go out, and get along with others, to say I am not that person anymore, only does me a disservice in life to give up, its not an empowering fact of life, when you no longer blend in, or get along with others, some will decide for you before you have decided for yourself, whether to go one and continue doing well in life, feel beautiful, if they think you deserve to be destroyed to paint another picture of something they do not think you are worthy of speaking to or who does not address the concepts well enough in good taste to be remembered for a positive take, that's seeing what you have in life, and doing as they wish with your hand at life, and communicate to the masses something different about you, which can be inferred, or read as in connection to the severity of repercussions or treatment of you, hiring someone accused of civil harassment and then being friended by a female Boss, who is now pregnant, and married, who was single upon meeting, that is her life panning out in the positive and things working out for her, and my life not working out, as can be viewed by all, as though because I did not make the right choices in life, was not selected for marriage and impregnated, as a 35 year old, it may be important for me to get picked, but what is more important is for me to stay well, whether or not I can bare children, is my choice to have possible in my capabilities in life, and is not for the man to decide who gives birth or who is rejected from selection not able to give birth, as though my God given traits or abilities in life, should not be remembered for future generations to come a representation of me made, or "3D Printer" of a human being in the future that resembles my gifts and able to provide insight or shed light upon the importance of carrying on in life and letting go. For some, what happened to me, is a "karmas a bi&tch argument" and for other "Brady" is a cop out trying to be "on the right team in life" as though I was on "the wrong team in life" be treated to look.

Being Content ...

There is pushing yourself during times of need, and there is acting out of character, for whatever it is worth, to what youre responding to dosesnt matter upon the timing of your responses will be judged, as with the best interests of others at heart, or whether acting to be watched and responded to, that's the difference between living a private life, or being subjected to harm for reactions off beat with reality. Anyone who does not believe in you will test for connections to what, whom, and why, whether by: (1) watching others (2) who is in your life (3) by what voices you hear, whether auditory delusions from people who were in your life, or whether made up voices in your head, speaking for others (4) then your face will be looked like, the impression made on your face, upon thinking of whom and why, whether that be female, male, and by (5) what voice is elicited, upon looking at you, whether the voice represents whats in, or something inherited, a trait from your environment, that has changed your face and your tone, to then judge you by (6) composite parts in life, positives or negatives, then situate you based upon how you (7) make others feel well or sick around you and that all has to do with (8) what is thought about you, in the positive, in the negative, what is said, how you appear, and what is recorded remembered of you, and based upon those reactions (9) rejections occur, to not benefit you, or to dismantle you, or to not represent you in the positive if you have for any reason inherited any negative traits that (10) are not agreeable to the tastes of others, or which set you apart from others in a negative way. Never make light of your experiences in life, as beautiful as acceptance is and love sharing is, no one generally wants to hear about your times being loved and how, not if you are not well now, once it can be distinguished that you have lost all likeable traits about you, that is when judgment of you is passed in the negative, it doesn't matter who is well or not, if you are not liked, and others are vocal about it means (11) they think they are better than you, see themselves as better than you, and happy without your presence in their lives, and doing well in spite of you, that is what is thought of (12) someone failing in life, not looking well, appearing ugly, obese, unkept, or disorganized, that is a confirmation (13) that someone is only well when they are doing well in life to (14) make them look like someone who is not well when others are doing well to prove (15) one is incapable of being happy for others, or is not doing well because of their inability to make another happy (16) treated as insult, as though one expressing themselves in a loving way to another, is to treat the other as pervert as though one is to do themselves to the body or love from another reject the other as (17) thinking they are someone to be admired or masturbated to is what (18) private communications look like, not in peace, for love, and if love not received or given, chaos existing in the other (me) upon being blocked. And in that chaos of rejection, sent voices to further exacerbate a condition of detachment, to say that upon losses one is looking for attachment, or upon detachment one experiences chaos, as though one was dependent upon the wellness of the other or upon the wellness of who is no longer here, to say that I am someone who naturally becomes despondent or distanced to anyone who is not well, as though as a child I could recognize or viewed others as not well, or not in acceptance of as though I saw myself as more well than, or more put together than who was taking care of me, if I was at peace, and not shining that night, that doesn't mean that I understood my deficit to be communicating to me of a need to be present, at 35 I now question how I am feeling and choose to respond to those who are in need, that is not a matter of regret or guilt, that was been inherited upon sharing my childhood memories, but that is how I am treated as having been responsible by body voice or face, as having been an unwanted influence in the lives of others, or source of bad luck, and by giving me disease is to say that I attract negative ions in the air, or attentions, which then got attracted to others or those who are no longer here, to say that attachment to me causes bad luck, which is why I was given a disease in life devalued.

Not Feeling Well and Empathy ...

You can only adjust so many times, before you become ill, and neither your improved conditions makes you feel well, and no improvements on your behalf make others around you feel better, all of which taken offense to. That having a trait, not a god given trait, but one acquired, that is not attractive or is something the bears resemblance, to an offender, looking sharp, or looking healthy, or confident, that light is though to be a light, that was a derivative of the wellness of another by sex, and the attraction thought to be a derivative of privileges given, or spent, and not worthy of present affections condolences, or respect, that seeing you and being offended just looking at you, and that's entering an environment in which you don't fit in and standing out, and that discomfort from any rejections is not fitting in, and not being liked, being found to be offensive, and that you are responsible for those reactions toward you, whether by face, voice, or demeanor, how you are responded to. You can't control people, not by dress, or wellness, if someone does not recognize you as human, they will hurt your feeling and try to mold you into who they think you are based upon where you have been in life, that's to suit their best interests to turn you into a cherub troll or toxicity and offensiveness, not congruent to their best interests in being adored, shine, or made to feel special above others, that is why you are picked to roll low in life, and not situated among the well, because it is thought based upon comparisons, what you have in life, to love or love you not, based upon where you live, respected or treated or valued, or thought to have energy to spare in life, do not realize where you are, take as many cheap shots in life, until you find your self-worth. And that's how you get judged in life, me as a woman. I think others are thinking do I feel well not sounding well, of course not, I preferred to write articles and be in peace, not reflect upon worse moments in life, and especially not speak to those happenings to others, as though that's possible for all others, its all within you, how you see the world, and by your wellness, how you appear and are treated by others. Not all were fit for intimacy, and certainly not past the point of insult, usually causes one to behave in a strong way, or come across as manly. That is how a woman goes from being sweet to sound bitchy and offensive, with a negative attitude. Know that what is offensive to others is your candor, what is noticed is what is not attractive about you, and what is valued in others, is how womanly or sweet others become, as you light up in the negative about your life, that's you being in a moment of aggravation or moment of strength, or moment of seriousness, think about you with confusion as though your thoughts mislead, as though your ideas bite off of others, as though you do not build well thoughts with respect to other peoples thoughts, and to further define you by lawsuit, as though you are him, and consider me as offensive, too strong, or issues to big, to be considered from a well standpoint, as outside the realm of human decency to care about gun violence. If that is an issue to which you are not concerned, than maybe that is something being considered within me having nothing to do with anyone personally, maybe that's seeing something happening, and wanting to do something about it, and it starts with being out in the world and seeing how others are doing, that care, that's no staying sheltered to the interests of wellness of others, as though I live my life in a bubble only exposed to people who have been harmed, as though I help those who have been harmed by thinking of myself as important, you become important by helping people individually, that's not by helping a large number of people by speech, that's not how wellness works, its by job, its not by becoming famous, or by saying a bunch of right things, its job by job, why blogging is helpful but it is not the solution, to bettering my life, no matter how many people are listening, no matter how many people care, and that is the internal fight, the dialogue between who is connected I can hear, and myself not being afforded the space within my body to be alone, and stay calm, constantly responding and changing my condition to better meet the needs of who is attached to me, that is called being human.

Everyone Thinks for Themselves ...

That's your God given right to think for yourself, generally think for what's for your own good, without causing harm to the instincts of others, be misled or misdirected to believe in things that cause harm which don't such as socialization, going out, or getting in trouble, the human body is stronger than that, have faith, including my own viewpoints, and losses of faith in my ability to heal from whatever traumas were caused to me, upon cutting loose in life, or spreading my wings, experimental with my own body. When things are not right, expect hostility, that means either something is not right with you, as felt by another, treated differently, or something is not right with them, expect to be treated as though something is wrong with you, that's not accepting themselves as being off and keeping their distances from you, that's ignoring the peace, and distinguishing a feeling from being caused as by you, not wanting to be situated in the same realm of peace as you, that's seeing you as being off, and knowing what is wrong with you, your diagnosis, consider you the cause of disillusionment, as though people's energies can cause those results to occur in others, by being around them. That disappointment, are things not being perfect, not perfect for myself or others, and writing is therefore what? To make things better, not to articulate without solution, or having found solution to my own problems in life made progress, that's the difference between someone who gives up in life, versus someone who challenges themselves, believes in themselves, and doesn't give up on their abilities in life, to improve past a condition of self or others situated in, not believe things to be permanently wrong with self or others. Life is short the longer you wait to fix yourself, and the longer you allow yourself to be dragged down by things not important to your survival, such as what others think upon achieving wellness, or while accommodating others moods, take responsibility for who you are, what you're about, and what you think, feel sick, if another does not feel better by what you have to say, that's stating a problem, then creating an existence for that problem to occur, without solution, allow others to enter into a condition of frustration or illness, having believed a set of terms about you to exist, to which they played out loud, convinced of themselves that you are a low person, or low morale, who is disgusting, or benefits wrongfully, from the wellness of others, made not in love, but a human composed of wrong parts, two parts ill, with another part ill as influenced a Black contributor OJ. That's treating someone as lost, because of what makes them special consider them different, privileged, or not having recognized privileged, by gene, immune to the aging process, no that's staying home sober and not going out, and just like anyone else, am capable of being made tired working everyday, and lose face structure and wellness, that's normal, working to the bone, and some get tired under any working conditions, in which they have to force themselves to work, despite not feeling well, that's pushing themselves to extremes, some are capable of working anywhere, I am not one of them, easily get sick, overheated, or exhausted, hungry, or thirsty, or in need of a break, I'm not invincible, not at 35 and not at 22, clearly. I'm not insulting anyone's work conditions as not being suitable, that was my argument, with regards to someone I bedded who was younger than me, that the improv stage he performed in was too hot, I was overheated having hiked that day in Hollywood Hills, with friends from IOP, that's normal, to be tired, and disillusioned, or not mentally present to have conversation, but still showed up with my sister. I'm sorry if I'm not sharp enough presentable to empower others around me, and be looked at with pleasure, or with pride, I don't consider myself as a bad connection in life, and don't expect to be treated as though I am an offender to the best interests of others, or be considered a "rapist" as though I am the carrier of a disease, or retarded and mentally ill and psychiatrically radioactive spreading stupidity to anyone around me in my environment contagious, and mentally ill. That's how I feel when I get voices calling me a "pervert" as though my beauty comes from what it looked at as though I am not the creator of my own face and body, as though my improvements are to be created by undeserved wellness or gene, made a weaker human being, or less pretty, so that other traits predominate, my legs, or my face disorganized, to say that what my body looks like represents my potential to live the years to my life, or get married, give birth, and that I treat my body as though it's for use by anyone, to do as they please, and to use as they wish, or to take as they need, in order to improve themselves like a salad bar. When you look around you, that moment when you get sick, is what I feel everyone was waiting for, a moment of feeling lost, or not being apart of, to say that no one identifies with me, and Alice in Wonderland, as though I'm not relatable, as though my experiences are privileged, as though I don't know the meaning of life, until their kindness or care seems insulting, to me, then that's kindness turned anger, kindness turned resentment, and kindness turned strategy for reinforcing hate in support of wellness and unwanted attachment to populations of interests as being representative of ideas, that I tie into, civility of care, kindness of attention, and compare my cares to being unwanted terms, or conditions for the wellness of all, to care about gun violence, sobriety, or texting without response, as spreading a condition, of knowledge of responsibility to others to bring down the interests of them or to all. That is how I am treated, unwanted once, and unwanted all future interactions private, as though I was not at peace then without a filter pretty, not accepted, treated as gross dirty, and then punished, for having become suicidal upon rejections in life, or worry for my condition as mentally ill, which is to defend how I look by pictures, and after having slammed my head into a wall, defend that condition as being okay, that is an example of an argument I cannot win, and does not make me feel better to discuss. All I know is that the condition I am in presently does not improve the condition of myself now, and that through these discussions, only cause me illness, to give words for interpretation, that benefit the actions of others as seen, to treat me as stalker for looking, to defend another as having been sexual toward me, to say that they are not responsible for my condition, crossing legs at me, and popping their breasts in my face talk to me, whatever that was about that was looking at me and treating me as gay.

Accepting my Life as Different Now ...

I accept that I will not be liked by most, I understand that I am no ones sweetheart, nor America's sweetheart, I understand where I have been, and whats not to like about me, I get that I appear obnoxious or confident for no reason, thought to be by connections made by others, not by my own upbringing connected, I get that it is thought I was born into wellness and became mentally ill. That is not my fault that I have mental illness, now and was looked at as stupid, and those form my life, seeing themselves as above me, and I get that it is painful to hold discussions that if causes pain, also causes me pain too, no matter who is listening, attached, if they cannot relate, criticize my condition as being the source or cause of illness in thought as though even merely thinking congruent to me by reading, causes a feeling that's translatable to me, as though I do not recognize if I do not sound or feel well, compared to others, wonder what is wrong with me, that's being human, trying to understand conditions, ones own condition and the condition of others, make others feel better, by being asked for help, or being introduced to your world or bubble in life, and feel loved, but once you get in trouble, you get stuck with a bubble of illness, that is of disgust a force around you that makes others feel small or rejected or not smart, or powerless, that's not being able to change you or get through to you, and if they get to your heart sound dumb, as connected, that's not matching up with anyone in life, something stupid outside of you controlling whats within, to make whats within feel stupid, then as communicated sound stupid, that's being controlled by someone who does not like you, trust you, or think highly of you, versus hearing voices, lose motivations in life, that's not solution for gun violence my condition, to worsen, weaken, or interfere with the wellness of others having read through my own thoughts question me as being inaccurate or an inaccurate indicator or measure of the wellness and capability of everyone together as a whole, whether I am allowed to be apart of that wellness, online or in real life, or by job, accepted and included, that's someone seeing potential in me to help others, whether you are so convinced that you are not being helped, that does not give you permission to change my condition, or try to empower yourself among others to treat me as bad, until you feel good like youre doing the right thing, that's not how the right thing is done to the betterment of all, "turning someone in," labeling someone as "guilty" or communicating to everyone "this woman is mentally ill" to communicate to others "this woman has carcinoma cancer HPV" to say this woman upon going out gets done, and that's why those she was with, no longer wants her, and move on without her, that's to say "this woman gets sick on the street, upon people comfortable in the street hooking up with her" then say "she is gangster because she gets done in the street" then say its not "mans fault" because this woman, cannot stay well based upon who does her, expect her to look solid or be strong or stronger after having "looked stupid." -I get that my life is different now, and I understand the importance of outlook, I don't understand how people looking at my life, seeing bad things happen, blame me or themselves, for not preventing bad things from occurring, if that was your focus to resolve bad, by studying me, than that was your opinion of me as bad, for having recognized that bad things were occurring and writing a study, group me among high crimes and terrorism, as though I am supposed to resolve my condition as labeled criminal, and resolve that condition of terrorism, and criminality, as though I was responsible then or now, and supposed to explain, or lookover all conditions, make sense of the times, and reactions presently. That judging me as looking at all with judgment, then situating me, to make all look at me with judgement, as though I am the subject to their perspective as though I ever treated others as small, better than. I get that I can either ignore what was done to me, and focus on the positives and live a good life in the positive no matter who responds upon being well and wants to be apart of my life, I get that that happens when you are not well, others are mean to you, not responsible for your condition as though you are supposed to understand the meaning of life, wellness, sex, and companionship, as though you knowingly have been in a bubble of mental illness a force no one wants, and that you talking to anyone now, subjects them to entering the same bubble or force in life, or mental illness, why I was put in jail (2013, 2017). Im sorry I was punished #sober #bipolar now.

Polarized Interests ...

If you get voices my best advice is to stay calm and if you are hearing negative voices, or commentary from anyone who does not believe in you, and who seeks to prove polarized interests about you, stay true to your character. That's the difference between someone establishing "focal points" for you, like they do in art work, what stands out to you, and seeks to make what stands out to them fact about you, establish that you are something you are not, life is not about being molded to the concerns of others, nor are others expected to be molded by your concerns, controlled, that's being human, with respect for one another's beliefs, and if disinterested, not take personally, no one thinking you're anything special, that's everyone's right to see themselves as special deserving the best, even if it doesn't include you, that means that a later showing of intelligence such as a website, should make no difference, if it were to be proving anyone past wrong, who has since been detached from my happiness and their wellness not contingent upon my success or failure that's creating a fight, shedding light upon the life of another, a past incident, then them standing their ground when it comes to how you are identified in public, to better suit the needs of your past, as though you were something then that you were not, or am now something you are not, that is why people say things to you, upon leaving a relationship, its to suit their confidences about you, not with expectation of you bettering yourself in spite of them, that's seeing things as a fight, that's just life, you are close with people, and they may say things to you that you in the immediate are not hurt by but later think of, and feel insulted, that is just how people are that's not being vindictive, that's just not seeing your potential to shine, or to do well in life, and that's how some people are for your best interests or for their own best interests protecting themselves, not wanting to look bad when you look good, or thinking you look good because they look bad then blame you as being the cause for what they look like after having known you, that's why people stay separate or do not communicate, that's not love, that's symbiosis, that's without political preference or know how, that's friendship, that's not how work is, and that's not why work is brought, up, and that's not how I should be harmed to empower people with money who did not hire me, who I did not have the skills or know how to work for them in a paid position, that's making me look like I felt entitled to employment or pay, I don't care at this point, that's their life, and this is my life, and if we do not share a life, I do not need help from anyone past, who has a life of their own, that's their choice, to not include me in their life. And if someone is nice to you, yes talking about the demise of a friendship or relationship is abrasive to anyone listening including myself, its like ripping my heart out and stomping on my face like I deserve it, until I appear stupid and they look better, that wellness they experience post me being in their lives, is their life, not their life as defined without me being in it, and to mention is considered an insult to them. I treat everyone in my life as important, so to be treated as someone with behavioral health issues, or an addict, or alcoholic, making things about myself and my condition, does not make anything better, I cannot help the fact that I am on night meds for sleep and day meds for functioning in the daytime, that is a condition about myself that I cannot change and if that is no one's fault, that doesn't mean that it is my fault, based upon how many times I've gone out, drank beer or cocktails, and whether I got sick, if I cannot perform in public as normal, and start talking to myself, that's my inability to manage my own discomforts in life, its called being lost, not fitting in, everyone else solid, or not confident, and me either immune or not from the wellness of others around me, I stay in my own portal in life, so please do not treat me as though I do not value my own life and wellness and purposefully ever subject myself or others to harm, and if I have not been stellar in public I apologize that should not affect everyone here now, to know what I was like before I had a website, I was small, an "introvert" as my ex-boss described me, and for whatever reasons that came to be, Im sorry that I looked like an uncomfortable reject in life, I always do my best to report, Im not street, Im not confident, and if I stand out that's MY WELLNESS.

Practice Kindness ...

That's not discomfort, that's being abrasive, whenever a woman asserts herself past or presently, to an unbeknownst audience member, who takes insult to the seriousness of another, as being about their needs, or their condition, as affected, placing them in the shoes of the listener, that's like fear, feeling overwhelmed by the feelings of another, that's not misunderstanding, that's hearing what someone else has to say, and being unapologetically indifferent, that's to say that what one person has to say, is not representative of all women, just about themselves, a source of their own emotions, feelings discomforts in life, or unhappinesses, as though how one looks or sounds an imagined manifestation of what they think happened, without knowing what happened. That acceptance and non-response to you, as emotional, is an unwillingness to help, treat who feel aggravated as the creator of their own condition, no the LAPD replied to my email and told me to report what I had to say and what I was feeling, that was with concern, for what was posted, agreeing with me that that was inappropriate, and so did Twitter, comply with my request to please have those tweets removed. It doesn't matter who saw how I was harmed, that would defeat the purpose of having something taken down that caused me harm. This is to highlight or draw a relationship to what was taken down by me a poster, of Barack Obama painted as the Joker a "villain" which I found at the time to stand out in a bad way on Wilshire. It doesn't matter the reasons internal, but thought that that was an inappropriate representation of the First African American President of the United States, before the gun violence pandemic erupted. Because I went to Law School I was treated like my Mom, my Dad, and OJ, someone who was interviewed for responses, to see what they had to say, as though what I was saying was spoken in reflection to their interests, if I am the daughter and daughter-like figure to them growing up, then yes their best interests are at heart, and because I grew up around someone Black in the 90s, that I could empathize with President Obama, upon his inauguration, and based on what was occurring around me in West Hollywood, reported to him, and unusual activity, either coming from others, or from myself, that's something he has a right to know, whether there is movement socially, and if there was movement socially why, and because a bouncer was shot in West Hollywood, then it made sense for me to report to his White House website 2008 that I would eventually speak, after reading a blog and the news about the Simpson Case at age 22, and a deposition, see from an outsiders perspective wanting to know more about those who were close to the family, and to what effect, the victim was displaced prior to the time a Homicide was committed in the neighborhood, as a matter of "professional responsibility" a board game I was begged to play leaving a bar Qs, and made to give a blow job until I threw up, after telling this person trying to talk to me, that I was not interested and going through a breakup. He seemed to be insulted, and then followed me outside walking to my car to convince me to hang out, which wasn't to hang out, was for a sexual favor, not to be a friend, which was the ending to attacks from an Ex who demanded I drive to Yorba Linda, after flying to DC, interrogated to, to ask if I had hooked up with anyone to tell him if we were to remain friends. And that was his version of letting go, until I started punching my head, making me feel bad about myself, as though it was my fault I was taken advantage of, by a UCLA Law Student. He asked me to pick a movie and I picked the movie: Snatch. -I think I am way out of my league when it comes to re-introducing a case into public discourse, and I am sure that anything I have to say will sound dumb, treated as though oh we already knew that, or we don't care get over it, or youre stupid deserved to be made fun of esoterically, or accused of reading a deposition because there was a deposition scene in the Movie: Clueless. No it all appears as though my exposures made me make choices in life, but it was upon searching my own name on Google while looking for and applying for jobs 2008, that I discovered I was a named person in a deposition by Petrocelli, who I found out does International Corporation defense, and works for O'Melveny & Meyers, a company a recruiter on LinkedIn messaged me to apply for a job opening there once during probation. I just don't think I'm ready to go back into the world, until I have said everything that needs to be said to not be looked at as though I create or make up problems, be called a "fraud" or make it okay for everyone else to make money off of me making fun of me, because that's okay for them to do. If it was a dream to work in film and if I dedicated a few years to Twittering lines, and PDF-ing them, then sure that was a huge accomplishment, to take my scripts PDFs to a Movie Lot in West Hollywood, to me that was a fun experience, my work in my computer on the premises of a location that creates films for a living. To me that was something occurring within me, a secret accomplishment, a source of pride, not a strategy for extending my campaign interests in a way, that was a gamble or asking for any favors, I notified Brady Campaign of where I was working, and what field I was working in just like when I worked for Farmers Insurance, and my Boss went to a gun show, and had me make an excel spreadsheet of gun and knife dealers, that was a situation to notify him I volunteer for Brady, why it was on my resume for the job in Film I took 2018, if it looks like a manufactured Campaign that seems instable to your best interests, and which you feel shot should anything happen, as connected to someone who supports Brady, then don't put my cares at the forefront of your responsibilities in life to care for them also. Be yourself. And should things not go right for them, explains why I am home, writing daily, so that chaos does not erupt, racially, or figuratively get out of control interpretation wise, lend power into the wrong hands in life, someone who does not wish to be apart of, and excluding from discussion or care, such as myself, or an offender, or Brady an organization that has been around for years, not built to respond to mass shootings, in response to "overall happiness" with the nation as a whole, birth "manifesto shooters" then compare my writing, to a persuasive writing seeing myself as apart from others, which is how Ive been situated, someone who wanted to be famous, and did something to become famous, that is being argued hurts others, as though fame is the end goal, fame is what is given to someone who works hard, and stand out from among their peers recognized and as identified, looked to, as someone who got somewhere in life, few have been able to get, that's being noticed, being well. But just like anyone can get sick, so can someone in the limelight online, and in a manufactured sense, can be dismantled, to cast shadows or "composite sketches" of others over my face, compared, is wrong, to compare someone as being big in a destructive way, after having built something that attracts. Im sorry I made a “recruiter” joke, it was in response to others in my life inspired to lead.

Waking Up Disheveled ...

We don't all wake up feeling good, and some mornings you may wake up more tired than usual, accept your condition as normal, for those of us with voices, who may or may not self-harm, that's a choice, not to take good care of oneself, or “self-love” for that matter, I don't think that self-love means sex with ones self, that's a really demeaning approach to treatment of individuals who choose not to date or engage in close relationships with people, take personally, and credit wellness to a derogatory approach of feeling good via self-stimulation, that would be treating someone as a self soother and then criticizing them as someone who self soothes in order to feel well, take offense as though one self soothes because others do not make them feel good, well if Im not feeling good, then do not look at my face (2013) and say that I left to look like how I look now, how am I supposed to know my own potential without a companion see what my face looks upon disconnect sexually from another in a loving relationship. I wouldn't know what the cause for that is, so please don't attack me as though I did not take good care of myself then, if my studies were what were focused on, if Im not looking to get laid, and not looking for attentions from men, then please do not treat me as though by photos there was something wrong with me because I was not appealing looking by looking at my face, as though I purposefully did not look pretty to cause other people to become dinterested in me, or feel groosed out by the way my face looked, if its something I could not figure out then beauty changes, then it is not something now a skill that I have accomplished would have known to do then, running, exercise, and more makeup. I think the facebook messenger alterations are helpful because on video basically you have to be pleasing to look at, whats more important is what I am saying and I would rather look good saying what I am saying, without looking grose, and say something important, and not be listened to, thinking what I have to say is grose because my face looks grose, and argue that because my face looks grose, that is because what I have to say or what I am thinking is grose. If I do not get pleasure from sex, but love to love others, than that is me giving love, and when I decide not to give love, that must mean that I am too tired to give love to another or unwilling to give love to another, all women are allowed that time to rest and recuperate in between loving someone, recognizing their strengths again, and then choose to love again and open up, its an internal reaction, to no be accepting of connections when you are broken or do not feel good, when you have given it your all and things don't work out, or when you are minding your own business, nice back to someone who makes you look stupid, that's being a woman. You never know how things will look so long as you put out in life, you are made to look like the bringer of your own unhappiness and chaos in life, as though you have sex to feel good and if you do not feel good, then that is why because you expect to feel good by doing something with someone and expecting a feeling back to you, if you do not feel good, you cannot give a feeling or receive a feeling. That's basic physics when it comes to sex. Im not sure whether the same standards are being applied to my blogging abilities, well if she cant accept D into her life, than how can she take care of readers. Its not a sexual encounter its not an exchange to write and read, that improves or decreases an ability within called confidence related to self-esteem called self-worth, which is your ability to feel good, be considered new or stand out in a good way, and not stand out in a bad way, tell something is wrong with you, that is being done and not being able to recognize your face, that's not being yourself, done in life. It's a big learning lesson you later come to realize in life, that anyone who touches you becomes apart of you whether you like it or not, whether that's a deep bond, but someone benefits, even if its not you.

Understanding People ...

You may not feel as well as others, but that doesn't mean that there is something wrong with you. Anything made with hate, anything made in competition, any improvements intended to prove others wrong, and any behavior that is not congruent with respect to everyone around you, is considered a downer, a disappointment, that's you looking like you're ahead in life or going places in life, and is what makes other people feel bad about themselves seeing you, in the reverse don't let them win, and prove them right, gain 50lbs, and stop living life, that's not the correct response to let yourself go in life, whether or not you deserve to be put down or let go in life, there are other jobs, that doesn't mean that you didn't do a good job while you were working, and that's where the unwanted politics come from, how you look compared to how another looks, set in competition with, there can be no competition, where there lies no competition, and there can be no comparisons, where there are no similarities, or standards from which to base or compare the wellness of one another to. That's being yourself, and then there is vanity, either not like yourself, not liking what you have to see, and not feeling well, whether that's looking at yourself in the mirror, or seeing others, a negative judgment. It is your responsibility, to feel well, and this is why, so that no matter who you are around and no matter what you hear or see, know that it's not about you one (in professional form) or two (in physical form) your body or your mind, when it comes to the health of others, does not affect, and that's being human, understanding your own wellness, the privacy of your body internally. That is how voices hurt, you don't have privacy within your body, and whether you like what you're hearing or not, do not feel well, and that is internal communication, your body not feeling well, upon what it is hearing internally an "auditory delusion" then there is being around people, not taking that system of internal communication that is causing you illness, to the external, and this is why treating people as you wish to be treated comes from, not doing things or saying things, whether someone is intelligent or not, that would offend them upon being seen, think communicate a separate not said statement by you, so as to offend by pictures or by words, anyone who is displayed, and that's not wanting to be used for demonstration or to aide you in communicating your interests or seem like you are communicating the interests of those displayed. I am a very professional person, maybe not an "introvert" but a quiet person, whatever that meant then as compared to now, and maybe not confident, I can speak, and do not need help having anyone speak for me, that is the difference between a professional and someone who is not professional, someone who needs representation versus someone in the condition they have been given in life, able to speak for themselves. I am in a condition right now, that I have never been in in my entire life, hearing voices or hitting my head, and that is not because I was called an introvert, and that is not because others thought I was gay, and that is not because I was an athlete, and that is not because I did not get into good schools, and that is not because I have not tried hard in life, and that is not because I was promiscuous, and that is not because I tried drugs or alcohol, and is not because of who my friends are, it has everything always to do, with what I am doing with my life, and whether what I am doing with my life feels good to me, I am not social, so I wouldn't know where voices come from, but if I have not presented myself in public past properly, I am sorry, there is no going back from being known in the negative, that is just how people will treat you as mentally ill, or an alcoholic, or obnoxious, and there is nothing anyone can do to change your face or your body except for exercise, and try not to internalize everything or take things personally in life, and allow them to change you.

Tips and Tricks When You're Not Feeling Good ...

Learn to lighten up, you're only as big as the secrets you keep, stay feeling good. If its "whats inside that counts" then it should matter to you, to figure out, how to manage whats going on internally, to promote better outcomes for you moving forward. According to verywellmind.com, "There are two main types of coping skills: problem-based coping and emotion-based coping." [1] The difference between the two strategies lies, in the realm of control, whats in your control to manage versus what is not in your control to fix. Yes it is possible to trick yourself into ways of thinking or coping to better suit your interests such as taking your own side to an argument, not supporting a side to an argument, surrounding yourself with things and people that better suit your needs, or separating yourself from situations that no longer bring you happiness. You are your own pawn in the game of life, and sometimes we don't have a choice in the matter, things happening to us, or things ongoing in our lives that we cant escape from, such as responsibilities, deadlines, and commitments. Stay loyal to what matters to you, without hurting yourself in the process of complying with what you think will make you or others feel good, and inherit a whole host of additional problems in your life, you're not ready to take on. What do I mean? It has been said that "it's up to you to decide which type of coping skill is likely to work best for you in your particular circumstance." [2] Sometimes only you know what is needed in order to better yourself, we all eventually become adults, and have to figure out how to live life and live life well, but its not always easy to do so. Sometimes life is challenging such as now, when we are not excelling in life, or limited, such as wearing face masks, or running out of money, due to job loss, or inability to find a paying job, with limited opportunities available, these are just facts of life, sometimes we need things to get done, get paychecks, but don't have paychecks, or need to do laundry, and have something to do, we merely just need to get started in order for things to get done. Know whats in your power to control and get done, and recognize whats not in your power, and you need to better situate yourself in life for, in order to make happen, like marriage or dating. This is when we ask ourselves "is what we are doing right now going to help us get to where we want to be in life" and from there you make changes, not only to accommodate your goals in life, but also to accommodate the future interests of someone coming into your life, be sure about you, like a job, or a date, or a husband, and this is where image and confidence come into play. Does how you feel mirror what your needs in life are, do you represent those qualities or traits, that demonstrate that you deserve to have those things in life, why or why not, and go from there. This is why "having healthy coping skills can be key to getting through tough times." [3] Recognize that youre not perfect, and we don't have it all, it may not feel good to be you sometimes, but that doesn't mean give up in life all together, simply because you have nothing, no fancy wardrobe, not fancy job, no fancy car, no fancy boyfriend, and no fancy website, or a fancy education. That doesn't mean that there are limited spots in life, when it comes to wellness, there is always room to fill in an auditorium dedicated to people being well and feeling well, and that's how you should look at life, not by the opportunities available to achieve wellness, but by your spot in life, making the most of what you do have in life, and filling up your spot in earth well, by staying well, appreciating whats around you, and what you do have in life, not basing your value on what you do not have in life, a fancy boyfriend, a fancy car, a fancy home, or a fancy education. You don't need many connections or many friends in order to appear well to others, we cant all be celebrities, with stellar Instagrams or Facebooks, with lives recorded to be viewed by others, that's not how everyone lives life, recorded and remembered, most of us live life, without taking pictures or having pictures of every well moment from our lives for review by others. I grew up with disposable cameras, if I had any pictures with friends in college it was by disposable camera, we didn't get to review what a photo looked like, we just took photos, and found out later what we looked like in a photo, and those were the years that no bad photos were taken, and every photo we appeared well in, that's being photographed, and knowing that you are being photographed, and appearing well to be photographed upon the camera clicking. That was how life was life, before digital image saves of life, and that is how sometimes life changes. You may not always adjust to the reality of the times, and if its possible sometimes we engage in activities without understanding the repercussions for sharing what we look like during different conditions of life, or different phases of life, or during times of sickness not shine, that's not your fault if you don't look well, or don't appear well, and I assure you that's not why you are not treated well by others, based off of what you look like, compared or not, it has more to do with how you feel, in writing, by message, and by condition (meds or not) that dictate treatment of you. So its okay to share when you were not feeling well, but not at your own expense, broadcast to the world, how you were whether that was drinking or trying drugs, and build acceptance for those conditions as being normal those conditions are not normal, shortening your life, losing friends, being alone, not being social, not feeling well, not looking well, and self-harming. Addiction, is intake without having an upper limit to that intake, and not feeling well upon taking in a substance that causes your mind and body to rot, or shortens your life, that's not reading or looking at pictures whether that be movies, or songs, that's not a physical change looking at something or reading something, that doesn't change your physical biochemical makeup to match someones face or body, that you are in disagreement with, that's not what stirs illness toward you, illness toward you, occurs when by who you are and by what you are doing in life others are in disagreement with, and its your condition on meds, that make you more susceptible to catching a disease or disorder, how anti-psychotics fail and how I got carcinoma cancer with my body's defenses down on medication, for mood stability, got carcinoma cancer, that's not because of what I looked like, how clean my apartment was, or how I dressed cheap or not deserved, and its not because I drank alone at the bars, but I do know my face changed drinking.

Too Much Blogging ...

Always maintain a certain comfort zone when it comes to talking about life. Its not meant to be shocking, or to make myself uncomfortable, or to cause others to become nervous, if so just means that there is disagreement, not how someone wants to hear you talking, doesn't think you should be talking, doesn't want to hear from you, or hear anything you have to say. That is someone who does not see you as smart, it therefore doesn't matter whether you make sense, have something helpful to say, or if everything makes sense knowing you, that's the gift of being new, standing out, or meeting others, who want to talk to you, that's not always the case, if people know you differently, or don't respect you, that's just human nature to be shy, no Sociology degree is required to think about life, or about people from your life, its when you have to start thinking about or be concerned about people around you you don't know, that you are paranoid, or thinking everything is about you, as though everyone is reading youre blog, they are not, people have their own lives, and their own problems, and this when it can be said that life is short, and see someone as wasting their time on earth, and not see their life as having been lived well, and this is where insults come into play, to convince you you are something you are not until you self harm, to make a Black Swan comment in reference to a building or 9/11 Memorial, to then say I have an obsession with Memorials or the lives of others, or think as anything to do with me, or would respond in the negative to something built to memorialize the lives of those who have been lost during times of war, that is for them, not for my reference, when it comes to understanding life, or how people are to be remembered. I think when I first joined Instagram, I did not discuss things in a way thoughtfully enough, to be understood as with concern, or with forethought, or prevention in mind, that's claiming to be something you are not, simply calling 911, or reporting an incident, or something happening to someone else in your family, does not make you an expert in causes for crime to people you know, including yourself, maybe later on in life, mistreated without proof, sometimes you get hurt in life, and its not intended because they know you as connected to someone famous, but because of how you are, is being argued in a later condition as mentally ill talking to myself, as the cause for me being treated like Im stupid or not smart I cant remember enough times that I was ever treated that way, to deserve the number of voices I hear. Which is not through writing, and its not by reading as though I am the reader, and no my writing does not make the reader of my writing a writer, not especially in the condition that I am now, looked at in the positive. The later you arrive to life, the worse you look, and that's to say, you were never anyone important, you were never a good person, you meant nothing to people, you don't matter, is what someone new sees you as, who are you, why should I care, why are you writing so much, and what is your writing for, and based on what your writing is for, what are you trying to demonstrate in life, and what condition exemplifies, what is needed by you or others. I think everyone is doing well in their own worlds, I do not think that anyone needs to change based on anything I have said, and I do not think my condition now improves anyone elses. If that is why I am being given voices, as though I have something important to say to help now, and if I care does that mean that I have guilt for the conditions now, not having tried hard enough, over the past four years, and how I was able to do well now, writing for 4 years, and why am I pushing myself now after being hurt and seem to be writing more, because I was forced to defend myself and share all intimate details about my life past stated and now, and that's not to build trust or a better understanding of me, its to acknowledge what went wrong, that's not to say that what I was doing then drinking or enjoying life was okay. Why I do not go out, have never gone out, do not drink or do drugs, and stayed in school, that's not strength when a Country is battling COVID and its not an argument in support of my mental health issues as being normal, nor do I understand or comprehend why I have mental health issues, I am always doing my best, and its most likely a product of trying cocaine and drinking alcohol. Which is why I am sober now, I am not trying to be funny in an uncomfortable way, and understand that I am not liked when I am not funny, and its expected for me to be like this.

When Someone Doesn't Stop ...

When someone doesn't stop hurting you, its not until you experience mental illness, that they feel better, that's sending you off in the wrong direction in life disorganized, and writing to the point of not making sense or sounding of importance anymore. That's someone being sure about you in life, and treating you how they think you deserve to be treated like a whore. And that's when it no longer becomes acceptable for you to be around people, work, or be social, and explains why I stayed home for 4 years and worked only Summer 2017 and Fall 2018, and have been resting since then. That's not prepared for the politics of acceptance now or past, to likewise be treated worse than I was ever treated to my face, this is a new condition, with the capability of getting worse not better, through blogging. When you speak to something it happens, and that's how it happens if you describe how you think you were harmed or how others treated you when you think you were harmed, then that's how people in the future treat you as not accepting of your condition, as though they have done nothing wrong, subject you in the limelight to harm by others, as you present yourself without knowing to what calls to action it was communicated to everyone not to respect you or to think less of you. That's how you turn a good life into a bad life, and then all choices made post socialization, and work, are even more support for mistreatment of you if you decide not to work and socialize. How friendships turn into politics, how family members turn into sides, and how you get torn or beat up in life, as though you don't belong anywhere, and have not done well in life in support of others, that's how one fails in life, and does not return back to a good life, upon not fixing their lives as given to them in life, and with all opportunities afforded to them to get help, and let someone who has not been through the same number of hospitalizations, or public humiliations, as I have, being sent to rehab, or hospital, for not performing well under pressure, and not performing to the standards expected considered smart, for not working hard enough, with a job and being in law school, not good enough by the standards of others in law school part-time, and that's not being well, and not an over-achiever, or a high performer in life. Im not sure what that means to others, if you are slow, or not on all cylinders, or when that is expected to occur for anyone in life, and why, and Im not sure how drinking, or past drug use, or relapses, affected my condition to be punished or rejected from establishments, as trash. That is just life, no one will tell you what it is that's wrong with you, will only exclude you. And that is how you figure out not to go anywhere where you don't know anyone, and why now anywhere you go, there is a 1 in 10% chance that someone will see you and not like you, or talk loud over to you, acknowledging your presence and expecting you to hear them, that's Im not sure what that is? Not something I care about, but yes affects my phycially, even if I don't know where it is coming from, or why. Such as getting a hemangioma this Spring, following not graduating February 2020, missing a deadline, and Kobe Bryant's helicopter crashed in the mountains. That was shocking. That also doesn't mean that if I am not at peace, that something could go wrong in another persons life, be affected luck wise. And that is the moment you become human, recognizing that your condition, is to be valued, and that no matter what you go through in life, not to be someone worth hating, subject oneself to harm, or be used as a puppet, to corroborate with known incidences of natural disasters, claim that one person is responsible for all known natural disasters, as though one was known to all, influenced anyone for that matter to care in a way that was offensive to anyone overhead, or now referenced to. And that is how something happens, as an example, of treating a Country like its not until something happens, that a Country feels like another Country, as though it is the responsibility of each Country to feel like eachother in order to understand eachother, or prevent misunderstandings between people, and or Country's accept responsibility for discord in other Country's as though one another influences the health or viewpoint of the other for the better. And this is how someone new in public, gets hurt, as though ones condition as private, was not good enough then and not good enough now to be presented in public, as known, and with reference to all other natural forming conditions, be looked at, to see whether I did a good job speaking, and if what was spoken to, did a good job of representing what was needed at the time. That is advocacy, "what is needed at the time" that is "quoting me right now" those " are for "emphasizing what is important in what I am writing" "maybe something you should remember" that's "not to be obnoxious" about writing as though I can control "poignancy" or what is to be remembered about me or others, the story-teller, or story-maker, or story-explainer, or story-supporter, you can either accept the beauty of life, or you can call everything out "tea kettle black" everytime you see something that makes sense, make others feel bad or look stupid, as not having done a good enough job representing the truth, about the past. When the truth is represented in building and books, that's not to do away with an issue that's to resolve an issue of misunderstanding, to create understanding, that is what words are for. And the more you accommodate hate, the more you bring into account, the needs of someone who does not believe in you, and who does that serve "God" or the "Justice System" or "themselves" deciding who "their human punching bag should be for answers in life" I don't think that person is me, I think I was gifted an opportunity to speak, for so long as I am well. That's the "times up over blow" by Eminem, its once you F up, and become disillusioned, and go back to reality, like starting a new job, or applying for jobs, you realize, youre not that important, you have a long way to go, youre not there yet, youre not in the best shape, you could be doing better, youre not doing a good job right now, with hope: you'll feel better. Some people have time for fun, and while that was fun to vlog and model in private, we are again in a State of mourning, and yes I did call NTSB, because I messaged them and yes this is an NTSB issue, form where was faith lost, and on whos merits was faith transferred, how and why? Edd. That is my mistake, asking for help from the Government, afforded a privileged then they were hurt, because they gave money to me, that was then given to someone random, and I got hurt. That was my savings and the money earned following graduating and starting life over again. It always seems to happen that way, starting life over again in the negative, you guys actually didn't need to crash Kobe Bryant's helicopter, to make us feel like Malaysia, I posted flyers. That's not okay, to treat people as stupid, and when lives are in your hands, to put lives in jeopardy, or use an iPad to fly a wealthy family, as though we are to remember Aaliyah by this. We all know what happened, as representing oneself, in response to the other, they all did their best, and for whatever wrongs they did commit, does not mean that was done purposefully.

You are only given so many chances in life to make a good impression, always do your best. Then there are times you can't go back from, a bad opinion, or a poor impression. That you may feel you cannot reverse, illness toward you as expressed by others upon looking at you, that's not something that will be communicated to you in the immediate, not liking you, and don't waste time wondering about those who did not care for you either, just be happy that they are doing well or have moved on in life, or not in your life permanently try to make sense of those interactions in life, however few. If someone does you dirty in life, that is because they think you deserve it by looking at you, thinking you are stupid and deserve to be made to look stupid to everyone, and especially in front of the world, whether you have 65 or 64k monthly viewers attached to your Pinterest which is attached to your website. What exactly is the cause for noticing someone, is it that they feel drawn to a condition to better, or is it being drawn to a condition that betters. That is what is being decided, whether in sickness, that creates a condition to feel sorry for or pay attention to, and what causes empathy, or loss of enthusiasm. Consider loss of enthusiasm, a poor condition, or a wellness concern for future reference, not necessarily the fault of the writer, or the reader, it just means like all things that lose a good feeling, not a match for wellness, and that's how things can be going well communicating to people, and then for people to have a change of heart about you, and not feel so well around you, either you have disappointed them, or you have spoken to something not needing to be spoken about, as it relates to your timeline of conditions in life, in support of those who have suffered elsewhere, absent minded you, with nothing to do with your potential, and mostly to do with the wellness of everyone else around them, be in tune to, and make feel special. Before you know it, if you don't stay stable as a blogger, you will have convinced others to not like you, or share insights to justify their hate, before arriving to a point of personal defense to hate, that's the natural transition of an argument or disagreement, to first interpret what is wrong, then to figure out from where the harm is coming from, then assess where one is at mentally, the calculate to what effect that will have on others, and this usually occurs after responding in the negative, not feeling well, or becoming an unhappy person, as directed about how you are feeling, based on how you were made to feel, on top of everything else going on in your life. And as you explain what you are going through, and as the person who harmed you thinks and recuperates from hating you in public, there is illness, that is not feeling well, that no matter how many moments were good, no good moments can repair, a bad moment with, or that sense of peace you experienced being well and sharing wellness to another, that is watching you as you were coming up in private, hearing you share in private, upon speaking to someone, them watching you change, and grow your blog, and then as disinterested, or upon being social, experience a change in condition reported, which the FBI punished them for, and he punished me for, by sharing photos demanded for with threat, and upon complying showed everyone, that was without expectation for being shared, because was told that was for agreement to not cause me harm, or to maintain a relationship, I no longer felt compelled to have or be with, hated. -When you stop looking special, which is now, whether by energy, look or a quality felt an impression made of wellness upon another or sickness by interpretation of sight, seeing beauty within or feeling illness by, that's wellness, the one who hated you well, while you remain sick, and that if you improve or get well again, wanting to be in your life again, well. That's the basics of hate, done because thought deserved, without expectation of you recovering from a condition caused to purposefully destroy you, and rising above anyways with 65-64k monthly viewers, and running sprints, and punching your head, that's not allowing hate to win, and doing you best in spite of being hated, and doing your best to improve no matter who hates you and try to understand why someone hates you, and imagine the possibilities. That is how you lose your color, under a cloud of hate, and the other who hates you shines, or feels better, that their condition has neither been tainted nor ruined by your circumstances in life, that is being hurt, someone who in order not to be hurt, hurts the other, so they feel better. If I am not someone who makes other people feel sick, and if I am not someone who is selfish, and if I am not someone who gives others the silent treatment, and if I am not someone who ignores others, and if I am not someone made to detach from others, that is because I looked sick, or disgusting to most or those who hated me, and did not want to see me being sexy to anyone for that matter or see me in the condition of being feminine, preferred professional. That is a condition I only share with a lover or companion, me in feminine mode.

If It Makes Anyone Feel Better ...

10/4/2020

I have lived a hard life, under many different conditions mental health wise, and have been able to overcome those conditions, with or without the support from others, other than my family. No one can motivate you to try harder, if you don't listen, or are thinking or behaving in a way the demonstrates that you have given up in life or mentally ill, its not a condition you give in to, like sex, it's a condition that overcomes you, it's a feeling you think, and then by not thinking in the positive consumes you, so that everything else thought matches to that feeling, whether to justify that feeling, or try to understand why you are feeling that way, think about moments you can remember, and wonder whether those were the moments or causes contributing to your illness, I don't think people have that much power over you, to cause a condition to you, whether or not they know you, or thinking something and speaking differently to you, and for you not to know why you are not feeling well, or experiencing difficulties in life. There is being well, and there is not feeling well, a lot of not feeling well has to do with having money, not feeling comfortable, and working hard toward achieving a condition to be employed, that's being set behind in life, not having the comfort of achievement under you belt, work experience paid, to negotiate with anyone for a paid position, especially after having been hospitalized 9x bipolar, that's not being able to stay well sober, and not know or understand why, means it doesn't matter where I am in life, work wise, or school wise, if I cannot stay well on my own, means that I will not stay well even in a nice environment to work, which is why I filed for disability, given my condition having been hospitalized 9x on 5150 holds "gravely disabled" without harm to self or others, was the box checked, that was 2009. Mental health issues are not always occurring because you or anyone are doing anything wrong, its something within you that is unstable and not able to maintain stability on your own, it doesn't matter where you are, or who you are with, that's doesn't mean youre not smart or not a good person. But it will make it difficult to date or to be well received at work, should you not stay well, with expectation of you being able to work hard for 8 hours a day solid, and not be able to, only able to work at most 5 hours a day, that has nothing to do with focus, and everything to do with work ethic, and becoming tired easily, such as having learning disability, those conditions then were different than they are now, when it becomes about your health, that is what is in question, you have to try harder, to prove that you are not mentally ill in the sense that your thoughts are grose, and them thinking your thoughts are grose why your face is grose, so that no one feels responsible for you looking grose, my face and my body, whether credited to what was thought about me, or by what was thought of myself, is my responsibility to correct that's not a public issue, nor the cause for mental illness what I look like or bipolar, I am not delusional in the sense that I look at myself and see myself as grose, maybe bigger than I am, body dysmorphia, and maybe never skinny enough, kept getting smaller, that's just my body type proportionate, that I cannot change upon losing weight, becoming more attractive or pretty, and if at my core self minus 50 lbs, I was not well received, that is because I was looked at as grose or stupid or over-confident for the wrong reasons and not impressive, kept out. That is to say that my behavior is inappropriate or in a room full of people demonstrates the type of personality to be ignored, as though me under the influence lets out a different set of characteristics or traits within disagreeable to the tastes of most, which is looking like I do not care about what others think, which is me focusing on myself confident, offended by looking at me, someone who thinks theyre important, without knowing anyone, treated as weird. This is why you do not show up anywhere where you do not know anyone, and do not go out alone, that is how you end up performing to an audience, or talking to yourself upon observation by others not make sense, and that is to compare me to someone who shouts at people, or thinks less of people, or sees myself as above others speaking to others, as though they could be listening, that's not understanding taking risks in life, to open up in public, and practicing first.

New to the Scene ...

There will come a point in time in your waking years, when you lose enthusiasm for the present or for others, always keep a kind heart, that's "being young at heart." Its will awareness of things being well, and being happy for others, upon seeing those who are well, and then there is disappointment, naturally occurring upon illness, whether or not that is our fault, or based upon our choices made to not feel well, then there is being done dirty in life. Never fear a competitive edge thrown by someone, be intimidated, if you were first to stand guard. Its just The White House, no connection really, ruins a connection made, that should not make one feel less special, or not capable of the same, you earn your stripes in life, and accept offenses along the way, of people thinking you are not deserving of being special, think special only because someone died of homicide, be treated as being known, knowing you, and uncomfortable by the fact that they know you, and you don't know them, let you know, by ignoring you, that's seeing you, and wanting to see how you respond not being helped, left waiting in an aisle, that's shopping at Sephora, waiting for someone to match you with your color, in Fenty cover up. I was actually really patient that day it hadn't hit me yet, whether what was being done to me was to alert me, that they did not want to help me, and went around and bought over $100 worth of items anyways from every aisle, that's spending money, in spite of being ignored, to show not offended, and taking the upper hand, giving money to an establishment that left you waiting to be helped, with expectation of being helped, and not leaving or being upset by the wait time, take it personally, or think for two seconds, I am known and this is being done purposefully. Like buying shirts for AFM at the mall, they closed down the entire mall, I was told to buy blue shirts preferably collared, for the event, then my ticket bought, got cash from my Mom for $900, was give to another paid employee, engineer, put their name on a ticket with my money, that's being told "youre not ready" to meet who in life, or socialize during cocktail hour schmooze, someone who has never seen you light up or be social, will not believe that you are someone with social skills, that's not for work, that animated light the room up positive trait, that's saved for special occasions, trying hard to impress a room or be approachable make conversation with strangers, that's not a skill I am intimidated by or don't have in life, but if you are seen as someone lacking people skills, then that's how you are treated, as timid as you seem to, likely to be timid to strangers approaching you in a professionally ticketed environment. That was running on the beach instead of working from home and then late to AFM. I was so devastated, I ran for 2.5 hours in the rain and mud, and sprained by knee, then ran for 2.5 hours with a sprained knee in the sand with a brace in purple headphones, because my white headphones kept breaking (one ear out) I invested in a more sturdy pair (purple beatsbydre headphones from the Apple Store), and was crying wailing in my room pouring tears the night before I ran on the beach, at my desk, the walked to work with a sprained knee, I couldn't bend my knee, and had difficulty walking without a limp, injured. That's an example of having an emotional reaction, following having your hopes up and excited and working hard toward being given permission and then paying for the position, and then losing money, as though you have money, see how you respond upon losing a lot of money. Because that is what happened at work, when there was gun violence in Florida, that is what happened to me again by stranger, this time upon being given $13,000 from edd.gov, $7000 that was deposited to a card issued to me, was immediately asked for money in increments of $1000, and by pre-paid cards, that's after posting my Dissertation, treated, while my head was gone, following modeling and videoing in private, and then talking privately to an account, who then turned a conversation of updates, into questions for things in life, in exchange for marriage, a goal I was set up for, finishing law school and feeling good, and then asked by what I was advancing my career for, and doing well for, stated, and that's how a dream is lost, or a well condition, speaking to someone who you do not feel illness from, who with judges you as stupid, and then makes an example of you as stupid, telling you to do things while youre half there, that's managing your heart, that's working hard, under the influence of other people. And then being pushed to comply with requests, based upon a connection a feeling, of making the other feel better, and then you being made to feel worse, at your expense, they shine, that's how an exchange of wellness occurs by money, your money well, your condition well, them not confident, then as they get to know you connect, and understand the sweet side of you, then communicate into you, to see how you behave upon talking to your heart, and that is how an airhead is made, someone connecting to your heart, and controlling how you feel, by making you feel bad, or then making you feel good, and not being able to connect, with your head gone, that is mental illness, not being able to tell if you are being harmed or when you are being harmed, and its not until the harm occurs, or until afterward do you realize what went wrong upon reflecting on your condition now as better, and wonder why you were not strong then, or treated as stupid then, and to what benefit did that serve others, to see you in that way. That is love, trusting who you are with and not as connected be affected, easily forgiven. That's being made fun of by someone you love, it doesn't hurt, you don't understand it, it goes over your head, like movies or songs, meant to illicit or cure conditions within or around you.

"When Nothing Matters" ...

There is an illusion of being important feeling important, or arriving to an argument, a fear, a conclusion, or a chaotic disposition in life, that seems to have been created by others, but is really a manifestation of what is occurring within off base, with reality, or with reference to the past, misunderstood as to now, that is how inner chaos seems, something you clearly don't understand but others understand, or something you are feeling, when there is shared understanding, peace, or comprehension, that you are not readily apart of, that's to discern whether you are "in the solution" or "not in the solution" that is sober, and coherent, or mentally ill or under the influence of alcohol, drug, or ideas to what, whom, and why. What keeps you going in life, that's pretty human, to feel good when others are to themselves and doing well in life, and being well at the same time on your own, that's called not being a problem to others, that is what you are doing separate from others, does not alert, anyone else of a changed set of conditions which they should be worried about with regards to your health, then there is social media, that is seeing how you are doing without you knowing it, and worried about the content you provide, as a representation of your health shared, whether that is benefiting you or not beneficial for others to hear. And then there is seeing things as whole, judging someone to look or appear as though they are "being smart" with others, that is doing things and not saying things that they are doing as they are doing it, or doing things without saying things purposefully, to not speak to, or doing things without saying things, to which others can see or think clearly and see, which you have not so stated yourself, whether what can be seen or understood by others from reading or watching you, creates a feeling in another, that does not make them feel smart, does not make them feel good, or makes you feel good while who is around you is not feeling good, or whether you pay attention to how you are doing in life, with regards to how others are doing in life, aware that you could be affecting the health of others, if you are not doing well, drinking or doing drugs, worry others, and do so anyways, and do not recover, and get better, or smarter, continue your studies, or stay motivated in life to live life. So long as you are behind in life, not in tune with what is making others feel good or feel smart, that is nothing you should worry about, who they are connected to and why, and what is resonating with them, that's mass communication, speaking to what can be said, and speaking in a way, to which others respond in the positive and like back, whether that is speaking to something already felt within not stated, or bring about a set of conditions in others, that makes them feel good, that's where the question of "what was made in love was made well" comes from "work ethic" and by what "work ethic" demonstrates a quality about a piece of work or endeavor, that communicates a good feeling in others, and whether writing is a skill that can be damaged, or made not to look smart, if it does not provide that feeling in others, look like garbage on the outside, not look well by looking at it, or identify a piece of writing as not from the heart, or made to make others think in a way that supports a negative ideology about life or others, or ones particular sect or denomination of people, misrepresent, that is being of low quality, not a representation of high quality, to look bad. And that's how you get treated, whether you make people feel good, or whether you make people feel bad, and that's mental illness, and inability to make others feel good, then not mattering.

What is a Breakup? ...

A breakup is not a political rally for favor toward sides, or is it. That makes sense, therefore I am not the side favored, in any breakup, whether or not I was in the wrong behaved poorly, and whether or not they have done me wrong, at this point it has become clear and doesn't seem to matter. That what was said "hate Leslie" was what was felt congruent to what was thought of me "free OJ" and that made sense that if to say one that that equated to the other, not a condition of pride, to be seen as a representation of a correct way to think about if a known offender was known to me as a child. Having stated what was stated, seem to establish a known condition as expressed by me to convince someone who was not sure of me, to be sure about me in the negative to hate, that's letting voices win, having said how I feel if it convinces another not to like me, a condition I once described, a "drug dealer" who wanted to bed me, and did not bed, and did not want him on my bed, and offered to call him a cab home, and he sat outside of my apartment building, upset, that I would not bed him after spending the whole evening with me driving my car, and took me to a club, which I took meds to stay awake for. There really is no solution for hate, its either justified, with commentary to confirm or okay those feelings to be felt, justified, or you do not speak to what you think or where you think its coming from and why, and you accept what has been put on paper, and not think too much about it, or wonder too much for its continuity. That is a breakup, when one gets to know you, then upon disillusionment, one either want to be around you, in focus, and if you do not wish to resume communications, watches until they are ready to put you down in life, with negative expectation overhead, fail to speak to positives, and speak to negatives, that's called a negative influence overhead or person in your life, who hurts you privately, for conversations to hurt you publicly based upon what you say, talk to you to get you to open up, or generate a response from you based upon the content they have created privately as communicated to you, wanting to hear how you communicate back, like nahhh, its okay, well as a matter of fact, or loss of emotion, tired, or a slow response, or not enthusiastic, or a non-reply, meaning offended. That is talking to someone, who speaks to you with the façade or trying to make you happy, and then upon you not responding hate you, or think less of you and tell you that's how they think.

Im the type of person who is liked, but usually by the time I am well, and stop chasing them or being needy of them or sweet, they like me, that's after I have felt rejected or ignored, or been questioned, that's to discover or prove whether I am someone who is nice only until I am tired, or am nice to be chased, to be treated similarly as I treat someone who I like or adore, do things for similar reaction to me, as though my condition as treating someone, upon leaving gets imitated or embodied the reaction toward me, as though that's a knowledgable pattern of repercussions for being treated as needed or works to make me feel better upon being tired, if you get insulted, and someone is nice to you afterward, that's not food for thought to say that them being nice means they are a nice person, and have presented themselves well, and should accommodate their feelings or reactions as though a deserved product of my responses, and be assessed by everyone, whether I do things with love, or in poor taste, to see how another responds to me, as though I am fake, love in the wrong, gay, and that I was not straight, or loved to assimilate, as though receiving love from a man, was not a lifelong dream I used to pray to the mood for love, because I never had a boyfriend. I understand that being human is a challenge, and I get that that is normal to love, the man is ready before the woman, and that the woman when not paying attention receives love from a man, I do not think that women by masturbation can similarly anticipate whether a person is good or bad based upon how they feel doing themselves, while sizing up or responding to another human being to know whether someone is good or not, that's not a skill I acquired until 2010, "so sue me if Im new" is the joke, that I was someone who was nice to or admired someone not interested in me, and punished as someone "who was not known to them" to say that I am "delusional" and that I like things that "do not like me" to say that I "was not gay at the time" on "tumblr" and that that was not my "first exposure to studying women by photo." For what reasons I was punished is by content, and as publicized by others, treated me as an offender someone who watches content and does themselves to the content that they see, as though one is not beautiful or admires themselves in the condition they are in, takes good care of themselves, that is to punish someone for being "into themselves" "proud of themselves" as though that's their "revenge body" or "body for competition" or "wellness to make others jealous" created. That is punishing a human being not for being human, but because of who they are hurting their options in life, and as hurt, test to see whether they know if they are being hurt or not, to say that I am someone who hurts people without them knowing it, and that that is a condition their bodies can tell, which they can not decipher for themselves as having occurred, a condition about them changing, upon being known or spoken about, affected, to say that by mention or interaction, one is offended by another, to prove that in one instance offended, all mentions or future interactions public, are considered offenses, not just on paper, but as felt by another to be exposed or known to be exposed to a mention about another or another class unwanted. By now since I know that I am the "unwanted connection" or "unwanted association" now I am on IMDB just in case I then become known as the "unwanted mother-fker inside anyone" sick. To say that this person is clearly mentally ill, and that as situated among or within another is the cause for mental illness, that's comparing my body to an unwanted component of a male body. This is why I cannot work, I cannot date, and I am having difficulty feeling motivated to continue writing, but have no choice but to write, because with voices asleep all day I get suicidal. It was always my purpose to build a website, not my purpose to prove another wrong who stopped me. That was his choice to not be included made known to me, and no later time of performing really makes a difference or makes what was done okay to do, use the image of another alongside my image to promote a campaign as though together, that was wrong then and now, no matter whether someone is famous, if it is my face no one wants to be connected to then at a later time sharing the face of anyone famous on my Instagram is not to make light of the past.

Until You Stay Positive ...

Until you stay positive will things get better for you, that's a no brainer. It shouldn't matter whether anyone empathizes with you, its upon speaking that you are judged or remembered as something you are not, or even worse by video offended by your presence whether that be in public or in private, thought that you communicate secretly in words to communicate illness as thought about in others, or especially to anyone who already views you in the negative to be something you are not, until what is said arrives to those deductions about you, stated "voices" or delusions of "voices" which are all negatives to affect your thinking about self or others, or to confuse your manner of intelligence so derived, thought of in response to companies, without merit, imitation of concepts by others, or as though your model or the business of model of others, based upon your records kept private, on in publicly stated, is what is thought to have occurred, which is the cause for prying, that the Government cannot protect against, what is kept in my computer, or what is thought about me, based upon what is said in public, versus what is said in private, or in private via communication to others, once it is so decided that you are an unwanted attachment, then all attachments become unwanted or painful to connect or think about, that is your condition, does not make sense to others, your words don't make sense to others, and that is why you are spoken to or referenced to, as seen, supposed to be offended by thinking or recollecting what it is you remember upon being exposed to. Whether that's a secret with permission to intrude upon the life of another deserved, that is something you cannot protect against, someone going through your things, or seeing the world from your perspective or connecting to your place of residence, or channel of focus, computer, that then doesn't matter whether a benefit occurs, or whether (test) if you can read others, or speak to what another is thinking make sense on that basis, from whom you are connected to and why, or whether if someone not from your life knows of you, whether you can speak to their thoughts or not, able to say things in good timing, that makes sense to anyone, whether they know you or not, to determine whether in your own world, are you so delusional to think things are about you, and expect anyone to care, or if you speak to the concerns of who is offended, represent those thoughts as spoken to you, to say that my writing speaks to something or someone or some concept in a negative way, communicates or defends those ways of thinking, and hurt me decidedly so, as not congruent to the thoughts or thinking or feelings of the majority, that's not a misunderstanding that's "calling the tea kettle black" that's with proof of illness, then to state cause of illness, is in defense of concept, thought about, to say that one writes with anticipation of negativity or illness, as though one writes to accommodate those interests of negative interpretation defend against, to say the route cause of illness, is thinking of ill thoughts, or ill concepts, or ill interpretations of me, to say that my behavior private is due to ill exposures of or of wellness around me, treat me as though I consider positive responses a reflection of my condition or wellness, no the Italian Restaurant was well, and I am mentally ill hitting my head on San Vicente, that's not connected to wellness, that's why I stay in my room and don't interact with anyone, and will not attend meetings, or date, because I am now an unwanted connection, that is not well enough to be around people, or to be accepted by most. That is my condition, no Doctor can help me, and nobody can make me feel better, that is me inside myself, trying to figure out how to not speak to negatives, and this is a reflection of being treated like a terrorist, because I submitted a study, trying to understand how to respond to everyones changed condition, and figure out how to help others. Its by what you say is what is the watermark across all of your work seen, disfavorable words and images, and that is what you amount to in life, nothing, no matter how hard you work, no matter how intelligent, that is how someone conducts experiment and science upon you, seeks to see how controlled, by what, whether what acceptances or things stated private, amount to what is said later, and then say as excuse or for calculation to present condition, argue that it was this experience or that experience, or this interaction, or that interaction, to say you are a product of the wellness of others, and that the wellness of others, causes you to be accepted, and what is not stated is who interacted with, then what is the condition for improvement, issue thought acceptance, as though that it the condition or permission for improvement of others, your changes private, how you shower and when you shower, and whether you shower or touch your body, in response to acceptances is mental illness, not being alone, not feeling alone, and things not being quiet, that is the cost of losing your right to privacy, that is the cost of mentioning terrorism in a blog or in a document sent to a University, and that is the cause for being treated like one, someone to be eradicated from society, destroyed and removed from the face of the earth, someone who thinks in the wrong, and concludes in the wrong, and aligns with the interests of people who have done a Country wrong, to say that I love in the wrong, or I am friends with people in the wrong, or that I make the wrong decisions, and make others feel as though they have done wrong, or that because I have done wrong, don't make others feel good, or think in the wrong, and that is how a wrong person is made, and that is how a person cant even shower without others thinking that one is pleased to themselves, and that is how one cannot be around people, or around children, once one is declared mentally ill, that is a person who self-harms, and others cannot see, do not recognize, do not greet, or cannot remember as being well, that's when hope is lost, and hope is the condition of not being made fun by someone with reference to a Goalkeeper who stripped on a field upon a win, a game I attended at Rose Bowl, the Womens World Cup, against China and saw JLo perform at halftime. And now my throat is burning, my head is small, and my mouth is open, and my heart is burning, that's mental illness, not being able to carry on a conversation private or in public without feeling sick or mentally ill, that is why people punish people, to cause them mental illness, to not be loved or accepted by most, until their illness changes their face or body, and until they are recognized as someone who is mentally ill, or does not fit in or recognized as well, and cause another to not feel well, that's not being well on the inside, and that's not stating a behavior private, or condition private, speaking to someone privately, and what is not stated and that's to argue that I speak to negatives in life, or to terms not stated by me until stated, and until stated to cause everyone else 65k in real life to see or hear terms and see the same. So that's seeing my condition, the generating 65k followers, then causing 65k people to not be into, not recommend, not understand, not comprehend, not like, be indifferent to, or see the same read everything to an interpretation of an ill representation of someone "who was liked and then got punished" to see whether their beauty or looks changes if everyone hates someone, as though I am someone who is performing to hate or because one is hated, and that is a condition or comparison to someone accused of homicide, to treat my body the same as another body who was represented by Attorneys who are no longer here, to say that I am becoming something I am not, because someone has died, and that I do not deserve to be who I am or to be well, because had this person not died of homicide I would not have tried hard in life, or been well liked, or gone to law school, or had friends, or been important to anyone. That's to say that I was only important because someone close to me died of homicide. That's to say that I am someone who is known, or works, and lives a different life private, that makes me not a good person recommended to help others achieve well in life, based upon my inability to achieve well in law school or finish a JD, I left and was not able to return to school after leaving. That's giving up an opportunity to finish my JD to fly to DC, and now thinking for what? At what cost was it for me to visit, and what was I thinking at the time I decided to do that? And that's to figure out whether I do things in life with a picture in my mind of how things should be or think that I see things clearly more clear than others, and as though I expect others to see more clear or see clearly based on what I know, that's to see what I look like guilty, with the words, proof, timing, and records of another watching me, predict, or capable of causing the wrong things to occur for me, or for others, as read from my condition, of mental illness, that's being mentally ill, not being able to take a shower alone and hearing voices, that's affected.

How You Get Treated ...

Everyone at the time of meeting you, will treat you how they think you deserve to be treated, whether or not you are acknowledge friended, or ignored, that is something one accepts about life, not all will be well upon meeting you, and not all will be excited to meet you nice, that's attitude and unhappiness, not being well, a condition to expect and value in those who are recovering not indicative of the rest of life or of all people, not everyone knows you, and not everyone will care even if they know you, what you went through, or what difficulties or challenges you faced, that is not what makes you special, we all have disabilities and discomforts in life, appreciate the condition of others who are well, not everyone who is well gets along, that's something you learn later in life, and not all will stand out, or be well around you, that's something you learn not to take personally. How you look is how you get treated in life, why self-harm is not advantageous to my health, and only improves the conditions of others, as lit, such as today, driving by a restaurant, everyone well, after I walked by in Star Wars leggings, and then they added heat lamps while the weather is still hot, that's to view my leggings as an unwanted communication, and heat lamps to communicate back “to go to hell.” That is seeing my Star Wars leggings are relating to “porn star” and then say “Star Wars” leggings are to “fight porn stars” as though I am offended by them or a dark green dress the color of the trash can at work I smoked by as though that trash can is part of my identity. There will always be the past, others calling you out, or seeing your wellness, as stupid, and it continues for as long as you begin reacting or taking things personally assuming is about you, and that’s the point, until what point is one confrontational, and upon being confrontational, what is spoken about, why one is made fun of, because treated as someone who was made fun of, and not taking compliment to a positive representation, later negative representations were made, based upon an assessment of ones condition not being well among others, that’s illness. Not being strong enough to work, not being clean enough to shine, not being sharp enough looking to make an impression, and not strong enough to handle moods, or looks by others, that’s something you cannot control, what you look like, to others, expect that once you become ill, that is how you get treated, the other better, the other feeling better, or until you respond in the negative as aggravated “lose your head” that = a “blackout” to someone who is bipolar or hears voices, to “not be wanted around or in a room” gets up and leaves that’s storming out of a room and not remembering the walk to the door, that’s similar to leaving life, being present at the next location, outside, without memory of how one got there, that’s aggravation, that’s the purpose for identifying someone as an “unwanted person” to society, for marriage, or for dating, one who cannot stay well, doesn’t look well, or cannot make others feel well, that is one who does not look well around others, labeled an offender or mentally ill, that is why people are punished, so that they are not identified as well, or clean looking impressionable, that is why a blog cannot change my physical condition, no matter what is said, no matter what is said well, or unique, or special to my circumstances or others, an accurate representation of humans all together, who are better when Im sick, suicidal, or dying. That is how I feel around people, not thriving, cannot stay well, that’s not indicative of guilt present, that’s indicative of a solution to get rid of a person, or jail, not looking organized, looking dirty, not lighting up, dimming, or not feeling well among others, that is a condition I cannot change, once people know you, identify you, do not respect you trying or your wellness, and have more energy than you, or light up more than you are able to, that’s society, reacting without you knowing it, their presence well, by identification of hate: heat lamps, present a different kind of people, people who are well, when someone known does not feel well around. This is why I either improve, or upon disagreement get sick or suicidal and why no one cares if I get sick or suicidal, and why there is no memory of me in the positive, if I have not stayed well in the past, and why I do not make others feel important, or the contributor to the wellness of those who do not know me go by the wellness of others, then respond to me or treat me as with recommendation from hate to cause harm to me, then expect me to do well, or nice to me, upon a change to my condition, illness or suicide. No one really cares if you become sick or suicidal, that you cannot change not being well around others, and if that was a previous condition, and law school was your solution, that’s to hurt you to say that you were not able to overcome suicide and that law school was a waste of time, that’s to say that you get sick, and as you get sick, others feel better, to see whether you are offended by the wellness of others, think is about you, until its about you feel offended, that’s to treat you like you are an offender, until you see yourself as one, to make society or people feel smart as though they have done the right thing harming you in favor of who hates you. That’s to their majority, you not being well for good reason, and then hurting your ability to appear well in front of others, and to others be viewed as stupid, sick, or grose, give them reason to, to have you video’d as trying to be intimate in private, so until all see you as sick and disgusting, so that you do not feel well, and no one is enamoured with you, special to no one. These arguments are to illustrate why Aaron texting me, is not strong enough to keep me well, and why upon speaking if I get sick, that is because there are people who don’t think I deserve to live life, or to have Aaron in my life, and have a new life, want me to suffer and die suffering.

The Purpose for Perseverance ...

You may end up swallowing a voice or two in life, that doesn’t sound like you, that’s because during Death Valley, humans were cannibals that ate other humans as described in “Book: Guns Germs and Steal” who survived longer than the others, the bodies they ate. Eating people is not the solution, to living a longer life, be comprised of parts not surviving, or to survive comprised of parts of those who did not survive as long as the those who ate them. That is why cannibalism is bad, reading is not that, reading is a beautiful historical art, because it’s the gift that keeps on giving, writing is from where historical premises are read from, the foundation from which thoughts were made as connected to past thinking, and the foundation from which new thoughts can be built in furtherance, from, or with consumption, a better system of thinking made, how book towers are made, informing each book past, by production, of something better than what was thought before, a more cohesive approach to building better understanding among, or remedy discomforts, existing then or now, how history helps knowing, but doesn't necessarily improve upon remembering, why only one period in time was recorded by famous paintings, and why no later periods in time were recorded by paintings, because not better recollections of a period in time, could capture a transition as powerful as what society or members of a society looked like during huge disparities in wealth, or during huge changes in time. We study the past, not to enter the past, to understand, but with foresight to learn from the changes that took place in the past, to not relive those conditions now, admire the present, just as a period in time was admired as peaceful, no matter what size they were, changed, and understand the concept of earth, as not responding in wellness, upon changes to the conditions of a people, and not blame people, as being the cause for changes to the wellness of the earth, who can only reflect on the wellness of everyone as seen and respond, and cannot accommodate hate, or disturbances caused by the people on earth to one another, which is why war is bad, or marches that break the peace, to communicate injustices felt to any group of people not feeling well, conditions so obvious, that one chooses to speak. That explains why marches are so emotional, and why marches are so strong and vocal, it's the changes they feel within, or a weakness to their kind, so affected, that they choose to respond in a way that communicates to all, of the changes they have endured, and the respect of attention needed or required in order to them to be accommodated with awareness of the effect that incidences have had on their health as a community self-identifying with those who have been harmed, why marches are a necessary reaction to unwanted changes in life, or unequal distribution of wellness or attentions, vocalized as not wanting to be apart of those changes or conditions affecting their health, speak, to self-identify as strong, and to assert their rights to care, even if everyone is not so motivated to the same interests react similarly for know about, how things end up on social media, why social media is important for informing people and staying informed of the conditions or wellness of representatives from different types of people, some who can identify whats in error, and some as affected who cannot speak for themselves be heard or understood to have been affected or marginalized by their condition changed. That's speaking on behalf of another or those who need help speaking cannot. That system will never change, caring, reacting, responding, in peace, whether or not earth is disturbed by the presence of those reactions, or whether those reactions are knowingly in response to the disturbances of a people, by the changes to the earth above them or around them, that's mother nature, who takes care of people, who nurtures people, who responds to change just like humans respond to change, react, that's something we cannot control earth in the immediate, but what we can do is be a better example of wellness to be seen by all, earth. What is perseverance, it is accommodating change, it is accommodating illness, it is valuing peace, it is promoting the best interests of all, it is not being bothered by disinterest, or anger, emotions, feelings, or conditions changed in others, that is wellness unaffected by change. If we could all be so strong, that would be wonderful, but there are some too sensitive to the conditions of others easily affected as feeling smaller than, or intimidated by, or not as solid as, that's another condition, called competition, or notification of one exerting their superiority over anothers condition as dim, or not present, not sharp, not vocal, or small on the inside. This was occurring before I started blogging, therefore blogging is not with expectation that my condition will change or that people will be nicer to me, or prouder, based upon the job they are doing in life, for themselves, pride, not for a job they are doing, to improve me: bipolar. There will always be jokes, and things without contrary opinion, be read into as smart, or indicative of blames, or causes for blames, or reasons for blames, or justification for blame. That's just humor, points you out without you knowing it, and not with respect for what happens to you if interpreted in the negative thought about you, that's not unless you can prove that you are not those things in life, the cause for leaving others feeling like they have not done a good job in life, believing in themselves or others, a condition necessary to live life. Having faith, to overcome conditions, faith to rise above conditions, and without fear or not falling back on your own two feet, arriving to a better condition, and knowing once youre there, that you have overcome a condition of change, that's normal to any society to affect one another, that is not unique to any city, that thrives on the condition of its people, to stay well.

There's a Saving ...

There is a saying that “everything happens for a reason.” That doesn’t apply to bad conditions, illness, or gun violence, or home-grown terrorism, or inner turmoil. Those are conditions to be avoided, not the responsibility of the public to monitor and correct, something or anyone who does not feel apart of. That may be the condition I was placed in in life “not feeling like others” to say that me not feeling like others is similar to the condition of someone who commits crimes as: (1) seeing themselves as above others (2) seeing themselves as justified (3) reacting in accordance to their beliefs whether true or not causing harms to others and (4) blaming their mental illness on others having acquired, not taking responsibility for the choices that caused them mental illness, that is not (a) feeling well among or (b) not thriving among others well. This is why (1) poor decision makers (2) poor behavior and (3) poor word choices are frowned upon or punished in society to say that (4) the condition of this person does not the support the conditions of those around them and (a) label this person as bad (b) label this person as mentally ill or (c) label this person as offender so that by record this person bears a quality of title about them that notifies others (d) your health is not the same as theirs and (e) being around a person of this health may affect your health that is what separates the weak from the strong someone who knows their value (health) versus someone who doesn’t know their value (in poor health) why your exposures (indicate or inform others from where your illness came from why if you drink or do drugs your contact or behavior does not excuse anyone who is not in agreement to how you look or behave as proper so that who is is better understood). Not feeling normal, is a condition of someone who is sent to jail, someone who is bad, or is being bad and feels good being bad, why someone is punished, as someone who is not well on their own, but is well in the company of another, and then treated as an offender to the interests of others, someone who is “made well” by “being around well” a human body capable of “stealing wellness” from “those who are well” who “benefits from who is well” but as alone “is not well.” That is the difference between a criminal body and a normal body, a criminal body “is not well” and a normal body “is well.” That is why criminals are considered “mentally ill” and “stupid” thinks that in the clarity of their thoughts “is well” and sees others “as not well” “or not smart.” That is a “big head” someone with a big head “thinks they are smart” and is perceived to think that “others are stupid” seeing their condition as “better” or more well as compared to others, meaning with the capability of seeing others “as weak” that is “seeing themselves as stronger as” which is the cause for “weakness” to someone who is around someone who is bad. A condition I cannot change about myself is “not feeling well” or “going to the hospital if not feeling well” that occurred before I was arrested “for not looking well” “or for a light” that was because I did not go out often “if I did go out stuck out” and “because I stuck out” for bad reasons or because “on something” that “made me stick out” on a freeway. That is not behaving normal “changing lanes without a blinker” not being proper “driving under the influence” and being somewhere I should not be, after having had three drinks “a freeway” which is why I got pulled over. There is a system for catching criminals and this is that “seeing someone who does not belong” or “seeing someone who is not where they should be” means that this “person should be doing something they are not doing or could be doing something wrong” or “this person is not where they belong, here, or should belong somewhere else jail.” That is the Justice System, removing people from society who do not comply with the laws of a well ordered society, and whos conditions affect, change, or take from the wellness of society. That is why people who “are different” or who “do not abide by the law” easily stand out, and they stand out on the basis of whether “the know they are doing something wrong nervous” or “are doing something wrong, and not knowing what they are doing as wrong, dim, not paying attention to their own body, or not paying attention to the body of another, respond correctly understanding that it is their condition that is the cause for another body being nervous, it is their body that is bad or has done bad by law misdemeanor DUI, and then recognize that their body does not match the body of another, and is the cause for that body not feeling well with, or not being sure about for marriage, and then think that what they are doing is okay, or well if the other condition is not well, that explains why after jail, you cannot date regular people, or younger, or someone who has a condition, will not match someone with bipolar, and jail. That is how the Justice System labels people, giving them a condition, that if replicated among others, and another is harmed, can identify the cause for a change in condition, as being by someone who is known in the Justice System to have done wrong, and the source of discomfort. It doesn’t matter then whether you have gone to law school, it doesn’t matter then if you recover, it doesn’t matter then if you are smart, it doesn’t matter then if you realize later why you were arrested, and it doesn’t matter now 8 years later if expunged, to explain why you were not able to stay well among others, be loved continuously, or were treated as stupid, that is someone who knows of you, and then upon seeing you, sees themselves as better than and lets you know that they are better than you, by not identifying with you, as labeled as bad. This is why being sent to jail or hospital is bad for your health, and shortens your life, because you will not feel well around people, you will not stay well, you will not feel strong without looking obnoxious or inappropriate, and you will not be loved upon being at peace, because your peace will not be respected as earned, and destroyed because another’s smarts is dependent upon illustrating you as stupid with a record, and then getting what they want a response 65k, to images of you being stupid, under the influence of threat, as though you deserve to look like someone trying to be famous, or thinks they are important, or is trying to sound smart but is not.

Hearing About Things ...

Truth is established through writing, that is how sense is made, and without writing, that is how disagreement is made, upon assuming what is right to be based upon what is going well, and then assuming that what was not well, was not right at the time, that is that persons condition changed, as being a contributory factor to things not going right, based upon where someone went to school, as though a State is at fault for gun violence, or a Student who went to school in a State the experienced gun violence to be at fault as connected to that State or to its people known. The Game is not a known set of uses of identities to produce a known set of images about, based upon what movies came out, and who went to school where, that is something later known, and which has become obvious to be about or probably in reflection of. What is clear now, whether that's looking back, or thinking of why, maybe makes sense to others, and upon viewing the two classes of people, able to see likeness in quality to what was produced. Which is why anyone who sees me Tweeting instead of speaking at a Meeting treated me as mentally ill, or the condition responsible for being spread, with no followers December 2011, and the reason why I did not feel comfortable at school, that is correct, its sharing in public, and then not feeling comfortable around people feeling different than but not knowing why. Some things are in your face, that is saying something expecting others to accept something you have to say, without a purpose for hearing what you have to say be represented as current or relevant to the conditions present, that's a mental health issue, how you are feeling does not represent how others are feeling, that's a feeling just in you, versus a feeling in everyone else. Now its how are you reacting to thinking Movies were about you and is it you that seems aggravated or would be mad at or insulted, and is that what caused the Shooter to shoot inside a Movie Theater, then compare my ideologies, or thinking to that of someone who Shot Many People inside a Movie Theater, that is what is being distinguished, the causes for Gun Violence, trying to say that trying to help resolve causes means that I am trying to change people, making the argument with regard to Women, it not being their fault if harmed, the same rule applies to Victims of Gun Violence it is not their fault if they are harmed, and they nor or the people around them responsible for changing their conditions in order not to be shot, that means that Social Responsibility does not apply, to Victims of Gun Violence. So to treat me as someone in another State California, soliciting for support of Brady, was not in defense whether Bipolar (2009 or 2011) to have been a like mental health condition or illness existing in me, which was similar to a condition of someone who Shot everyone in a Movie theater. Nor is me holding a wine bottle, a charade to solicit attentions for the Movie: Psycho, or buying a Matchbook communication for anything else relevant in life. Therefore taking down a poster on Wilshire defacing President Barack Obama was my choice, as inappropriate, inferred personal offense taken to content as excuse for reaction. Which explains why even with a boyfriend, I was hospitalized for 30 days, from a meeting I left prior to Tweeting online, that doesn't mean Rape, just because he was younger than me, that was on Provigil only, not as sharp and too loving stupid, not being professional, with a job at Farmers Insurance, who went to a Gun Show, who I reported to Brady, that that was done to me this was 2017. Which is why I was hospitalized for 30 days, because I got sick by assignment, not comfortable, without telling them on my resume, who had a Kobe jersey above his desk, because asked to work Downtown, where the suitor's company is located, under suit, and 2017 when hospitalized asked to sign a document notifying me that I was not allowed to be around guns or purchase a firearm, because I saw Aaron Brown in Yorba Linda a DA who has access to guns, the next morning the LAPD showed up knocking at my door, to search my home for a Gun and search my Instagram in my Living Room. I have never shot a gun in my life, and just reported the two incidences where guns were around me before I met Brady and before the pandemic. -If making me sleep on concrete for 14 hours was the LAPD's way of telling me by lawsuit "someone who cares" called the police, that was to say that because I saw Aaron Brown a DA, that I saw him not for sex but to gain access to a firearm. It was to have sex, and then I went home, with a hole in my wall, from slamming my head into the wall hearing voices, not my fault, I was only on 10mg Abilify at the time for sleep, not strong enough. If you seem like you do not support film or music, then you are seen as someone whos support of film or music is for change, as though you think there is something wrong with it, if you seem like someone energized by a subject or too verbose, they think that's guilt, either having known things were about you, full of yourself for secret reasons, or treated as though you thought you were important or smart, deserving of being paid attention to treated.

Why I was treated like no one, and why a monument was made: The MLK Memorial with Movie Theater lights, and why I was told about it, and someone drove me to the Memorial at Night.

Option Not to Care ...

We all have options in life, one of which is not to care, especially about things or people you share nothing in common with, and keep absent minded from interpretation, just like a painting, or an incident, not something that comes to mind, fueled through your writing, articulate to or to describe, something seen, or experienced, from your mind onto paper, not an image captured through your writing or to the minds of others, expose to. I can't say what makes a successful writer, we are all different, depending on whether you are a visual learner or an auditory learner, we all learn differently, we all see differently, and different things keep us going in life, and just because anyone has something in common with another, does not mean that friendship will occur or sex, its coming to know someone and liking them, not by seeing someone like, or grow feelings toward, we all match up differently in life, based upon our standards, and we all love and like different things in life that's normal. Then there is dislike, hearing something you don't like, or feeling something that causes you illness upon hearing, that's is not liking someone, or something they have to say, and that's not trigger for speed or energy for reaction from someone, to hear something they do not like, or to be treated with dislike or arrogance, that is not the cause for upset, disturbance of peace, or leaving an uncomfortable situation, that's not always clear when someone in a room notified you that they do not like you, or something you are doing, or something about you disagreeable to their tastes, but we are in control of how we respond, such as leaving a room. That's being aggravated upon notification, while waiting to receive a COVID test, from someone seated 10 feet away from me, reporting that my mask was not on, that's an example of leaving the room. An example of an experience, that makes people think less of me, upon speaking about, as though that was proper for my mask to not be on, as though that was proper for him to complain my mask was not on, or as though that was the right thing to get up and leave the room and call 911 to report the incident, to me that was the right choice, I cannot sit in a room with someone who complains, because he thinks I have COVID and with my mask not on, could catch COVID from me, that is me leaving a room in which the other thinks I have disease. That is doing the right thing in my mind. Just like hearing voices, aggravate me, that's not wanting to hear from anyone, and enjoy my peace, that's to mentally disturb me, to hear what I sound like mentally disturbed, that's to say my writing upon aggravation if shared, causes a similar feeling in who is reading, to be disturbed, or waste energy reading, and then say their condition is changed by my experience, feeling different about me, or about others, empathize with. If you are someone who sees me, and hears from me and does not like me, then please do not read my writing, that's is you reading my writing with expectation of feeling good, and not feeling good reading or hearing from someone, you do not wish to see my face or hear from, because seeing me or hearing from me, interferes with your internal feelings that is something I cannot change about someone, who does not like me, and does not want to see me or hear from me. -Allow people to be well. That's is wellness, well without you, absent minded you, doesn't need you, not affected by you, and gets sick hearing form you or thinking about you, chooses to connect instead to people that feel good, or are well in their minds, and does not see you as someone they want to meet, connect with, know, or come to know, understand, gets sick. That's intolerance, that's treating someone who you acknowledge exists but see yourself as better than, that's seeing someone as below you, and that's where voices come from, that's hearing form someone not in your life, who thinks that they need to tell you how to feel or control how you feel, because you are not capable of caring for yourself, that is hygiene and mental illness, that is not feeling good about yourself, and feeling aggravated upon hearing from someone not in your life, who sees themselves as in your life, speaking to you, that is someone who wants to be heard, or represented someone who want you to explain a few instances where people were not in acceptance of you based upon what you look like, what youre doing, or who you are, know you who you don't know, and purposefully hurting you, so that you do not feel comfortable in a room and leave. Where does a voice of hate come from, not from me certainly, I do not sound that way on paper, the voices I hear are words that I do not say, that is something or someone, who upon watching me, is trying to speak through me, that is treating me, as someone conducive to their purpose, to spread dislike of me, to get me to behave in public or on paper, in a way to achieve a result: dislike. That is hurting a writer. Trying to change the opinions of others about themselves, by demonstrating themselves in a way on paper or by face, that would cause others to not want to be around them or exclude them, that is an example, or discrimination based upon fault, the fault of the person for being somewhere they are not wanted or liked, and then treating the other people there as most suitable to the best interests of the people within an establishment. The doctor came and got me I was outside on the street instead. If that was WORLD NEWS, Leslie got sued and went to jail for text messaging someone and sending photos of herself, building a website, then that explains why I smashed my head into a wall repeatedly until a hole was made, hearing voices. That was not the correct response, to being at peace, and then upon suit, not being at peace whether that was with myself, or another not at peace with me, watching over me, literally by phone, or by app, or whether by connection to anyone, could hear anyone, talking to me, I do not know how a schizophrenic is made, but its an unwanted connection or voice from someone who does not like you, that is what causes voices, or by my diagnosis bipolar auditory delusion. Once it is known that people don't like you is how you get treated like a second class citizen, everyone not impressed by you seeing themselves as better than you which is why my bettered condition blogging with 65k monthly viewers cannot be comprehended by anyone who doesn't like me, and doesn't feel good, hearing from me, or seeing me, that is because they do not understand me, and their happiness can be achieved without me, that is not someone basing their happiness on me being at peace, that is someone threatened by my being at peace, and hearing me or seeing me online, not happy because others like me, that is thinking that people like me because of OJ, no it's the exact opposite I have been hospitalized 9x, the most athletic and used to be popular, but did not stay well after leaving law school and flying to DC, and left my then boyfriend, the rest of the World could not help me, and I was not ready to be back in a relationship, still figuring out life, and my own condition, put on many meds, that made me tired, and sleep all day, and tweet. Which is why talking about High School or College is not beneficial to my health, and only causes me illness, I had a 3.2 GPA at Windward, and received the "Best Female Athlete Award" of my Class, I did not have problems at Windward, I had friends, maybe not with one crew, but I still had friends.

The Forefront of Care ...

If you're doing well in life, pat yourself on your back, if your day to day, way'd it go keeping a schedule, and making it through each day feeling whole, and if you're behind, don't fret, you'll surely catch up back to speed in no time, and if you're feeling alone and wondering about life, be proud of the years to your life, and don't stop looking forward. Life's not a competition, and if you feel threatened by others in that way, that's assuming that your success is interdependent upon the successes of others, and while you're throwing the heat in life at your best (a baseball analogy) and others are watching you at your best, don't be afraid to stop and look around, and check to see how others are doing in life, that's how wellness is spread, doing well in life, and stopping to make the time to talk to others, that's understanding yourself, your limits, your time, and your focus, able to manage focusing on others, and also focusing on what you are doing with your life, be successful at. You won't find interest in most, if your head is in the clouds, then that usually causes things around you to seem dull, that's normal, going one way, and not noticing anything around you, or so it seems. What is an influencer? First off it is someone who feels good about themselves, and upon watching them, feel a sense of reassurance in ourselves, that things are okay, and with open ears, listening, without expectation of feeling down, or being harmed in the process of paying attention, from a conservative standpoint, this is what makes some look solid, and others look not as professional as compared to others. There are many different types of professionals in the United States, not all are the same, not by how they talk, or by how they dress, or by how they lead their personal lives, they share one trait in common, able to do their work, day in and day out, show up on time, stay the time they are required to be there, and make a positive difference doing what they are doing, whether that's providing a service to others, or working on the task at hand, focused on their work, not what's going around outside of work, or focused on those who they are working with, in their own zone so to speak in life. Never feel rushed, that rushed feeling in life, is an energy moving through you, that causes one to feel nervous, not where they should be, or out of place, not in focus. That you cannot control, time, how you manage your time, and how well your time is spent each day, all equals how you feel each day. I wish that we were separate from time, but there is nothing you can do, to separate yourself, from the day passing, and manage what you do in the day, feel with the hours of the day, flying by, or feel stuck, with the hours overhead slowing passing over you, that's the difference between a long day and a short day. You cannot stop time, depending on how you spend your time, the hours may fly by, that's not being efficient, and then there are moments when time moves slowly, that's upon concentrating and doing somethings slowly, maybe an important project or a big paper, and the beauty of working hard, is that upon reflections things are clear, and upon review things go smoothly thinking wise, or upon being read an energy is felt, clear. I have once described, the value of writing, as presenting: (1) easy to look at, easy to comprehend, and (2) has a flow to it, that feels good makes sense, which a point can be pulled from it whether stated or overall can be said or thought about. That's not just in wellness, that anything intelligent can be assembled, during times of illness, sure we can try to make sense of our thoughts, even if it takes us longer to assemble those thoughts, and looked at as stupid. What causes a dirty looking face? Or dirty looking writing? And what is cursing for? And what causes shouting or fighting? Is that something internally as reflected over us, that beauty is seen or not seen by one another, or by mimicry (that's racism, no), it must have something then to do with positivity? (not sure about that either now with 65k well or not). I think it has something to do with clarity of purpose either known or not known, and ramification of results, whether stated or not, what points of arrival stated, whether achieved, or whether purposes stated prior, were not achieved, neither improving or disproving the wellness of others, or within. To me it has something to do with what is seen, not by what is replicated, and if God is something within all of us, then certainly to argue that something negative could be found in another, was certainly not the product of God achieved, but by connecting to something different, something that sounds good, or doesn't make sense, and then causes the sense of someone else to malfunction or cause illness, that would be an example of something made in hate. Which is where flyers come into play? Whether the flyers I made were made with love, or hate (in reference to the Movie: Mean Girls), they were made by HP high speed black and white printer I bought in 2008, and with love, Weebly stats, and by website name: mymollydoll.com, that was something needs care, lets raise money to care, and who should we give care to established, an organization recommended to me by WIIDC (2011) to apply to, prior to the pandemic. So that's not an idea I was drawn to initially, but a later organization thought of when the time came. -Back to the essence of time and wellness, no one can credit themselves for whats working within a Country, or supporting a feeling of overall wellness of everyone. And someone who may appear well and not social, can easily be seen as someone, benefiting from the wellness of those around them, and by diagnosis, think they are not with God, because they are not well, not comprised of pieces of human beings that result in wellness, but connected to people or things like drinking and drugs, that resulted in their illness, not a well person, deserving of being situated among the well, that is how someone with a diagnosis is treated as different, not perfect, and not perfect because of whatever is argued to be the cause of their imperfections in life, that is by looking at someone, not seeing them as pretty or intelligent, because of what they see, or by comparison how they look, not as wealthy as or important as.

The Gift of Warmth ...

There is no exclusivity to human warmth, its not just what we share in common that makes us human, but also by what we self-identify with that also makes us human, warm. I don't think it was intended for us to get sick, not by one another, or be offended by the candor of others. I think a lot of being human has to do with pride, and happiness, whether that's being happy ourselves, or being happy for others. Then there is feeling smart, smart to me is putting things together right, its thinking about something, and arriving to feelings that make us feel good about what we are thinking. Then there is not feeling good, whether by instinct, or exposure, our bodies telling us that something is wrong, somethings not measuring up, or something doesn't feel good. I wish that we were all compatible in a room and that we all lit up upon seeing eachother, but that simply isn't the case, there will always be those who stand out from amongst others, and those who we feel drawn to or want to get to know or be closer to, that's going out, who if we knew, would want to get to know, and who if we see, feel like we bear something in common with, with a chance for bonding. That's going out, you never know who you will meet. I am someone who everyone talks to, I never went out much in my twenties, and when I did go out, always managed to find someone to talk to, or someone talked to me. That's being a quiet person, someone who gets approached in life, Im not really a go-getter when it comes to being social or romantic. I am someone who someone who is brave enough to get to know, makes an effort to get to know me, noticing me from amongst the rest. Always be someone special to meet, and someone fun to talk to, that is my best recommendation for anyone with social anxiety, you'll never know your capabilities unless you try, socializing is one of those things, once an olive branch is extended toward you, you have to either make an effort back to communicate and maintain a bond, or you shy away from bonding, and choose not to be ready yet for friends or relationship. Its something you have to put effort into like most things, getting to know others, which occurs overtime, comfort, it's a quality about a person, that if you don't have, wonder, how come I am not confident or comfortable, that is because they have things in life that make them feel comfortable with themselves, like friends, jobs, companions, homes, accreditations, and pride, that's a quality that occurs overtime having things in life. Just like a blog, why does it sound so easy for her, that's because over the past 8 years I have practiced speaking in public, about just about anything, and have done my best, to share in a way that brings quality to the reader, quality of thoughts, with anticipation of how the reader feels, I cannot say that all are comfortable speaking in public its not an easy trait to have being comfortable speaking with anyone able to read, and feel that confident and disconnected from reaction, spiritually and physically, we may all get voices from time to time, but from my experience, its by who you connect to on a one-on-one basis that determines who lights up and who fades. I am someone capable of lighting others up, I consider myself to be a warm person, who promotes the wellness of those who have been in my life, and probably stand out online special, because I have had the same 5 best friends my whole life and have only been in two serious relationships for 4 years and 3 years monogamously, before taking a break for 8 years to work on myself. Because I have had few exposures in life, choosing not to go out to bars or clubs, and be social, and focus in school is why I maybe stand out from amongst the rest, not used to being in a bar scene, but easy for others to jump that cusp, from not knowing eachother to getting to know me, and be comfortable around me, that's being new. Its always fun to be new, that's the beauty to life, you may not be in the same job for 10-20 years, but that doesn't mean you cant also work a different job year after year, the longest I have worked a job is one year continuously, and I know that may not seem like a long time to someone who is considering whether to hire me, but that is a long time to me, on a schedule. You will find that the more difficulty you have settling down in life and keeping still, the less opportunities you will experience for getting to know others, we all have commitments in life, and I have been lucky enough to be supported while blogging, and build a new life for myself online, making a commitment to each day to write, until where I am at a year later, comfortable with myself, and with my audience, no matter who is heckling me in my mind, perform anyways. That's being professional, understanding that not all days are good days, and when you have a good day, to get as much done as possible, that's knowing yourself, and your condition. That's how I was in law school, I took naps, I studied a lot on good days, and I woke up early to get my work done in the mornings with a fresh mind, and be prepared for class each day, whether that was right after work in a cubicle for an hour briefing before class, I always made time for my studies, and did my best to keep up with the curriculum. But the rest of life isn't like that, there will be people you do not like, or want to perform to, people who make you feel sick, people who threaten you, people who intimidate you, people you find obnoxious, people who try to scare you, people who bother you, people who annoy you, people who hurt you, people who confuse you, people who offend you, and people who try to steal your light and happiness in life, by demanding your time and attention, that's just life, its not a game.

Personal Update ...

You wont know until its too late, if you don't listen to who cares or who loves you, that's listening to who is trying to help you, or keep you from falling off course in life, whether that's family, or friends, or boyfriends, they can only do so much. Once you get in a habit of self-harming that is a new condition, that only makes you feel worse, its really disheartening to improve physically and appearance wise, with a condition of self-harm. (Get to the point). If you do not value your life, as illustrated means that you do not value your life because you did not value the lives of others, subjected them to harm, as though you have always been this way, your later condition will always be used to try to understand the causes for illness past, as though your body can handle hurt over and over again, until not empathized, and speak out of context or out of turn, or unnecessarily, if you are not having troubles in life, and only voices, if you convince others that you are not well or something you are not, then that is cause for testing your limits, as someone who gets hurt easily tantrums or inferior to women, that's treating you as having problems, obviously no one pays attention to me, and never ready for love or for companionship, and if anything happens they feel communicated to as confident and see me as sick, or weak, or not well, attack me, as though that communicates to alls betterment, a result that would improve or justify dislike, I think photography just makes me look obnoxious, although its been a wonderful experience to see me blossom and recover, if one bad picture of you is taken, or one bad picture of your head looks grose, as focused upon as not a proper representation of you, molded myself to, to fit what was thought of me then seen. I understand that being feminine is important and I understand gaining weight is not appropriate, and I get if you look mentally ill or not well, that is how you lose friends, I get that. So in honor of everyone who left me, just notifying my readers, that I hit my head, weight: 167lbs. It will take awhile to get back to the 140s, that's not why Im self-harming its because of voices, and because I have not been social, I am not in sync with anyone, annoying too loud. I will do my best on bad days not to be in public, not to have an outburst to explain why I did not feel well at a bar anymore, I felt comfortable at, and why this is happening elsewhere, its if you do not present well, you do not fit among, and if you abuse a privilege of being among, then you do not feel well utilizing the premises a shared environment of varying wellness, stick out, as not well, its not really cool to show up anywhere broken without a job, act like you work hard, and if your blog is not considered work, then don't take it too seriously, to make others think you are trying to be serious, that's not a nice way of sharing a story, interrupt others. Im sorry, I was not emotional in a way conducive to the titled day of silence, and that discomfort is me, and can simply call like I called today the US Supreme Court to apologize, and see that you can say something thoughtful, and then sound and feel like something else, too strong, or offensive, that is where anger comes from, an upset, or a blame, or calling FBI, its physical just in you remember that, not everyone needs to know exactly how stupid you are, Im sorry. This is a moment when I recognize I am not smart with people, and realize to stay home be selective. -Dont play old people, Im sorry P. Trump.

Most Things You Don't Notice ...

Most things you don't notice or take personally growing up, never once think that things are about you, or having identified you making fun of you personally, when it comes to interpretations. But once all is lost, photo albums, yearbooks, a tiffany necklace, notes for teaching the following semester, you wont notice why youre gone, when youre gone, but you feel gone, and don't recognize it has something to do with whats missing, that's having everything, then losing everything, that's to teach you what being gone feels like, as though you have the energy or stamina, of someone who has not experienced pain, a star face person heading nowhere in life, without faith, once you become something your not, dating, or drinking, or trying drugs, and having friends "what did you do to Leslie" he said upon me going to rehab, someone I used to hook up with got mad at my friends, they later went to Aspen together and took a group photo on a bed, and I was not in attendance, my phone number changed and disconnected from all my friends. That was sad. When you are not mentally stable, that is when things go missing, money, anything important to you drawings, and your William Sonoma cutting board, seen at your cousins house, who kickstarted your rehab told to stay with him slept on his trundle a fold out couch, while my cousin-in-law was pregnant, a Naropa Psychotherapy Professional who recommended volunteering for MESA "Moving to End Sexual Assault." At the time Im sure I was professional put together, I was not popular in school well known or recognized or looked at, I had not friends except for neighbors. Then no one knew where you worked, that was not something you talked about, or on public display, in 2004 I was told to join Facebook, and made a profile, and took a photo of myself with my poster in the background. Im kind of upset I destroyed what was left, a photo of Julius and I in bed, posted on Facebook, to which a dorm neighbor replied "Im really disappointed in you Leslie." And deleted it from Facebook, and found that picture framed in a shoe box, I did not put together, and tore it into pieces and threw it in the trash can at Anita, the home I had to demold the patio during finals it was green. I have noticed based on how I am feeling think, sometimes it takes time to settle down, be understanding that life is meant to be lived in the moment, without worry for what others think or see upon looking at you, that cannot be corrected if they see you identify code, or think your identity is associated to historical mishaps, that's very painful to accept looking back all the times when you felt hurt, or try to understand that hurt as having not been respected or disrespected based on what you look like, wellness, who you dated or did not date, and your decision making skills smart or stupid looking. That you cannot change not being popular you just do your best and keep to yourself, not call attentions to yourself, but later you realize you could have been known, and as known, sparked interest upon your failure or addiction or poor decisions made mishaps. Its really painful after having pushed myself to finish law school, to not have achieved a better condition, and its very painful to have to revisit the past, with the intellect I have now for looking at things perspective wise, snow to my waist, flew to NYC still, present. That must mean that if my heart is in it, things happen for me in life, but if led astray, or put in a position of shame or embarrassment known discrimination, that's to argue I deserved it then and now.

Being You and Being at Peace ...

There is being you and being at peace, knowing yourself. Then there is being you and not being at peace, not knowing what is wrong, being you and trying to figure out what is wrong, so that you can be at peace, being yourself. Then there are mental health issues, where you don't feel well. Whether that is because: (1) You are not saying things right (2) What you have to say doesn't make you feel good (3) What you have to say is not unique to you (4) What you have to say does not shed light upon what another is thinking (5) What you have to say does not make another think you are special (6) What you have to say is not unique to you (8) What you have to say cannot change how another feels about you (9) Get judged as someone you are not (10) Not feeling good because of something you have said that has caused a change in how another feels about you. You can't win them all over in life, and if you base your success on others liking you, you will never be happy with yourself, while you are being you, and that is when you become something you are not, a product of those feelings toward you and that's what causes illness, or not feeling good in life, and then put you down in life, as not having done a good job living life, or speaking well of self and others. That is some of the things that do not serve your best interests, that is how you become subject to harms in life, to your identity, how you look, and how you feel. There is a such thing as being special, special to know, and someone to know who does not interfere with ones thoughts about life, as someone who either sees congruent, or who sees differently, not in congruence to what is thought, seen as offensive. What does this mean? Where does the offense come from, and that does not provide solution to how others feel, if you cannot readily provide solution and speak from a feeling of having a condition. This is an example of a discussion, that does not help, but only makes my condition worse as stated. I know that I may not be able to respond in moments when I give up in life, and I know there will be times where I will say things to either favor my condition as well, or cause a thought about with disgust, or to be viewed as shared in poor taste, or by looks demonstrates an ill quality about me, that is sexual or personal about sex, or being liked on the basis of whether or not someone is interested in me in a sexual way, I understand that there are better ways to be intelligent women, I understand that I'm not the best at everything. And that is not the reason why I am not married it is because I left the Program. Sometimes what is said, does not help you to feel or to bring about emotions within you, to make you feel better, and here though I am not well, and now speaking to the reader, from an ill standpoint, or a moment of illness. And that is where offense is taken, treated as though its because of ones internal dialogue that is wrong, or offensive, that one speaks in alignment to ill thoughts about thoughts or demonstrated wellness, not valued by someone who sees better in others. And that's how as a woman, if you later come across as defective, as gross, as negative, as less than, or not sweet, not loving, not warm, or deserving of love, ignored. Its when others have been look at you like your nothing, you're not special, and see themselves as above you in life, as though you were never well, sweet, caring, then as you are now, with mental health issues, bipolar, on meds, or a suicidal self-harmer, and that's how you get treated in life, and others who were disconnected from you anyways, committing suicide is not to cause harm to others, its not understanding the cause of your condition. I do not think there have been enough suicides in life, to make it proper to put me in a condition of suicide, to respond upon losing everything in life, including respect from others. And that is a point of discomfort, hearing from someone who committed suicide, seems insensitive to how others feel, if I am not comfortable discussing the causes for my suicide, then that must be avoided, having gone to two law schools, that is without expectation that my condition is invincible to future harms, that comes unexpectedly, they wish with you, to see if you're lying or not, whether you go into pain upon breakups, whether you go into disillusionment upon disappointments or rejections in life, deserved, and based upon a recording of your thoughts for better judgment from an outsiders perspective see whether you are in your condition, your wellness, your reputation, your feelings, and your identity. #stopsuicide

Anyone is capable of starting a blog, it then becomes a matter of being of value. Are you creating work that is of value to you, and where here is where inspiration meets competition, are you someone who speaks to prevent competition, or are you someone who allows for the growth of your content, and are you someone who plans for future uses of your content. How far along are you in terms of your understanding of being a team player, are you someone who contributes without expectation or anticipation of how others will respond, or are you someone who is generated by the content you provide, and how professional is professional. And this is what makes blogging difficult, besides, also trying to be aggravated, not allowing a negative condition to overcome you, that is called illness, or mental illness, where you are speaking from a place of being in a normal condition, and expecting them to understand you. Not everyone is capable of lifting themselves out of conditions in life, and that is forced to talk about things we don't want to talk about, or forced to be judged based on something we have said, be misunderstood.

that is said is based upon things we have said, life is not lived like a research paper, upon citation to something carefully assembled to speak without thinking, and sometimes people speak from how they feel, without anticipating others listening too carefully to them, or something else. And this is how becoming famous, or being famous matters. You are someone who gets read into, you are someone who are someone who people think they can diagnose or who think they know you better than you know yourself, or people think that your reasons you are on meds or having difficulty in life. That's people deciding for you what you are about, what you should be like, and how people. That is what fame is, reacting and responding to an audience, and accommodating them, or behaving or speaking in a way, that. Then there is being a private citizen, not forced to respond to others, not reading into the treatment of you, and not expecting to be treated in private life, with nothing known about you beyond as you appear, or beyond what has been provided by you. Then there is becoming used to good or bad days, and be manipulated by your audience, or by what other people think respond, and this is why it is difficult for some people someone internally, does not have a strong understanding of their own issues, then it will be others playing doctor on you, trying to diagnose you. And this is something I have just realized, what becoming famous, or being known feels like, based upon how I have responded, and through in the process of becoming known or well liked online. Once you get put in a bad mood like anyone else its hard to get out of, and understandings about life that overwhelm you, that's living and learning, or rolling with the punches. That doesn't mean you have lost, it mean that you don't understand, it just means that others pleasure themselves in being aggressive toward you without you knowing it, you get treated when you look expressionless, or not hyper, or not animated, how you get treated if you don't light up in life. When you realize when you felt good ignorant of the consequences of fame or the ability for others to cause harm to your progress, as integrated into your life not carrying positive light. That is something you cannot change about yourself how you look, or how other people make you feel, and not everyone could be famous, and become successful then everyone would become famous and be successful, but its not possible for everyone to generate an audience online. I just know that when I am comfortable with myself, that still cannot fix the problem of voices, and maybe controlling the internal dialogue within my body, that's not me trying to control the internal dialogue in other bodies as they relate to my issues. Voices is an incurable condition, hearing voices, that can only be solved by taking meds as directed, and by carefully managing your life when you are off balance, or not in balance that voices occur, whether or not others are in disagreement with you, support you, or not.

Let the Good Times Roll ...

There is a such thing as being too particular or too picky about advices. Sometimes you wont always hear things that resonate you, and that's them looking at you, then telling you what they think you need to hear, in order to offset whatever it is that is going wrong in your life. Advice, Relationship Advice, Homie Advice, Girl Advice, Life Advice, or Advice from a Smart Alec. There will be time when you will listen to you or others, that's just life, not all things are always in proper balance, and sometimes off beat with your tangent in life, or your reality in life, the more distant you become from everyone, the more difficult it becomes to help you, the more alone you'll feel and the worse your problem only you see, blows out of proportion, you cannot expect anyone to read your mind, or to predict what to say and how to say it. Sometimes we just have to listen whether that's a no, whether that's criticism, whether that's a negative judgment, whether that's being told your chances are if something is not going right for you in life, and you are not readily aware of what is going wrong with you or your thinking, or to making sense of what someone else has to say. Be patient with yourself and others. Only time can tell. If it's a matter of time past your problem was was letting go. If with time a problem only become worse, it just means that it is something you have not dealt with yet. And that just means that things have gotten worse not better. And if change was something you were avoidant of in the past, don't expect it to come you coming to realize what was in need of change, and that's the shock. Doing something over and over again, and expecting a difference is "selfies" and whatever expression that was "femininity" if that was not the solution to you recognizing yourself as well then, then it is demonstrating that you are, happy about the way you look by face, or happy about the way you look by body size and shape. Some moments of ourselves, are not necessary to be shared out loud, such as on social media, some people just don't want to know us in that way, and feel the way we look, that inner sense of pride is not a quality about you that is shared these days. For someone born in 1985 size does matter, we were seen as large in the past, just like it was not acceptable smoke weed or to rely on drugs or alcohol to be yourself or to have fun, to be confident, social, or romantic, without the need for substances to feel that way around others or be comfortable in that way around others. It's too high, expecting wellness, and if someone is shy, or not enthusiastic, or doesn't try hard enough in those departments such as social media, something defective about them, if they lack personality, or traits about them that make them seem dull, or not animated enough. You learn the main lesson, people will either go out of their way to get to know you, or they will ignore you in favor of something else they find of value. How you look like, is how you get treated in life, with respect or not. Now pile on diagnoses and medications, all the more reason you get sick, or contagion to an environment, or a source of discomfort in a work setting. That is someone knowing you, who comes to publicly reject you if you cannot work the hours, if you do not stay healthy, if you do not look well, if you do not appear well, if you cannot stay focused, if you work hard or deserve to be there, there will be other jobs, there will be other people to meet in life, there will be other people to love in life. When establishing a positive rapport with someone who does not know you, its only until someone gets to know you, and later does not like you, how life is, they will meet you, they will get to know you, and they will decide for themselves whether to accept you into their lives, or not. Warming up to people to begin with, just accept that that's what an aggressive society is like, expects people on point, awake, and focused.

medications to function in the daytime, and to sleep at night, and expects you to adjust to their needs, that's a job, not someone who thinks of themselves, trying to monitor their mental health, and be easily affected by the conditions around them, or the moods of others. That's you are expected to accept all parts of others, some may be like you non-judgmental, while others may be conditional, that is based upon someone who is not judgmental toward others, I treat all people the same, I may not be interested in many people, but I am no more or all people with the same level of enthusiasm, a listener. At what point does socialization or romance generate enthusiasm, that's the point happens, it's not an act, and it does not mean one another is immune to conditions of one or the other, upon exposures to one another, or how to build trust, thinking that upon seeing you, or hearing from you more, will create stability in content, or in look to others, as though to like yourself or the way you look, that's an internal feeling, that is not caused by who is watching you, or by who you like, it's about interacting with others, or with someone you like, or who you are being social with, dictates what you look like. That's a literal change in look like, and what you look like mirrors how you feel internally. Well or not. -I feel like what is not understood, is why I have mental imbalance in my brain, that requires me to be on medication, and then treated as someone who does not make others feel good, because I'm intelligent enough to speak to others, or doesn't have anything intelligent to say, if I was given mental health issues in life. I think if I should be blamed as though my mental health issues, can be triggered or caused in someone who has not been through what I went through with investing a lot of time and attention to my studies, not to socialization, going out, or romance, I am someone who stays home, and a disability and works from home, because I am on bipolar medications for sleep and daily functioning. That's no one's fault. So to be treated by others, is in defense to others treatment of me, hurt me, as though I'm focused on what other people are doing in life, thinking that how they treat me, it doesn't. Just like my mental health issues, don't have anything to do with how other people are, look, or behave. I may be sometimes based upon how I look, but that's just California, if you're not pretty and confident or wealthy, that's how you get treated, like someone not deserving of insult, or harassment in life, that is mistreatment of you, either by public rejections or commentary geared toward excluding you rather than be valued for who you are, what gifts you have in life, or limit what you have to offer the world, by staying well. And that's a disagreement with, by shouting at them, or by publicly putting them down in life, that's so that upon speaking that is what is talked about you, who has made you feel bad about yourself, who has threatened you, who has caused you to hit your head, or who has caused you to feel well for you in life, affect your mental health and stability. So no, that doesn't make me feel good to mention who has hurt my feelings, or misread me, to seem as though I have interests in others that I do not, or be shouted at, as though I am someone who is annoying to someone healthy. I am doing my best to recover too, without money, without friends, without a companion, and without a relationship or lover, and discomfort, a position of no resolve, a position of illness, and then provides no solution to the reader, discomfort, and then seems abrupt about. And that's talking about problems, you can either see the positives in life, or be measured by what has not gone right for you in life, or problems that don't help you move forward in life, but only empowers who has harmed you to feel righted by their actions toward you caused, or your discomforts now, feel a sense of power in themselves.

Getting Over It ...

Like all feelings, it takes time, to especially get over something that hurting you or breaking you inside, whether that's withdrawals from someone to forget about someone, something, or some feeling. Allow yourself to go through the process of becoming normal again and going back to the process, whether that's through talk therapy, or journaling, you'd be surprised at how strong you really are, even though you may be generally mentally and emotionally weak as a person. When it comes to love and heartbreak, remind yourself, "remember that there's no set time to get over it." It takes awhile to get strong again, and feel like yourself again. I go through this a lot, not feeling good about myself, and then not sound like you are broken, or not feeling well, you don't sound like yourself, and you don't like yourself. That's normal, when you're not feeling like the way you sound. Just remember no one can control the way you look or the way you sound, and that is something always in your control. If how you look and how you sound affects how you feel about yourself, then make sure to work on how you look and how you sound. I really thought that image was a big deal, I was never someone who spent more than a minute glancing at myself in the mirror, or getting into wearing makeup, this all happened later in life, not liking the way I look, or becoming overly self-conscious about how I look to others. I go through many stages in life, when some things matter more to you than others, such as looks, or intelligence. Just like you recognize your own sleep cycles, your daily habits, job opportunities, lifestyle, ability to earn a living, intelligence, seeking a higher education, career, men, when you think about it, the more it bothers you, and sometimes the more you think about it, the bigger of a problem it may seem. Recognizing your own feelings, you to feel heavy, to feel powerless, to feel weak, to feel tired, to feel defeated, to feel lonely, to feel exhausted, figure out what is causing it, and what you can do in the immediate to change the way you are feeling about yourself, about life, about others, about love, about friendships, and about moving forward in life. Life is a learning process, a series of steps we go through each day, hoping that the next day will be better, but sometimes things get worse, and we don't feel better. So keep your head up. Remember you are your best advisor in life, just like I advise myself. I do things in life, give myself advices, and while saying what I think would've been helpful for me to hear while going through a problem.

Missing Out on Life ...

If you missed the good years working on yourself, those were your good years remember them, and if you have failed, that is why you are here to live. That's giving up, having missed out on what was going on in the lives as addressed by those you cared about, that's what I did. I had bipolar, but I never saw discussion of my bipolar beneficial for others to view, it's something you think, but you don't say out loud. Paranoia, which is a product of substance abuse. By now it's pretty predictable for reactions from me, but what cannot be controlled is how it worsens, why I can hear others, but do not talk to anyone, doesn't make sense to me, how I can hear them, or be taunted, with expectations. Usually the type of commentary you don't respond to or assume as being about you, and so the low blows have been thrown in advance. A feeling of being gone, everyone hard on you, and you not feeling well, people as well then seeing you in a condition of focus, hard on you, or not feeling coherent, and maybe that was my introduction to being known, and what is held privately known about you, of use for others, or not exposed to or like, such as a MacBook. I think it's great if someone sees you, and can do a better job in life of taking care of others. That's how they see you, and either accept or reject you, or hard on you, as though you were the problem or cause for their disillusionment. I think after that, more professional, it's upon focusing on others, that you may lose steam in life, if you cannot stay focused on yourself smart, then you focus on others, whether that's in law school, or dating, if you are not well enough to date, and easily feel threatened by others, then leaving yourself from the lives of others, the more people think there is something wrong or defective about you, as though you are an unwanted person. If you rise to an occasion, that is one opportunity to present yourself as you are whether you are there for good reason, deserve to be in that place, do your best. I think that describing my experience made others think that I was a hot head, or with an agenda to look like, or mimic a certain person, or me to act out, and I think that's why I was focused on and get voices now, it's the feeling of control, or understanding a human being, or others, as well as their responses to the wellness of others, appear well too, or disheveled mentally ill, grose, and trashed, ruining their lives, myself, and be treated as liar, as though bad things happen to me knowingly, or willingly, and that I deserved to be on the streets playing cards, and then there are later exposures and if you have to think of something to make something happen or connect in life, that's thinking to yourself, you look like your head is gone or guilty, not smart, and that is why people are distant toward you, because you seem cold, or full of yourself. My confidence was from losses, losing 50lbs, as though insensitive or for attentions cared, that's not me to schmooze, that's caring because I care or think about how to help others, without causing fear. I'm sorry that what I do as volunteer work is frowned upon by others, I am not convincing that nothing bad will happen and proof of the results, proven. Bunch this up and bunch this up, and let the people speak for themselves now, don't worry I'm not studying people and not looking at anyone anymore. Stay well!

When Things Get Out of Hand ...

What I can't control are reactions to me, in the positive or in the negative, what I can control is my own wellness. Once you become sick your entire life gets looked at as sick, or coming from a sick place in life, or position in life, that's upon hearing what you have to say. I thought because one was not a member of society then, that one not being a member of society now, should "make no difference" that's what Paul and I followed the story, and did my best then. It's not always based on what you have or by what is provided to you, able to make sense of things will not always know where things are coming from or why, that is something you cannot control, portrayals, impressions, secrets, ideas. Accepting of the conditions then means with respect to who is well now, still not mention, that is leaving things alone, and not interfering. I know on my own, without causing anyone else to look bad or anti-semitic. No there was no secret Jew in the past, and no that is not well, no that is not from a source of blame. When it's too late it's too late, and that when your identity and ethnicity or opinions on race, gender, who everyone can read and better understand your life as it is, or whether as described you subject others to insights having thought or feelings, have thought or think, that's something new, trying to understand the shape of my head, the beauty on my face, my wellness, the shape of my body, sounding stupid, how far along do I get speaking, and what has been resolved if anything, and if I heard voices, does that mean then that it caused me mental illness or voices, I did not know many people and was not social even if out, always out with friends, so I wouldn't be disappointed. How long does it take for someone to speak, and is it necessary for them to understand or fully comprehend why they do that somewhere, is it possible to make others feel bad in the process of sharing your story, yes if you make unimportant details about life in their right to be free of harm, which is why when I hear voices, or feel as though I'm in harm's way, how sharing my story, causes me to feel hate toward me or discomfort toward me sharing online, as though it was intended to be told or be deciphered in detail until I become wanted to be shared was by book, apparently more detail is wanted, even if it does me a disservice in life. And accept that by what was how I responded as mentally ill, insulted, or self-harming, and suicidal, whether others felt better by my failing condition, or whether my relationship with the police or the courts as not comforting, just because you don't trust me, think that I am talking to positions of trust to like me or be consumed by illness. They are accepting of all, they don't talk themselves into illness, they are well. The position I'm in is for others to fear less, or to not be scared, that's using me as a test dummy, to cure fear, not in a reassuring way, be treated as a human speaking, past the point of not feeling well, as though when vulnerable that will make me stay well, it won't, I cannot stop voices, those are me, and treat me as though I should be responsible for taking care of imaginary voices within my body, while being tolerant of hate in my life, made fun of for trying too hard. Its for marriage, its not a movement, its not a poignant salute to a loss, its not representing myself as being a condition of self-harm suicidal. What is causing suicide, its voices not being tolerant of me, and its only feeling well upon speaking, the stronger they feel, and that's how voices win with or without me, whether or not I'm significant or was special, makes no difference in my writings, and seeing well, then hurting me as though I am deserving of illness, or not a provider of well thoughts, so that my writing does so that I appear slow, or not in solution, arguing with voices, or with people who are not fighting me, or who have already said their piece correcting people. Everyone is entitled to responding how they want, especially with my entire life examined for reaction, whether one has done enough job in life and others were harmed, trash myself. When the show "you are the weakest link goodbye" turned on, the host was violent and one was convicted of molestation. And upon being told that news, I got done in the valley, and later became a website. That's a bit of a story developed, is not taken seriously, a pen name, an identity, not seen as special or capable, then there is replacing you, seeing what you have produced, as used by others, be questioned as: causing illness or not.

Whats Not Cool ...

When in recovery a lot of acceptance, comes through "accepting your part" I was told by a Crossroads sponsor, I was set up with before always support you, but only if you are working the Steps, they cannot manage problems past, or discussions held privately or public, or of puppeteering you, or others for representation, that's accepting others in recovery, as not being strong enough to stick up for you, not being strong enough to engage in disagreements past or presently with concern to your mental health issues now. You can never put your main lesson when it comes to recovery. Being honest is a plus, but not to the point that you reach your max threshold of acceptances for yourself to be treated as one big unwanted communication to all, whether that's you existing in real life or in the past, be blamed as a sinner not cool enough, too low key, or too private, and that explains the type of turbulence and pressure I have undergone speaking in public to a listener, and that doesn't mean that I was defective within or on the outside, that's a personal trait, not talkative, not raised to be talkative a woman, maybe why I stand out so much online, its usually a trait of a woman who is cocky, or who speaks expecting others to like what they all are fortunate to be that people savy. You live and you learn to be there for others, you know, not by circumstance alone help, and that's in life, upon acceptances of them granted, no one really deserves friend loss, nor should bear the burden to tell the story of all, but if you take your time, and explain as best you can without being a showboat about it, that's not cool. You can either identify what the problem is your condition now, once the past has spoken, the people have spoken, by the time you speak, expect to be shocked, that you are not cool to fix your face, but you will always be human, connected to the conditions of people around you, and responsible for maintenance of those conditions you can tell anything to without judgment, I was one of them, and no me being public, should not subject others to harm, having share of others, or share my story or the change of my conditions to make myself look better, we all grow and mature at different paces in life that's your choice. And no I do not mean to not be sensitive to family losses, by referring to an entire family loss, as being a matter of life who were accused of "vehicular manslaughter" in a "silent running drill" hit the car of a sponsor to someone I carpooled growing up, and once through, and you either know when its not safe to be social, or are social when you feel safe not in harms way, and that's what sets limits, and knowing when to stop, and not talking to people, or using people to look better, or well. People cannot fix you, not if you cannot how to stay well, without love in your life, be strong, and that's how blogging happened, that's was more than a soul search, that was finding something wrong with me, and informing others as I was figuring things out, giving others a head start, when it comes to representing prevention technique, not if we later inherited COVID, means that more can be done on the forefront of wellness, that has not already been successful as our Country should ever be hit with a condition of blame or not being good enough, that's letting one another down, over the conditions of others, as affected by our wellness, as though wellness was dependent upon strength in numbers or sides within. Once it was an addict, or alcoholic, that really caused me to give up in life. You work hard to be at a certain speed in life of wellness, and if you don't have wellness in life is easily lost, and that's your fault for giving up. It shouldn't then matter who takes lead in life, that's everyone being vulnerable because you are not doing well, or others more put together knowing you, and even more put together without you in life, sometimes they do but don't need you, that's life, we meet people and figure out life for ourselves. You are never the center of an equation of wellness for either figure yourself into the equation, as having been hospitalized 9x, or you attempt to figure out what went wrong, when, and why, or whether others did well without you, we never forget people from our lives, may this be a learning lesson, you will always be affected. You know you, brush off on, that's just life, we have lives, and then people meet us, and we are introduced to their life, or they just meet us. The benefit doesn't go both ways, it doesn't matter whether you are a woman or a man, if you have sex, you leave with sides, and that marriage and things seem like too much, because I have been writing for a year, and now what is being said, is being treated as information known, and not have been stated, that must mean that what I am saying is not the solution. If you are the type of person who has to prove themselves, you have already been hurt, in the process of generating content from you, that is secret, or has once been thought of, but not at length, as if you are waiting to hear how you sound after being hurt sexually online, see how you respond, and see how long it takes for you to arrive to clarity. And accept that even if you speak, the harm already done to you, was thought deserved based upon your condition of wellness, or based upon what has happened. And that's when you understand life through a different lense, everything that you can make use of or what has been said privately or not stated, gets treated as having been made use of to describe things esoterically, or with possibility of having been about a computer. That is a later showing of events occurring for others, seeing you, and then seeing a picture of what your life is like knowing your point, pictured, and that is how upon exposure to someone, one is able to think or see like the other. That is how thoughts come to someone to understand life from your standpoint, whether or not that is balanced, changes, ruined, tormented, or haunted, and sometimes you go to someone who has suffered not losses, not counting relationship losses, notes, photo albums, or yearbooks. So not its not Barack Obama beyond individual mishaps in life, and taking control of a complicated understanding of life from the viewpoint of someone who is not racist, well groomed to represent everyone, on the basis of him having a life separate from what was endured elsewhere. My mother helped me pick and apply to schools, Im sorry I tried the common app, and did not submit the per school addendums, to complete my application, I did not get in. This all must have started, before I applied, the loss in respect, popularity, smarts, not seen as special anymore. And that is why I and smoking weed, explains how I lost the 9th Grade election on crutches, gave a speech and handed out "gold fish crackers." That was my "gold fish crackers" looked like code for something else "swimming with the fish" a quote by mafia, and my most likely to I wrote was I smoked weed, which was what I combined by free period next to lunch for, to take naps, and left campus at one point, that was after getting into college, I got in in December, I also got into UMASS Amherst, but did not know how small Boston was, that outside of the city, was not far away, and you have to explain what youre thinking as youre thinking it, so others know where you are at in life, and its not okay to respond to others, to perceive yourself to have been thought of as being made fun of. If you draw people, and if a serial killer draws his victims, then it is that you are the killer, and not supposed to be offended or feel threatened by. And that is when you become aware that no matter how perfect or smart you are, its not safe talking, not safe sharing, not safe explaining how affected, mistreated until you match the conditions of a criminal, and that's what happened to me. Watched like a stadium crowd, experimented with, then backing off, and hurting me, for all to see, then treating me as if something occurring not in agreement then highlighting Harvard making the band Pink Martini and the song clementine, I think Ive said that which was though to have been a term of endearment, [Im sorry for a negative reference not intended to lend insight or for use for internet], I had an illness to speak to a miscommunication about me not stated, trying to understand why quoting Kate Spade for example "dont hurt the feelings of the Coach, a company my Brother disliked, as noted in his blog in NY, which later represented her -[Please Note: If my head is gone, mean it on TV], [with regard to] changing the direction of my company from clean to personal and offensive as nude, thats hurting me as though I committed suicide, having been told attended a Birthday Party in Las Vegas with her Brother "David Spade" in Louboutins and Neimans, and left the party was not gay at the time, with a boyfriend, its now very painful at the epicenter, and this is a condition created to open up to prove that I am the cause of pain, with regards to Justice Ginsberg's passing, having mentioned that I bought a Kate Spade purse to gift my BFF in a edit of my story, sharing or having mentioned out loud, affected the life of another, who I do not know, who has lived a different life from me, this is to teach me what it is like to look or appear in a way that does not accurately represent you or represents you in the negative as though I put myself else into the conditions I have faced in life, tolerate such abuses, that was me being made to look stupid, upon graduating, having difficulty at a sporting event with voices to say that my condition now was like when I was hitting my head and got a black eye, before we lost Kolby, upon what is going on in the world matters, whether you and your condition have been affected by losses in life, as told, whether you are not strong, of course things hit me hard later in life, of course I worry about inheriting evil spirits or evil things being thought about me, to work, socialize, date, or talk to the courts anymore, make a positive impression, and yes that hurts that I turn into a jolly obnoxious person, that's how life is, you are either well enough to speak to, or not able. This is an example, of not speaking about evil, to not inherit a bad reputation, as said, as though to glamourize police work, say that Im not helpful. Again arriving to no solution, harm has already been done, and now the lesson in not being able to change the condition of others to accommodate your condition of not feeling well liked, if what you have to do is hurt others, but only further justifies their mistreatment of you as sick, to say you think sick, remember sick, or that sick people are making a mistake, shoes, reading the communications of others, with their baseball mitts on, saying this was meant for her, or this was not meant for her, to be around, doing well, sick or doing well in life, need to be heard, that presents a new problem. Lesson: Im sorry if I have ever referred to my own story, and Im sorry if by telling my story that exposed others to hurt, or fear with regards to their beliefs, or their need to DISRESPECT, cause them trauma, cause them to relive trauma, or weaken their spirit and their ability to live free of trauma, sickness, illness, or negativity, if one wants to be apart of, and I can see now that if no one wants to be apart of me, then that's a false ad "American Girl" if I am not visible, what matters, then I should not be someone within anyone who matters, taken into consideration, or thought of, or been apart of their thoughts, stupid by others, that's just life, you are treated in life, based upon how others treat you, and if you fight too hard or question the cares of others, that's arriving to mental illness where I am now, that meds cant cure, love cant cure, and smarts cant cure, and that's how you convince yourself to win? That's letting yourself lose in life, and that's you saying how things are without anyone saying anything, and that's overcrediting in in life, or to keep you separate from the thinking of others, not be calculated, a F up in life. I don't have a solution for what was done at this point. And if it means anything to anyone, not attending AA, not making friends, not talking to old friends, only reporting to the police, amends wherever amends are due, in order to live life, not live life as hated, then I cannot be around anyone, and that is something I learned enough to anticipate being hurt in life, and learning to accept that others thought it deserved to put me in harms way.

The Goals of Refinement ...

There is a secret to looking well, and that simple secret is thinking well of self and others, I don't know how else to describe what peace is without worry for others, that's leaving things in God's hands, trusting the process, whether that's recovery or the Justice System, allowing not to do one another a disfavor in life, or disservice, that is put one another at odds, unless the odds were with us, and we begin to feel that where film comes into play, capturing the essence of life, the living, and the expectancy of humans on earth, humanizing the concept of war. And this is why I believe a haunting study, dysmorphia study, self-harm study, suicide study, femininity study, mental health issues, me, to say that my condition well, did not exist in strength prior to the homicide of a loved one. When I said I held the record 12 pull ups occurred in my life, as a child, when a homicide occurred. That is thinking about life later, had you supported Moms jean shorts, had your boyfriend girlfriend as children with each other, and kissed one another hand over mouth as taught by the girl with a Molly doll, that is what experienced was memorialized to highlight another fact, that my best friend may have felt offended by me at one point in time, I may have may not have liked me based upon what I looked like not attracted to me, and its upon non-attraction, that the use of substances, puts you feeling good about yourself, and wanting to share those feelings with another, and that is how a reject is made, when no one wants to kiss you have kissed likes or dances with someone else, and that is how a friend is lost in 5th Grade. Something I totally forgot when I called her fought over someone Asian that I liked then she liked, that pattern seemed to always happen, she would get picked, and I would not get a normal competitive spirit for attentions get blown out of proportion, when one likes one, then another does one, and then one feels bad because who liked hers place got taken by another, and then I took one to my Junior Prom, and ended up giving a blow job to the other found out, that was notification that I did something wrong, that as known he was embarrassed that we hooked up, got along, but never each other that night, when I was blackout drunk clubbing and when I got home, put on a one piece bathing suit and did a cannon ball with two peace signs, and someone took a photo of me to memorialize that moment, and then a photo of me sleeping was taken. That is flirting with you, it's because you are drunk its not to hook up, even though he came in my mouth, but we didn't have sex. That was not known publicly would embarrass you or the other, that is an example of feeling like you have done something wrong, by the reactions you have done something wrong. Hooking up is not the way to refinement, its feeling good about yourself, and feeling good about others that was how we all made friends, guys in common we liked in Colorado. There is no such thing as being above hate, or mental illness learned of looking ugly, being stupid, not achieving, or being made fun of in life, and these are not good enough jokes, to limit "the term" called a friend 2013 paranoid to ask what was meant by the yearbook page with a photo of me driving with the guy who freak danced were on the Beema, I walked past like James Bond, whos brother died of a Brain tumor, and whos High School crew, dressed up in treads in High School and in College, I covered my wall in magazine photos, miscommunications elaborations past, as seen or looked at, as sent to my family, to my past via albums, or via friends got to know me as the neighbor memorizing flashcards with neighbors who worked convinced she was a size four, who left her boyfriend, who then dated an older woman, who when seated on a couch in Denver started was taken away from me, told she hooked up with my friends girlfriend in a bathroom, to explain why she was taken away from me. Life things are coming from, and this is where responsibility takes place, your computer, your life, the posters you pick, your wellness, and you of you as questionable, fathomable, told in defense of, with sincerity, as obnoxious, as becoming, whether changed, and as you are now or not as sharp, or did not recognize anything would be about you, or understand whether your condition had the capability of affecting tests you, to see how others respond or who is affected if you become sick, go under the influence of drugs or alcohol, to determine what is hard to understand, or someone focused on that causes illness to others. I applied to one sorority who served me Cesar Salad with no showed me the attic, which was a bed in between walls, sectioned off. To me that didn't seem like it offered any privacy, and couldn't live living area so small with others, but that's sorority life, ambulances and all. That's living alone, while your neighbors across the street don't go out, you don't date, you have not friends, your not playing soccer, youre studying 5 hours a day in the library, and then your I you make friends with your neighbors guy friends roommate and a mutual friend in common who is now married to a friend in common someone in a serious relationship who messaged you on Facebook, he, Richard Roby, and your Dance major friend who was your upper literally partying and parting ways in life, and when youre on your way out, that is not in focus, and not well, many will try to talk to you you are no longer present and able to give love, get anywhere in time, be loved, or represent yourself well, that's partying, it keeps you respect for you, lose your shine, your confident glow, the likeable quality about you "could you be anymore perfect" I was told by some Grassrootscali lives in Colorado, who shook hands with the President, a photo was shown to me. I once held a hat, at the Chateau Mar up with me but declined.

It Takes Years to Improve ...

We all have set backs in life, things we either are or are not proud of, and its moments in life of wellness, that make or break you in life and exposures in life, then what you later become a product of is not your fault, for starting late, that is dating or working having jobs. in life, you cannot make up for lost time in life. And this is the voice of an advisor, versus the voice of someone who is fighting, this is by what is interpreted of me, to remain the same, that's called composure. This is why people are looked into usually, to find something are pried into. And then there is a condition of not being well, not looking well, and not sounding well, after fighting which is now, be well about themselves, while other demonstrated wellness, that is not being as sharp as, or as well as in life. You cannot justify how you drugs or alcohol, no later explanations about your condition will make you feel well now, not especially if by trade or profession you v you later get sick, not appear as though you are claiming to not have benefited from dating, or have been made sick the same, that is an experiences of others, then later upon dating not feeling well by others, whom you have shared intimacies with. I am someone who is size others up, I do not think I am better than others, I do not think I am smarter than others, I do not think I am prettier than others, an good impression is not made, based upon how you were then, as compared to how you are now, be treated the same, that is while over hurt you on the basis of who you have worked for, or based upon what your resume says, make you look like someone who doesn't ca someone else what you look like vulnerable, and as though your past allows them to hurt you as vulnerable. What is being vulnerable, someone who is bossing you around like you deserve it, that is treating you, as though your condition otherwise permits others to feel bossed around others conditions as though forced to comply with your condition. And that is why an unwell condition is made of me, upper chaos overhead, which equates to someone standing in my shoes not feeling well, by the same thoughts, or precursors in life, to intelligence, that good feelings do not come from my condition now or thinking, that my condition now or thinking attracts the chaos o monthly viewers, as though I was not doing well with the steady number of following I had at the time, or needed a boost, more attent the lesson, you are either quietly supported by others, or faced with more pressure in life, pressure from those who received unwanted private filmed or photo, and that is what makes one offensive, seen in a way, not wanted to be seen, then seen here, not congruent to h looking at, and now matches my writing, not feeling good upon reading what I have written, that's my condition that has changed to m and then being short sounding, not enlightening, not with a main point, cyclical, or redundant, without solution, without leadership, no that condition was caused, to serve as experiment, to not make me feel good, then as mentioned through me, every moment when I hav direction of my writing to meet the needs of who does not like me, cause me illness, which has no stopping point, when it comes to ha that was otherwise at peace, and only further supported by facts, anecdotes, or stories, to confirm an illness felt about someone, as bei matter what age they were then, until everyone thinks someone is worthless, or not of value, and until what they feel like look like, by confirmed by them, is gay, or is ugly inside, is mean spirited, talks $hit, does not benefit others, is a source of illness, is to be made fun in the negative, is suicidal, self-harms, hears voices, as though Im in hell, and that voices means that I am in hell, or that I have a acqui hell, to say that I do not feel well because I have done hellish things, or am a hellish person, who deserves to suffer, as though not sens accepting the sexuality of older people, as being happy for, as though I claim they are being sexual toward, or for their own benefit sex as adults, able or capable of giving wellness to older people by sex, as though that's approved by me, and this is about maturity. Comi human being that you are capable of providing wellness to another by sex, and at what point do you realize that you are capable of inh having sex and why, and at what point do you acquire illness by sex, and is it your fault. I think we are all smart enough to recognize t before one decides to give up on us, or we give up on ourselves, but that gives no one the right to speed up the process for us, by givin our choices and preferences in life, whether its by smell sensitive to, or by choice: sex with men. That is who you are drawn to in life t doesn't mean that women don't feel good to eachother and to men, that just means that's who made me feel good, or who made me fee way to live life by love, or by who loved me, become dependent, and that's what made me look immature, and maybe that's how I got my friendships to women, or women losing respect for me, because I got done by men. Its a learning lesson.

Putting Yourself Out in Life ...

There is a such thing as putting yourself out in life, and its not about what others think you become, if as talked about treated, its called experimentation treated as jealous, wanting to be like a woman, why one is curious about women, or looking at women, to be more lik another woman feel good, as though one is capable of making another woman feel good, or is a woman trying to make women feel go taking care of women treated, that's what being labeled gay is like, and that's how you get treated, as though how you are, how you lo themselves, or that their weight evidence of someone who does not like themselves, or a characteristic of someone who is trying to be

And it is those characteristics that are sought to say if you were the one being made fun of, and imitated or replicated among others, the tendencies that it was your body masculine, that as made fun of made other womens bodies masculine or not feminine looking, as though love, make fun of the fact that I have boobs, or to demonstrate that I have a female body, think is to make other women, who do not have love. And that is where the cookie crumbles. If I have never been with a woman sexually, then its treated as though one is losing weight to be and punished so that one does not feel good and cannot be with either, and then it becomes a right to procreate issue, whether one takes and based upon what they have been told be treated worse, as responsible for what is told to them, responsible for the feelings inherited wanting to know, discuss, or have to explain what is known separately to oneself, and not known in combination with what others have luck. Its not such a grosse subject afterall, but the longer you prolong the process of being understood by others, the worse you feel, and where they are now, in terms of wellness and success, compared to where you are, either ruining your life, and your future by speaking forward, I am not God, therefore it is not my choice, who loves me, likes me, or wants to fight me, that is just something I will have to be responsive to the needs of others, not combative, looking for a fight, nor calling upon attentions from others, with an anticipated fight myself under the care of others, what I have communicated about myself, with my interests in mind, while mindful of the concerns of others it's a matter of saying what is thought, that's when in illness such as now, its peaceful, but as watched, speaking to what is withheld or my illness, to make myself look bad, just so that whoever feels smart doesn't look bad or feel bad, having done whatever they have done as bicurious. I understand Gay as being a choice, of comfort, who you identify with, and understand that identifying with me, can cause or intimidate Women, into seeing one another as objects for sex, or belittlement, or self-betterment, I get that, not being considered on I am able to make friends, or because of money, made friends with beautiful Women, that is how I am judged. Then my condition now I had friends or lost friends, no this condition of self-love was discovered 2005, while dating someone, home crying on weekends in bed of wait for love. There will come a time in everyones life, where you will become vain, it sucks, to care what you look like, or to care how you look like, usually you should just have to be well in order to talk to others. Nowadays you have to like what you see, like yourself, and liking yourself, and while looking at others feel good. We cant all be machines, strong and focused, looked at admired or loved, doing what we watch, see you well, or think about how you achieved a well condition, think by illegal means, or not from dating by doing oneself. They don't, you either live in pain alone, having done others wrong, and have no one to bond with, or you make your amends and fess up to about how you got yourself out of illness.

Not Everyone Has Meds ...

Be mindful of the fact that not everyone has meds, or experiences in life to explain their conditions like Leslie. Note: What is a manifest fact or people. And what is communicated internally as being about her, is also done so with respect to all sides, or people, with consistency it is new to science to accept the fact that we can (1) be internally communicating as to whats going on around us presently or past internally presently or in representation of self past having not been well and now better, (3) internally communicate and recognize now that that supposed communication about or inherited from, and (4) recognize now that by stating what is, insult is taken as to, who thought first responding or reacting similarly, seen as a product in it of itself, not like or similar to a product in it or of itself past. That's history, which benefit of living presently, not having to go through the same battles alone, literally or figuratively, and being able to read with cohesiveness frame of mind, that is a recognized wellness apart from the chaos, and that is the gift of literature, when it works. Take you beyond the like writing to make sense, rather than to meet ideas, and arriving to a new way of thinking about things, that keeps others in a state of that is like typing up my table of contents and going backwards and Barack Obama suggested forwards, that's when we are trying to reach without solution provided as to dealing with new facts and circumstances and variables, addressed, as to what has gone well, leave alone this is why professionals are important, not that they create short-cuts for us moving forward, but they are capable of protecting people from unreasonable assertion of defenses, unnecessary competition, unreasonable interferences, loss of enthusiasm and withdrawals, and let them think about, in order to comprehend what is of value now, the time of one another on earth, without the necessity of wasting the time of the other, which is a fight, when neither side sees like the other, and when each side feels as though what they think is right, whether or not and this is why we have LOWER COURT Judges, to micro-manage the emotions and thoughts of people who think they are not at fault and them so deserved, and either given an opportunity to be heard, or if you live in California it is highly recommended to hire an Attorney into consideration, whether or not a person meant well and was not able to help you with your problems, if your problems wind up hurting your needs work or what is working, then it is your fault, for shedding light upon problems or issues, one does not want to personally feel in a dedicated to preventing gun violence, so that everytime something bad happens does not feel apart of the solution that's either working or rather not be included or be precluded from discussions that's understandable, I know everyone feels hurt when things are not going well or rolling well, and I understand that everyone has to make money and usually only dedicates 2% of their everyday thinking to social issues or COURT for, well one thing is for certain its not for gambling, and secondly, of course they care about everyone, and maybe even you nominate you most popular in your class, if it ends the same way no matter what State your in, if you smoke weed, or do cocaine, no matter your mind, and you go into depression, and God knows who else was dependent upon you rolling well with Straight As on every board. Women of the Year Awards, that's when others were proud of you, maybe not proud of who your friends were and why, but proud not to be expected to wow a crowd, or inspire a Nation, or set a trend with barrettes in our hair. Proud!

Feeling Good and Not Feeling Good ...

That's just a facet about life, that you will eventually come to accept, not being as well as, not being as confident as, not being as strong as, not being as strong as, not being as smart as, not being as wealthy as, not being as powerful as, and not being as resilient as. Some of us are that just because one serves their Country, whether in the military, or workforce, means that they are strong enough to handle a fight, and we remember we are all human. Allow what wellness, has been invested in, serves an accurate indicator of what support systems for humans are in it, that means it was either worth the money invested into it, whether that's education or for health purposes preserved, given medical care. All that's the difference between, your individual health, and the health of a community, or a people as a whole. Sometimes we reflect on our wellness sometimes our wellness seems counterintuitive to the type of life we do lead, without a job, without friends, deemed to be in an irreparable situation for a specific few. And that's how we treat people sometimes, based upon what can be provided, whether capable of making others feel well, or something which can be contributed to the whole, whether that's a company, or ones own health, be benefited by the investment of time in living their lives absent minded ours. And that is the order of importance in which one is heard, based upon how one makes others feel, or of value to say, and whether what one has to say speaks to all, or just themselves an individual condition, sought to be replicated in others. The difference between an inspiration and a let down. Someone who seems like imitation, trying to be important, or someone who is not well, witch, someone who convinces others to believe in things or tries to convince others that they have an off the counter cure for their malady, getting others to connect to ideas for wellness counterproductive to the wellness of others be made well by, one woman, or one belief, a society whos wellness depended upon what was accepted at the time, and feel good among others, not feel good by someone living out a better remedy that superceded other available remedies at the time, and by looks ugly, not representative of someone well a typical person looking, thought to be a provider of illness in disguise by trade or profession thought to have a skill, inherited, better than most, by body symptoms or illnesses, by their own means, without permission to treat the illnesses of others, against the law, which is why witches were witches, for the illegal practice of medicine, having illness themselves). If that is my weakness, having given love to too many men, and then bringing up that condition now, is to argue that me sharing or blogging is to make light of the fires in California as a designated non Show Sex in the City, to say that I am taking advantage of a condition of society, by getting better, or doing well, when others are not, to make other people feel better, to argue that I am not helping others, or thinking that I am helping others when I am not doing well, if I am not helping others feel better, or if I believe then or now that my wellness does not benefit others. Sometimes what is said now, and what is said previously that is the cure to disagreement, miscommunication, hate, disagreement, argument, to talk. When is talking not the solution, when it matters respect to the feelings of others stated, and if it subjects oneself or others to harm combative, or a position that insult is easily taken from (1) you have been sued (2) your condition as having mental health issues not a preferred voice of reason or representative of the conditions medications thought immune to the conditions of others or stronger than others, and not deserving of being intelligent or of achieving what's coming to them, as though one has purposefully situated themselves for attack, and therefore argue that one does not represent themselves or others from harm, that's being treated as stupid in life (5) then there is not respected. You are given one opportunity to live, been in a fight in my entire life, and then once its starts it doesn't stop, and that's how you get treated in life, as the source of the fight, something or someone to be fought, disliked, not liked, heckled, mistreated, or tormented as thought deserved, and then you arrive to realize too late to get along with everyone, too late to stay well, and too late to work among the well. That occurs once you are known, and by then you are based upon what you look like, capable of handling a fight or an attack of your condition, as though it will bring out things about you. And that is the purpose for a fight, to attack, and bring out traits to cause a dislike of you. And that is why some people are not liked when they are seen, and not liked, and so treated in life, as the basis for attack, once they have acquired all the traits for attack, not in a condition of wellness, easily offended, sensitive to torment, and that's to treat someone like someone who is famous, to say that it was my identity that attacks our Country, then attack me, as though I see myself as different from people, invincible to attack.

Afterword: There is being in someones life, and not being able to share a life with someone, subject them to harm or to pains you endure them as though they are in your life, or responsible for your hate or mistreatment of them, treat them as an unwanted attachment, or an unwanted woman as feminine as grose, or the cause for anothers illness toward them as deserved based upon what they look like, what their disability, whether or not they have cancer be discriminated, as though one who gets cancer is supposed to be responsible for their luck in life, as though ones condition brought a fight upon others, based upon where someone is in life, and based upon how well they are able to live.

“become a nurse and save lives”

What are your goals are in life, and based upon what you look like, whether another can predict, tell, or recognize you, as capable of a “ideal of equal justice under law”

Where does one stand in terms of equal justice. Once you are punished you will automatically not feel a sense of equality, that’s because member, or accurate representative, of those who are given all their rights preserved.

"Was justice done?"

Justice is never done, it’s a rhetorical question, whether in sight of what is right, and if another has done wrong, the preservation of the opportunity for another to be heard, or to be represented by laws, as they exist absent minded them, their circumstances, or their choice “bias against minorities.”

When the men and women of law enforcement serve, they seek to protect the rights of all, and what happens when the rights of all are wrong. At what point does the public take responsibility for the direction of the law, which characteristics get reinforced, and which cl

“only one on this stage who prosecuted ... for taking advantage of our veterans.”

Who represents veteran status in this Country, does Social Studies count? Exactly, just because you know of what has happened does not prevent it from occurring in the future, that is not a public responsibility, to situate one another as worse off, based upon color, creed, or kind, to the comfort of thinking, or knowing a set of ideas or beliefs to be true, about themselves or others.

“condemning Neo-Nazis”

Can archaic understandings of power and privilege dictate treatment of those conditions now, when will change be accepted, at what point as a reminder to the conditions of people now be understood. That’s when we no longer represent the way things were then, and no longer at that time. At what point will we be proud, and what point will we feel like we have done a good job, making decisions in life, and how we have come.

“body cameras, keep them on full time.”

If we recognize ourselves as technologically capable of understanding one another, and if we have grown more accepting of varying levels in all walks of life, at what point are we worldly enough to know and understand the value of our own life, and the value of the life of someone else alone.

It's Too Soon to Know ...

It is too soon to know, the historical implications and ramifications of the advent of “photography” as a proper system of communication, subject recorded by photograph, and by where those photographs are kept, indicative of wellness to subject as retained by another. That private figure someone known to the masses, and has light (respected) versus someone known to the masses and loses light (such as m those well moments, there were also moments when I was not well and recorded those moments too, and just like anyone trying to fight for their lives, reflect on those moments, when they were well or when they were sick, and there is also a Justice System that records with pride and honor, rejected as well by a member or members of society who did not recognize you as well, and who viewed your condition, face, or level of intelligence, though you were stupid, not pretty, and treated as such, someone whose condition spreads, an unwanted influence in life, by establishing you on the brink of non-acceptance of your condition well, not being congruent to their interests in perfecting or justifying as they saw you: not being liked, insult, distaste, not happiness, unhappiness, and not wellness, illness, and not put together, feeling wrong or wronged, or in a wrong feeling, not happy, and in their own world, affected by you bringing up or through your discussions talk about, when you were not liked, why you were not liked, and how then it was offensive to look at you, and why being offensive to look at does not benefit the condition of those who are well and happy, much, much like a vampire and a victim, it's the brink of change, it's an unwanted influence that they do not want to be changed by, and it's a condition, subjecting one to a permanent change of their condition, if forced to accept or to adapt to the condition of someone not accepted, to overcome with emotion, it's called becoming overcome by what? Loss of enthusiasm, loss of drive, loss of motivation, not feeling good, not wanting to socialize, not wanting to talk to people, not wanting to be out and about, not wanting to help, not wanting to write, not wanting to be not being consistent, not improving, not staying well, and that is how you get treated for the rest of your life if you are unliked, or disliked, you have to accept, being less than, not feeling well with, easily affected, being sensitive to others, and easily changed by others. That is well, the conditions of others physically, so that those who are well or who are smart and perform well absent minded them are not affected by the conditions in life, affected in the same way. That's why this is not a fight, that is why I cannot stay well, that is an inner frustration, that is something like an example of speaking to negatives to justify a hate toward me, as offensive, or in poor taste, or not intelligent, or not deserving of equal treatment, I may not be that person. And if you are looking for change, I may not be the light at the end of your tunnel. And if you are trying to fight for the body to mirror or base your wellness from. And if I am not viewed as intelligent, it's based upon a comparison of what is out there, not on point, and not as put together as others. This is an example of non-compliance, not saying things to make anyone feel better, not saying things in life, not saying anything to benefit who has harmed me or why I was made to feel different than, and this is not in acceptance of my condition on a daily basis changing, my face, my body, and how I feel. Nothing consistent about me, difficult to maintain: wellness, and hard to understand, changes and why, and for what reasons I am having difficulty accepting others, and why I have to work so hard to improve, whether or not I can continue to look well, and how I am dealing with permanent damage to my face and body as a result of loving others, and why I was now treated as an "offender" the mind or body that disrupts the conditions of others, the sense of humor, that disturbs the thinking of others, and to how others think or feel, and a voice of reason, that does not console someone who hates me, or doesn't care if I lose beauty of becoming well, and to be well among, why I stay home. This is an example of "aggravated" and speaking upon being aggravated "not making"

You're Overhead Trajectory of Thoughts ...

Whats does that mean, allow me to explain what Im trying to say. If you are comprised of your thoughts present and past, then your future is determined by the process your thoughts present or past in the positive or in the negative, some of which we have control over and some of which we don't. We see things presently. What we therefore shed light on, past or presently through our writing or through our speaking, represents exacting our own insights or negative ones, based upon who we are, what we know, what we think, and how we choose to reflect on the past presently, or how we view ourselves. Who we were, who we are, while reflecting on who we are now come to be. What is tragedy? According to Oxford Language, "Tragedy is a story causing great suffering, destruction, and distress, such as a serious accident, crime, or natural catastrophe." [1] What are common reactions to tragedy? "A sense of hopelessness or helplessness." [2] One solution to overcome tragedy is to "talk," as explained by healthpartners.com, "Getting meaningful support is critical for recovery. It can also be helpful to connect with others who have shared a similar experience." [3] As a writer, I am always in a spotlight while I may not be like you, or think like you, or have the same experiences as you, that does not mean that there is something inherent in being in a spotlight in life versus someone who does not live in a spotlight in life, capable of seeing the world so differently, that one another's view of the world is different with respect to addressing things as they are, less capable. I have had a learning disability all my life, I used to be a top athlete, with a 3.2 GPA in college, finishing strong, but had my peaks. This may have something to do with it, being a victim of tragedy in the 90s, no matter how normal it may seem, it can hit you readily until you are older, "Common symptoms of PTSD include re-experiencing the event in nightmares or flashbacks, avoiding reminders, panic attacks, sleep disturbance and poor concentration. Depression, emotional numbing, drug or alcohol misuse and anger are also common." [4] I was in a weed 2003 and not drinking in college except for 2006 upon turning 21, it has become extremely important for me to understand, have control, and represent myself well, as well as those around me, and not cut loose. Not that the health of others are contingent upon my ability to control my drinking or do drugs, then I get blamed for how others feel, whether or not they are in my life, considered a contributory factor to the failure of others, not connected. That's social responsibility, taking care of yourself, with regards to the health of others not affect others. Always assume that others will suffer mental health related issues to drugs to alcohol. And that is where I believe disagreement lies, as to the treatment of me, whether or not I have health issues, upon coming forward and speaking in life, or whether my problems were because of something Ive done to change the v me discomfort in speaking, not being sure of what is thought of me, and whether I am viewed as someone not to empathize [5] with, or me, be affected in life, or suffer harms. According to healthpartners.com, tragedies affect us all, whether or not you have been “directly those who are.” [6] At this point for the sake of equality its safe to say that we have all been impacted by tragedy, and it has now become of having each been affected, not assume that the other has not been affected, expect one another to treat each other with acknowledgment care having been given, with respect to the internal barometers of acceptance when it comes to dialogue conducive to supporting the health that excludes one another from wellness. Now exists a problem of acknowledging whether a problem exists and allowing it to exist, or a problem to be paid attention to like COVID. Sometimes the more you think about it, the more susceptible you become to fearing something making around a cause for fear, subject yourself to fear internally, thinking about, focusing on, until it consumes you, that’s how a man feared, thinking about the possibility of a condition happening before it has happened, get sick. Getting sick, is not overcoming, that all a spiritual sense, seeing yourself as not strong, or not capable, then there is being human, recognizing that while situated among others therefore to have problems when it comes to intelligence, which includes image, behavior, and beauty, something we think upon looking something that is seen, that’s purely visual, then there is feeling, what we see or what we think, upon processing come to know or understand thinking, resonates. Visual Knowledge, what is the purposes for discerning visual knowledge from mental knowledge, well one thing is certain things aren’t always as they seem looking at things, this is a growing field, “the visual meaning-making process on the open social [such as with], pop cultural communication.” [7] Why is this important, because its whats inside that counts, “the viewer’s own perception become part of the interpretive process.” [8] One of the biggest dilemmas faced, is what intelligence looks like, and what wellness looks like and intelligence looks like, then that could mean we are being too hard on others in society, when it comes to (for the sake of equality) seeing one another as a threat to our health, or to our intelligence, which is not being human, taking responsibility for your own intelligence exposures, come to be, a representation of what you have been drawn to, what you like, what speaks to you, what represents your ideal you get to be who you want to be in life, and part of living in a free Country is getting to be who you want to be, within reason, that’s why these are qualities or traits you get graded on as a child being in a classroom of your peers, expected to be a certain way, that is so when intimidate, or make others feel small or not comfortable, you respect the air space around you, and practice good hygiene and proper etiquette so you do not offend the rights of others, or their personhood, ability to be human, comfortable with themselves, and that’s whats in question someone who is well, and should we accept people solely based upon whether they are confident and feel good about themselves. And what does that mean? And why is that okay to treat people based upon what they look like, or sound like? Tomboy or not? For example research, just made up a word “visual knowledge” arrived to, that exists. :)

Not Feeling Like Yourself ...

I woke up today not feeling like myself, feeling beaten up, lethargic, dehydrated, and with a headache, it happens. Life is all about self and do you feel physically the next day. A lot of people have difficulty not feeling good and Im sure Im not the only one who doesn't feel esteem issues as the culprit for not feeling good, but I'm sure that it's more than that. What does living "a balanced life" mean to you? Single and Unattached ...

Its not advantageous for you to be single, and it is recommended to date in your 20s, and not wait until your 30s to settle down, especially a single woman in the workforce, that part of you that is left unattached, attaches and that is how you are made to look stupid, or to think about your work or to people at work, that's an uncomfortable position to be in in life. Not sure of yourself, not sure about others, or while forcing talk, or not talking to you at all. Its always better to have someone in mind, someone connected to you, someone to rely on, someone to not be stranded in life, with no one to love, always have faith, that if you do your best there will be someone to love eventually when the time comes, love others, to love others, with the hopes of finding a match, someone to connect with spiritually, emotionally, and physically, in a way that is different from others. I am someone who never dated, Ive hooked up, but Ive never dated, been taken to restaurants, or out on a night in town, many times in public went for me. Some relationships are limited to the bedroom, and just be grateful for whatever type of relationship you are given in life, a public boyfriend, someone to put on your Facebook "in a relationship with," or friends to take pictures with, that seems to be a good show. After you become a public figure it becomes a matter of who wants to identify with you, who has identified with you, or who not to identify with you. There can be no understanding past misunderstanding, and this is what makes public speaking difficult, everything you say from you, as though the basis for you being well liked, or read by many has anything to do with everything you say being right, or exact, or can be understood by others, whether it is coming from you, or with expectation from others, speaking, and where your tone comes from. On any given day, depending on what youre going through, depending upon your exposures, depending upon how you feel, this you cannot control, something you come to understand later in life, accepting of your conditions, accepting of what others thinks, and not take anything to heart, that my drive is coming from a fight, a fight placed within, or a fight placed in my face to deal with, those may be the troubles that others face (I have 66k monthly viewers to my Pinterest), wondering where my motivations in life come from, whether its to help myself, or to help others, or coming from at all times, we all have different experiences in life, different focuses, and different things make a person feel good in life, based upon where they come from, who they are surrounded by, friends, companions, and in public, by what attracts to them in life, is based upon by what thoughts they become consumed by look, whether that's guilt, having a dirty mind, whether that's wellness, having a sharp mind, or good with another, or whether that's feeling good, doing things that make them feel good, or whether that's anger, being consumed with anger, or own happiness in life. It is on those basis that people separate themselves, seeing someone as guilty, and then making quick judgments about others, feeling like them, or seeing someone as emotional, caring too much, or too deeply about issues, and so separate themselves from someone, in life, you cannot expect everyone to be happy for you, you cannot expect everyone to empathize with you, you cannot expect everyone to love you, you cannot expect everyone to listen to you, you cannot expect everyone to respect you, you cannot expect everyone to be quick to light up around you, and you cannot expect everyone to wonder like you about life. Think about life when the time comes, and if you are hit with a hard hit, then by all means live for the moment and enjoy life, as it comes to you. But don't force anything to happen for you in life, that is to be easily accepted then yes you will find trouble speaking in public, mostly disjointed, or not put together, or have trouble vocalizing in front of a camera and microphone in shy in life, that is without experience not able to speak well. Speaking well comes from experience, and not from anyone, that's improvement, it not being difficult to speak, and when asked to speak confident.

Where You Are in Life ...

I was just thinking about this today, am I with the pack, am I behind in terms of understandings, am I bringing the pack down, am I leading the pack and slowing down. Then I asked myself, am I where I want to be in life, and found an article that told me this, if you feel like you are behind, to remind yourself that "Your end-state is unique to you. And therefore only you can do the requisite soul searching." [1] No one can be your advisor when it comes to living life, to plan out your curriculum for the next year of courses to take to end up toward reaching your goals, you invest into each area of your life, that makes you feel whole at the end of the day fulfilled, exactly where you want to be and need to be, by thoughtcatalog.com, that mentioned the following, "The happier you are with your decisions, the less you need other people to be." [2] and be mindful of your influences in life, when you see someone doing a better job at living life than you see yourself doing, don't be jealous, you weren't trying hard enough" [3] and should you have tried harder focusing on those things in life, that the other person has, maybe you of those Facebook people looking at other people's Facebook's and getting depressed. Typical. What makes you feel good, and if you for those issues are, and it certainly should not be their happiness absent minded yours. If your happiness is not dependent upon the ha success should not affect you. That's basic to separating yourself from a person's interests in life that do not serve you, not all will be care about making one another happy, its not always your responsibility to discern the cause for unhappiness in others, only your job t you, and what you have to offer the world. Know your strengths. Another excellent point this article makes is to stop "just chasing hig best is when your business is in order, your work is handled, your wellbeing is prioritized." [4] Now this makes sense, how often to w thinking that only doing things that make us feel good, means that we are doing things right, sometimes you may be doing things that in life, think about it. How far will you get in life only doing things that make you feel good, only doing things that are easy, only doir that would be going straight to work after undergrad. Not possible. Therefore I went to two law schools instead of applying for jobs, th and instead got to work places I loved and enjoyed helping others as legal professional in the workforce, a standard of care above the s certified crisis hotline counselor, a volunteer position, but wanted to do more, wanted to be more able to help others, and then went to those in need, with more professional skills and training in order to do so. That is an example of challenging yourself in life, that's not challenges head on in life, like putting on an outfit, where nothing matches, and you look odd, sometimes there will be fights, not wan not wanting to attend an event but forcing yourself to go, not wanting to show up to an AA meeting, but making yourself go anyways, somewhere you have to be in life, in order to make things go right for you in life, sometimes that's the difference between wellness an

Accept that for some people making fun of you makes others feel good, whether that's calling you out, discriminating you, rejecting y to another in disagreement with you, seeing how you respond as others are remembered, whether you take insult living the life you hav influenced by who you are, where you are in life, or where you are headed in life, be judged. That's others watching you, with anticipa headed anywhere in life, doesn't have a good feeling about you, or sees nothing in you, you cant accept to be treated well by everyone you in life, or by where they are in life, not think highly of you, based on what you have in life, or where you are in life, not all will be care to be nice to you, or with enthusiasm help you, or want to hear what you have to say, that's people, not about you, about themselv life. I am aware of the fact that as I write, I may not feel good, based upon agreements in life, agreeing with what I have to say relate, not feel well, that is something I cannot control, the length of time it takes to make sense to someone I do not make sense to or the leng good, or feel proud, or feel smart, we don't all recover at once, from any hate, or disagreement, concerning ones own condition or the does not like you, to not want you to feel good, does not want you to do well, and does so threaten your purpose in life, to do well and they want things to look like, its not how they feel things should feel, and its not what they expect to see coming from you in life. You and lows in life, depending on how put together you feel, how well you stay, and how sick you get, and all those well moments, well t respected by someone who give you love, but cannot stay, or babysit you, through every up and every down in life, that's being loved. played a major role in their careers or their lives, but I do not think that all sex is pornographic, only the sex that is shown by photo or for judgement, that's to see your face, and your body, in public to see how others respond looking at your face and your body, as you c with you be featured as being intimate toward another and to yourself, that's the equivalent of a heartattack. And if that is not somethi that is not something you need to record for anothers pleasure, its not their pleasure that's being recorded, its you being pleased with y you proud of yourself, and you behaving in a way that suggests that another likes what he sees, or admires what he sees, that's a confic upon thinking that another is watching them, how they behave, and whether they seem like they like the attentions that they are getting asked for love lights up and looks beautiful in receipt of love or attentions, or whether someone is receipt of attentions does not shine o photography, whether someone lights up upon being looked at for an image to be saved, or whether someone does not shine upon a m for later public use, to defame, or ruin someones career. I have always said that you only live life once, meaning once through, just lik from my head to pen and paper, 60 words per minute. You cannot go backwards in life to perfect your past, and for every moment you have not felt well, similarly thinking about that moment now, can cause you to not feel well, or to not be proud of who you are, that's you, happening in the past, that doesn't represent who you are now as seen. You cant have a new life, if you're not proud of yourself and learning from your mistakes being a better decision maker, and keeping to yourself, not allowing yourself to get hurt, loving less, work independent, absent placing yourself above or below others in society, accept others as they are, that's acceptance, that no matter how other is thinking, and having respect for what they are going through in life, as not being about you, whether or not they know you, true

Being Given a Life to Live ...

When given a life to live, you live your life, generally without worry for what others think, and without worry about how you look to others, on meds, that slow you down and make you tired, then that is not a choice, to be limited in energy, and for it to take longer for you to get things done, and not in harms way. Generally no risks need to be taken when following your dreams in life, if its something you have been doing, and they are, if matters can be easily identified by others, need not be stated. Then there is following your intuition, that is by skill, practice, and does one react in the negative to all or to specific professions, think any decision making needs change, things may only become relevant in the past, however relevant your past is as applied to your present condition having gone through what you have endured later in life as a family, not attentions from others, that's how you feel about yourself in life, you cant make things happen for you in life, by leaving others, who have been focusing on since the time you began to focus solely on your studies, and wherever you are now, hopefully its in a position that works so long as you are living a good life, then you do not become a factor accounted for should anything go wrong for anyone else in life, by those who trained them, or by the jobs they took, expected to lead a life in congruence to those principles, and that is how professionalism is practiced, be confident when focused on things that matter to you, then be so driven in life, and accept the expense of feeling hurt, bothered, or concerned, but excited for you, or take matters into their own hands, when thrust with the responsibility of knowing you, or feeling compelled to share their support, or the more you allow for it, the more unstable they become, when that feeling is lost, not feeling good about you, and then they are considered stable, or well enough to be of value to others. When there are a lot of interpretations already made, and when many have a hard time of you, who did not believe in you, who did not support you, or with hesitancy gave up on you, that's just life, you are either living life or not, life, however few, and just because we don't have a group photo to prove it, does not mean those friendships don't still exist, and does not

Thats Not How Life Works ...

No one will rescue you from your problems, no one will answer your questions, no one can read your mind, and no one can predict for you the moments in life, that's not going to help. In accepting all parts of your life as remembered, there will always be moments when you will be in a condition to improve from, or bounce back from a disordered thought process, and cannot be fixed via discussion of how you were when you were, who cares what makes you special in life, that's usually something that others don't care about, what makes you beautiful, or smart. I don't know. When you stop living life, that means socializing and going out, or attending meetings, that's not the solution to overcoming social anxiety, respect those who I have attended meetings with, I understand that it's hard to attend meetings, and if people are attending that means they are recommended to attend meeting twice a day, if you are able, then do so, its doesn't matter to me, if that's to paint another picture of me to other people, don't practice outside. When you are well, and if you have presented yourself well, that is when you are heard, but not if you are not in what you have to say, that takes practice, learning how to speak to a lot of people, and Im sure I have done a worse job in the past or

I understand that I will have voices for the rest of my life, and that is something I cannot change about my life, right now, and I remember having hurt someone, and not known what I was doing, whether that was done to me and imitated, or whether that was read

How an Insult is Made ...

An insult is something that is not taking lightly in general in American Society, which is about individual health, not about the quality the past, and when the past cannot be used to cure right now. That must mean that right now is a new condition. Enjoy the good times your past becomes your opponent, the more you talk about it, and the more you reference your past, that’s what eventually consumes y appear as the immature one, or someone who has not outgrown those issues, and still bothered by them. If your past is something not k fixate on what is not going right for you in life, can cause one to think or remember other times in life when things have not gone well overall, wonder why you are where you are now, not strong, weak, mentally ill, in pain, and suffering. I think I am past the point of be meet in life, that make a positive person to be around and to know. All difficulties aside, if you have to start your life over again, be th only seen as a reaction to poor reactions toward you, then get hurt for reactions in life, to prove what? I think this cycle of reactions fo their actions. Whenever you do something wrong, and whenever something odd occurs, you will always remember those moments in l shows that you have given up in life, or thinking about whether to continue living, that’s not helpful to anyone. And if someone thinks Media changed my life for the better, and also made things more complicated for me, not allowed to be myself, not allowed to stay po that time, as it affects others being known, that was before now, which is more complicated and more difficult, and more painful. I wa to me, and be mindful of my space on earth, website, and not intrude upon the life spaces or life cycles of others, keep to myself. This upon you, as the condition that changed the conditions of others, as known, not appreciative of being known or referenced to in life. T and that’s a very difficult position to be in in life. Not feel accomplished at the days end, and not have worked hard enough in the day

Everything You Say Matters ...

If what can be said, can be said with ease, then do so with ease, but never in the heat of any moments, claim to have it all figured out i proof strategy to a successful launch, and if you get tired by the end, means you have done your best, and that’s what makes or breaks mentioning those you remember from your life, that devalues you as an asset, it takes away from your originality, and it makes you se followers when I was in law school, along with other multi-media accounts, sharing their mind and humor. When you have the time to set of good ideas about life, gets compared to another persons ideas about life, or company direction and focus, and that’s how you ap presentable, that one has the resources and ability to represent others, and as compared to another company, who once mentioned that difficulties or handicaps in the making of your identity online, and through sharing your story, seem the more difficult concept, as con has been changed or based upon anothers company being registered as a “publishing corporation.” And this pen name now a magazine in life. After having been mentioned by me, as standing out while I was in Law School, noticed.

Picking Up v. Logical Thinking ...

You can’t outsmart a system that works, and sometimes whats working for others, is not suitable for you to be in the know about, and what makes sense for others, may not always make sense for you. Then there is your attitude in life, if you are not a happy person, if y quiet or lived separate from those you consider family, including friends, best friends, and loved ones, not all are capable of finishing wellness again, and this is what faith is for. When things are not going right for you in life, to continue trying hard in life, until things prior to a suicide attempt. At this point in my personal development and writing career, I can now say, that I was helped by Doctors, w time in order to enjoy living life, that’s the cost of being stuck in your head about life, thinking there is something wrong with you, the slower speed in life, maybe that’s so one is not hyper, does not speak too much, thinks carefully before they speak, and does not jump called “#thegame” how many in your face cheap shots can you take in life, and how many tell you how it is companies need to be made at the cost of not growing up watching Michael Moore films, and tuning in to those idiosyncracies in life, or devastation, and witness the aftermath. When something past has occurred that has been lost in time, or cannot be re-manufactured, a valuable insight had at a point in time, but you have to say is based upon a present reading of now. How to Exit The Game:

1. Share what you knew, and how you have been affected by right now.
2. Share how what is thought and felt now, has to do with how others feel.
3. Share about how the makings of your beliefs, were not comprised of happenings.
4. Share about what films and music genres, captured your attentions then and now.
5. Explain why you have not worked, and what you were doing during that time.
6. Have compassion for those new to your life, who may be overwhelmed too.
7. As you look back on your life, understand your happiness is about your life.
8. As you reflect on what is working for you now, understand that can be tampered with.
9. Figure out what you need in life, and based upon those respects wanted, earn them.
10. Never give up building trust in life, and doing what is required of you to stay well.
11. Be forgiving of those who lost faith in you, due to a suicide attempt.
12. Understand that Abilify prescriptions are customary for Bipolar patients.
13. Understand that Bipolar is a pre-condition to suicide, means your thinking is off.
14. If your thinking is off, understand that that is Bipolar, not because of others.
15. Understand that when your thinking is off, it can affect the thinking of others.
16. If your thinking is off, it affects the thinking of others, because you are Bipolar.
17. If you are declared Bipolar, that’s what that diagnose is for, to declare you ill.
18. Once you are declared mentally ill, that is a disability you have to live with.

If in reality people are having trouble speaking, and don’t talk much, then maybe that explains how the blogging thing took off, its to get pleasure, assimilate to that lifestyle of bearing it all, blogging is not for everyone. These are but examples in the grand scheme of things bought it, or is it because its Stephen King and author I followed, its because its Stephen King and author I followed. I don think his be managing the past, and things said. That’s always a good sign, if people are immune from controversy, or upon recognizing where a co them to be well spoken. For some people change is simply a matter of hearing something said well, and then talking themselves back to more positives through you than negatives, and doesn’t bring you down in life, that’s where a natural sense of motivation comes from, of life, means that you have to think based upon how you are feeling to discern what has processed, makes sense, and what words or id is a difference between two people, why some people do not match up in life, see you online, meet you online, talk to you, then reject sexual way. That he could tell. For the most part, I think my blog has been helpful in getting to know me, I don’t think my blog is a po now has pain, so shorter on time when it comes to bonding with others, and less present responsive when it comes down to decision m without people in your life, as though you are someone who does not warm up to others judgmental. I don’t know how smart you need conditions, or wonder too much about why people are this way or that way, we all have bodies to maintain, we all have conditions to overcome, difficulty eating food, or eating too much food, we all make choices in life, and like smoking, why? If it's a condition you have nervousness, and worsens my condition. Much like embracing the Gay aspect about me, I later realized, that growing up my Dads house, with two more girls, Explains being rude until College. I never grew up competitive with Women, but learned later in life, that upon being less than, that's especially not if you share about it with others, all the Men who did love you, accept you as is.

When Things Are Not Okay ...

I may not be feeling well, but that is no ones business but my own, and whether me not feeling well empowers anyone, to not feel at fault, has to be announced to the world that you don't make them feel good, and do not make them feel okay with themselves, or having intentions. In 2009, I did my best to go to Law School in spite of how I felt when I drank, and have not been drinking for the majority of my life, alcohol later in life, now obese. Ive usually always been in the 140s whether or not I was petite, or had a pretty face, only recognized myself as a challenge for me to run. I really have to push myself. Those are conditions about yourself you cannot change, not feeling as well as you want to figure out whats wrong with you, or why you do not feel good with them, or why it takes so long for you to fem up. Maybe that's just life please. This happens to you later in life, as you get older, become more selective about the time spent around others, more to yourself, is what was done with you, by those who were not patient to witness you blossom, become confident, more self-assured, or become a website now. Because others could not figure out what was wrong with me, and because my health kept failing, I did my best to keep it from hurting, it doesn't matter what hurt you, or how you got hurt, youre expected to overcome that hurt again and again, no matter what the cause is.

Issue: Whether Its Clear ...

Some things come into existence, via the creation of understandings in life, and some facts about life come into existence, made by people who want to communicate, do so. And although the times have changed, the systems by which one is trained to communicate, will always stand, things are about, either by reading into the writing, by who is mentioned, or by what is known about a person, separate from their writing. I want to know to understand how you came to be, what causes you peace, what has enabled you to change, or what has aided you in coming to a move, and mouth opens, and my head feel sick, then upon covering the lens, I try to regroup, then internally I feel sick, that's being worried around others, run out of air, or feel uptight. We are not all capable of visualizing where we want to be in life, and by what we are doing, a good fit, and sometimes you will not be able to find a job, and not be a solid fit for the position, that's all based upon your wellness and how you are perceived. I'm impressed, give people that right to be better than you, and don't take it personally, if you don't shine or stand out in life among other peoples way of testing to see how far along you are in terms of understanding insults or inside jokes, take personal, and if you take personal, aggravated or bothered, ask yourself, why are you bothered by the comfort of another with someone you know, and whats so offensive? world, where others feel comfortable, they will act in a way, that demonstrates their comfort and confidence in any given setting. -C. I feel counter to what you are saying, whether as a result of taking the side of a situation described empathize with the other, or whether you are. Regardless of who is in your audience, whether that's someone reading in support of your work, someone new to your work, someone who doesn't know how they feel, no matter what you sound like, no matter what you look like, and no matter whether what you have to say makes sense or not, it can be something interpreted not stated, such as a feeling, or a deduction, or an assumption, or a short phrase that sums up what is being said, or subject someone to illness, that is being misunderstood, misinterpreted, where no matter how anything is said, everything is understood, or wrongdoers, and that is not a type of behavior I want to condone, talk about, or teach others about in life, how I was hurt or treated like a child, [reconciliation] and transfor[mation] [of our] biological understanding[s] of the human condition. [3] From a Biologists standpoint, "life" making it at times "unbearable," then goes on to exclaim how we "nearly destroyed our own planet." [4] How can this be? If we are not achieving "real peace for the human mind." [5] To me this means letting things go more, until we are better equipped to forget, have self-control, or not for better or worse. He then pleads for more acceptance of the human condition as is, explaining that even in our "seemingly imperfect, selfless moral instincts, and why we humans became conscious when other animals haven't," is because we gave meaning to our lives.

Interdisciplinary Measures ...

Sometimes when something goes wrong in one area of life, we are forced to improve upon what we have left, the same goes for discipline, to understand a discipline or study. I can't say that the same problems occur time and time again, as though history repeats itself, not unless you are far, that's hurting the established order for processing problems, issues, or circumstances, and abusing the trust that has been given to you by your behavior. And trust is broken, or stalled, when one party fails to reciprocate." [1] This explains what was later stated, how to defend a relationship come to be? To me an untrustworthy relationship comes to be, whenever someone is treated until a manipulated condition is created, or devaluing a person in front of everyone to communicate that this person online is not the same person they are offline, to make a person seem as though they are saying one thing and doing another, or saying what they think others want to hear, and not speaking the truth from me, or what I have to say in life. When how you feel is connected to what is written, this is how a disconnect occurs, when one goes to a viewer or the reader, and that's what causes a turn off, when someone does not make sense, when things do not add up in their statements, when needed, or feel whole in return. There is stating the issues as you see it, then there is dragging people into problems unnecessarily. It is not about someone who pleases themselves to the wellness of others, but am not well myself, as though I need others to feel good, and do not care if they want what they cant have in life" or "someone who wants what others have in life" as though I have not already provided for myself and my life, be, is not for another's negative insights to cast me out as someone who is disorganized, or a disorganized thinker, who is not positive and who is not we all connected. Many people use the test "sleep on it" before making a big decision, that's when they cannot make a decision the day after, the person cause me to think too hard, and does life become more difficult for me having accepted this person into my life. That's what trust is, who doesn't feel good to look at, to be with, to know, or to think about, a headache, that is if someone thinks there is something wrong with you, doesn't make sense, someone who is not normal, someone who is responsible for the condition they are in, based upon what they look like, friends, but instead decided to focus on Law School, graduating from Law School and with pride continue to go to Law School. Maybe I should have hands, be loving toward me, and ask me to do things, which I would only later come to understand as stupid, and a misfortune, why I should have harmed, and make things about themselves, as though they were harmed when you got harmed, seek attentions for themselves, without caring in spite of what was done to you, despite who made you look stupid, despite what choices you made in life that others think you made you should have harmed you in life, with awareness, that it could happen again to you, because of who you are, what you sound like, how nice you are, to make themselves feel better about themselves, like my life is replaceable, or can be relived, as though I have not worked hard to make Intermediate Phases in Development ...

I can't say that personally it was easy becoming a blogger, sure I was following my heart, but had never anticipated to generate 63k monthly views, 24,645 on Alexa, all within one year's time. My site's current valuation is $475,899, according to siteindices.com. This all occurred on

I have been on and off Twitter for years, generating upwards to 100k Impressions for my posts, although with no Followers, probably would write, and that's how the brainstorming process began, now we have Pinterest. At the time Google only had a few quote cards but now things have changed for the better, it's a great system of sharing, short and concise. I used to make quotes on an app called Quote then I got sick etc. got into trouble, having relapsed on Cocaine, that was a mistake, when the weather is perfect, and your mind is clear were crying in your car afterward symbolized one thing, you are alone, still alone, and why you are alone, is probably because you don't help you in life if youre not willing to help yourself, and make friends in life, friends are important, and its especially important to be rich you were posting things to your Facebook, as though something shared privately in a business meeting was for all to hear, without the box wine, and did a gram of Cocaine, while your Cat was dying of Cancer. I kept my Cat alive for 8 months, begged my Mom to pay for him alive, put him down. -I heard in an Interview that Jonah Hill came up telling jokes in bars in NYC, so I followed suit, and shared that I met my Ex 2013-2014, after singing Mariah Carey with my headphones on, did backwalkovers, and then had Tacos and a drink watch information on it. At the time I was attending Alcohol Classes around the corner, and hung out afterwards and drank once or twice, this Life will not be perfect, and sometimes as described life may seem, stupid, slow, or uneventful, not the beautiful story we had hoped it would be, talking to people, making moves. No one can coach you to success in life that's the main lesson, I went to one Google Mixer I made but it generated up to 66k monthly viewers to my Pinterest and website. Not what I wanted. I paid $50 to meet with a Google Executive to pitch my having been associated to OJ who was in for Gun Possession. I know that concepts may not be perfect, and I understand that applying them is not enough to do volunteer work, and although others may hesitate to publicly support others, all that matters is that you are comfortable speaking up there was no anti-gun violence music campaign, maybe one listed that wasn't in present working condition, not known to all, that is why it is as the cause for violence or for the use of weaponry in real life. You are what communicates to you, but that doesn't mean that anyone is responsible “socially responsible” for Gun Violence etc. That's not how change is made, by negative acts. We may change in response to what we had, and if you so choose to gear people up for a fight, make sure that it is a fight to be won, in so motivating others, to respond and help with non-acceptance. That thin line is called aggravation, when a thought becomes lost, when a feeling cannot be fixed, when an idea is missed so that externally, others are not exposed to the same conditions overcome and endured in private, which was why I emailed myself. Success is a condition by popularity online, which decrease upon illness mental health issues, and improves upon wellness, flying high, absent mind

If you're not working with Pop Culture, don't work against it, would be my best advice as a Blogger or commentator online. I have been able to strengthen[ing] interactions with people who are also into the same kind of things,” and serves to “help foster bonds among people of different backgrounds in the manner in which they have expressed themselves, and the meaning that can be derived from those works, communicates to all something that is shared in the vast amount of representation throughout the various genres.” [3] However that influence is not mutually accepted when it comes to the social etiquette based philosophies when it comes to the establishment of who is important to a society and why. [4] Perhaps not all were into the equivalent of stating that what is well liked in America and popular “Pop Culture” wise, is viewed as an unwanted influence in other countries exposure to the cultural values of one institution that those values be carried throughout our own lives, let alone another Countries life style idea of a glamourized American lifestyle that is practiced by the family.” [6] There is one connection to the Kardashians and that is through my family under a Magnolia Tree in my backyard by the swing, I remember. Kris Jenner, the Mother to Kim Kardashian, attended my Birthday Party which she featured on the show. I have been to the Kardashian's home once as a child I think, there was a Brady Bunch style photo of squares on the wall however fragile those terms are. Im not sure whether that means that others will be more in acceptance of me, or whether that will cause the more uncomfortable I feel, as though I am supposed to go along with jokes and insults, and treat me as an unwanted connection or influence. Its an Acquired Taste ...

I wouldn't say that dating older men, or having crushes on older men is normal. Its an acquired taste. While older women seem to be d you, and seeing men who are older as more intelligent than younger men, put together, but that's not always true. As we all become m smarter the younger generations get, the less reliant they have become on others, let alone older generations, for providing answers to to-peer networking is important, there still needs to be some oversight with regard to what is being shared, how things are being shared each ones peers in life. Not thrown into the public stream of commerce for use or interpretation, this is why private social networks ha from treatment of dating men my age, who do not have the time to talk to me, or do not spend as much time bonding with me and talk in love with you," while we were having sex. Sober sex is a really emotional experience, I do not think all are prepared for, keep a box intended to be a casual experience such as a one night stand, but it happens for some reason, others wanting you just in that moment in beyond just self-betterment, and it involves including people in your life, whether through work, socialization, dating, going out, netw happen for you change wise, and this is why its important to get going again in life, after failure or setback. Many people will come to you do not feel comfortable dating younger men, does not mean that those will only be your options in life if you choose not to date of

Your Face When Upset ...

Depending upon what you look like, how you feel, whos watching, what voices you hear, you will either look at peace when you are t messenger services, there will always be changes to how you feel and how you look, so long as you allow voices to enter your body an feelings or carry upset so that if your face changes think that their face will change too, and that's how the beauty in life is called into a permanent condition of the face and body, that is difficult to change, people thinking they are better than you, people not liking you, or there is how you carry yourself in private and in public, that also matters as to how others feel about you, whether they can trust you, a something talked about, how just talking to someone, can change your face, that was something realized by me, that's not by love or n something talked about, whether my heart is something not fit for replication in others, whether my face is not viewed as helpful to be And yes my face has changed since college, and that doesn't mean that my face has changed because of sex, or say that my face chang attached, that's being human, and different things make different people feel good in life. Sometimes people like to be watched, and so composure, lost confidence, or do not like ourselves, and that can happen upon opening up to someone who does not like you, but just that is to excuse all other rejections or punishments of you in life, as though you have had a negative influence in life, connected by he with my head tilted in a photo, that was imitating Justice Roberts, and then my face changed at work. There will be moments of pride face, and that is losing your composure and beauty, easily affected by others, spooked, or made to change inside look weird. I think lo posing through voices. Voices serve as an intermediary step between you, your beauty, and your ability to connect with another, then y is when bad things happen to you when no one is bothering you, why voices are given to you. That's is to see whether you are controll as through those happenings shed light on the rest of your life, or generate light for others to feel free of harm, absent minded negative something that scares you, like an idea, or a memory, or a look. That is losing your heart in life. That's not going by how you feel, and instead of thinking within. Thinking within is interfered with, so that you cannot connect to Justice Roberts, as though you would situa this much, God is more powerful than face changes and feelings, more forgiving than negative times or things gone missing, and less lost, that was power created by me, by few interactions, and trusts built by me, by a recording of my thoughts presently, and because I control me, and affect me to see if others change around me. That's not the point of connecting to cause illness to others. And that's not with from anyone, and I don't need improvements, or impressions made upon me to achieve beauty.

Overcoming Depression ...

Recognizing those heavy feelings, can be a daunting task, especially if left to your own devices, trying to figure out what is wrong with disorder" and thoughts of suicide, and here is what she had to say, "The thing that makes depression feel worse is that there usually isn't comprehend, if its difficult for you to comprehend why someone would feel that way, then pat yourself on the back, for not having bipolar are resources to begin coping, or to help a loved one begin coping with depression or thoughts of self-harm, and suicide. What are the benefits of lightening up? "Lightening up can help you to drop unimportant stuff and leave you with more time and energy box? Exactly. Don't limit your thinking to negatives alone, you'll be bound to tie yourself up in a bunch of things that don't make your voice is your ego, and reminds us that sometimes it is your ego telling you things, that can cause you to have negative thoughts about you given to us as a group. Reaching a Point of Controversy ...

You are either well, and represent controversy well, or you falter in upset, not strong enough to withstand, any upper chaos of disagreement, lived, associate the past to you, as though you bear the responsibility to represent those ideals in life, or feel pressured to demonstrate to others of disagreement to others. That's the point of being loved, or being well enough to be loved, remembered pleasantly in life, not be an obstacle in life to make the right choices, be judged based upon whether you make the right decisions in life, or whether you make the wrong decisions. change. If you are to be a provider of insights online, for better thinking, that must come from a good place, otherwise don't broach the negatives win, or be ruled by interpretations of me in the negative speak to. While that may slow you down in life, revisiting things said that don't make sense, don't process, don't lead one away from discomforts in life, and don't resolve any chaos existing when it comes to what you have to say to accommodate another's needs, whose interests are not in your best interests or are intended to disfavor you, when they don't understand you, or view you in the negative, that's not being able to perform. If you can't stay well, it makes it hard to be around people. Now come to my attention that if my computer was looked through then I am being judged upon complaints made by me, then treated as though I think that your condition now is a product of mistakes you have made and in defense of self have situated you so that if mentioned you would see whether later statements were about people from your life, or in communication of wrongs, as though you have done others wrong, by which they see you in the negative who hears what you have to say as being about them, or about people connected to them, and the hurts you so much that you are abhorred by society, someone poor, who talks to themselves, as though you were who the President was making fun of, to see whether you are feelings and losing motivations in life. There is a stopping point when it comes to writing, and that includes how you feel, how others feel, as though I have not developed fast enough, as though I'm supposed to develop with others, living in my own world, focusing on myself.

Selective Speaking ...

That's not being at peace in life, speaking differently to people, depending upon whether one is in private or public, and its by how you jobs in life, judged, and that is why I work from home. And that is why I am presently having difficulty carrying on conversations you, that you have to disprove in words, or by face, or features disprove as not being true about you, that is base the condition for acceptance you get treated by society if you don't stay well and stay a member of society. The looking at people others standing out to you, will think less of you. Its by how you are alone, you get treated, and how you are around people in real life, and how you are online in public seen by someone who doesn't like you is: an ugly face, beauty loss, loss of features, changed head shape, body dysmorphia, inability to bad energy, or not the energy of someone smart, who stays home, and doesn't drink or go out, and then say that because this person has the wrong way, or that you are a bad connection in life, ignored. These are the that's not my princess arguments, idolizing other people then be treated as stupid, for not being comfortable in ones surroundings, made to look at, or be looked at as stupid. And that's how you cannot stay well around others, and that is so they get placed among the sick, get treated like the sick, so that they cannot move forward own devices, left alone in life, and watch from afar, how they seem, trying to figure out life for themselves without help from anyone, doesn't understand why that was done to me, or why I was misrepresented in life, and why sex was asked of me in private by email, and billion dollars, and are considered assets to this Country. Why taint my image, my body, my heart, my mind, to benefit whom should I hearing what I sound like strong, then why hurt me, a waste my energy in life to hear what I sound like strong, and change all the energy incorrect, all reactions are incorrect, and if that's what brings you peace to see me respond and become mentally ill then that's why I to Exhibitionism and Self-Worth ...

Some were fit for modeling, I am not one of them, not until I lost 50lbs, was I happy with the way I looked, and proud of myself, for because one was not attractive already as is. That is where whats inside that counts come from, you may think changes to your looks or think nudity is a symbol of strength, not if you don't deserve it, can otherwise be offensive to anyone, who doesn't want to see what you an emotional response, not a matter of pride and independence, seen as offensive. Not everyone wants to know you in that way. Not even in the public realm becomes a source of discomfort to all, like being told something you shouldn't know, or don't want to hear. Therefore something else, based on what has become of me, someone not as playful, fun, humorous, fun loving, kind, or easy to hear from. Therefore transpired, and where you have been in life, no longer represent the values of what it means to be a good woman, a smart woman, a beauty at some point in time and no longer do. That's when offense is taken as to your representation of self, and based upon your genetic makeup seen as a later reaction for "coverage" of issues, to say you have later identified as something you are not, to cover for an issue with respect about them, or you would not have loved yourself had it not been for them, or their acceptance or non-acceptance of you, then judge yourself and pride yourself in who you are, another thinks its because of their wellness, or their acceptances of you, that you are connected on to building confidences in life, that is not a proper foundation for building respect in life, and that is not a proper foundation for establishing communicate to others questionings in life, make things about themselves, or derive other meanings from what has been saved or come order to feel well, no one cares where you are at in your life later if well affected by you, and no one cares what your condition is now something about you, overheard, or based upon a present showing of self, judged you as having made the right decisions about excluding wrong in your life, becomes the focus on their behaviors or actions toward you not in acceptance of you, or having given you a hard time strong or weak, confident or fading, intelligent or stupid, scared or brave, and depending on what basis shown be judged as scared by the good job of being themselves, and that's how you get judged as being in the wrong. When Story Looks Like Excuse ...

By the time you share your story, everyone will have already had their take on your life, upon meeting you and treating you in life, and though those factors should have been weighed with regards to your suicide attempt February 2009. Past the point of mental illness, it happened to you happened in life. That's living life, you either get smarter as you get older, and more accepting of others, or become not taken as to your present condition, and the manner in which you share your story, at some point you have to stop allowing others to do fear of others judging you, or how you live your life. And then there is acceptance, which can only be learned through experience, not their lives. And based upon the guilts that others carry, is how they correct themselves moving forward as observed, what was not li intelligences in life, and strength unaffected by the wellness or illness of others. Don't Be Ruled by Your Obsessions ...

There are healthy ways of thinking and there are unhealthy ways of thinking. I feel best when I am learning, working towards a goal, and living in the moment. And then you get glued to concepts, reasoning, and concerns about life. And its like your world stops, and you can't get yourself out of a rut in life. Don't panic. There are many ways to move forward, and sometimes overthinking does not help, not without a licensed clinical supervisor (therapist), to run through your emotions and thoughts with you. Somethings need supervision, such as going backwards in life, or even talking about others, sometimes we cant be left alone with our thoughts and that's okay. Its possible to "become obsessed with a person, a place, a goal, a subject—but obsession amounts to the same thing in all cases: addiction ... [and] like all addictions, with time obsession unbalances us." [1]

Keep your mind on things that keep you healthy, don't think yourself into upset, and this is why maintaining a gratitude list is important, to focus on your self-worth, without becoming devalued, chasing feelings, while recovering from emotions, just to feel good.

What are some examples of unhealthy obsessions?

For example, there is:

- "“Obsessive love disorder” (OLD) refers to a condition where you become obsessed with one person you think you may be in love with. You might feel the need to protect your loved one obsessively, or even become controlling of them as if they were a possession.” [2]

Symptoms and Causes for “Obsessive love disorder” may include:

- “Disinhibited social engagement disorder (DSED) is an attachment disorder. It may make it difficult for children to form deep, meaningful connections to others.” [3]
- “RAD develops when a child’s most basic needs for nurturing, affection, and comfort haven’t been met. This stops them from forming healthy relationships with others.” [4]

How can disordered thinking and obsessions affect how we appear to others?

There is a such thing as being out there, or too interested in what attentions you receive, such as on Social Media, which can spiral out of control, researching those who have found success, then wind up comparing ourselves, to those who have found success and followers feel bad about ourselves. There will come a point in time in your life, when you will no longer be the person texted to make plans, and eventually have to be the one to text others to maintain relationships. Same applies to life online, the point of being a public figure is to live a good life, and set a good example to others, of how to live life, from your own standpoint, and with that comes responsibility, its beyond perfecting who you are now, its about continuing to challenge yourself, continuing to work, and continuing to be a good Samaritan in life, understanding that not all work will be paid for, and realize its your responsibility to be nice to everyone, no matter how you feel, no matter how your day is going, continuing to practice what you preach without fail.

What about Social Media Participation? My best advice would be to only participate on Social Media, with likes, searches, and scrolling, when you are in a positive mood, that's when you are able to be happy for others, without comparing yourself to the lives of others, be affected self-esteem wise. Or check if you are stuck in a mood, that usually forces me to read. I am best most even tempered and calm, when I am reading, why I stayed in Law School. Then there is participation on Facebook, checking in with your real friends and their lives as published in your mixed newsfeed, and that also requires you to be in positive spirits to participate and send a like.

Social Media, requires that you be well adjusted, thinking in the positive, able to censor yourself from things or people that don't suit your mental health needs, and a place to strategically avoid, people or accounts, that don't represent the value of a minute of your time to keep in touch with. Some people can be draining, and some people will not make you feel good, and some people will be demanding, and some people will want more from you, and some people will make you feel like you're not good enough, and some people look for attentions, and some people do not receive attentions from others. It's all a matter of how you see yourself, *be accepting of all would then be your goal, not avoidance. How you feel, and feel about others, will be how you feel to others looking at you. Be wary of your choices, partake or avoid. In order to be well liked online, some participation may be required of you, to have some presence on Social Media, and focus the majority of your time on your blog or website. If you have trouble multi-tasking, then Social Media can be a distraction away from moving forward in life, only invest time in building an account, if it is necessary for you to keep track of your influences in life, and if you think it's necessary to partake and like.

Personal Update: I'm actually meeting with an Image Consultant right now [cancelled], and recently signed up for a course in Public Health: "Systems of Thinking in Public Health" at John Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health, and looking into a Scientific Research Writing Certificate, and maybe a Life Coaching certificate and skills training. Instead of Mental Health Counseling, I don't think as someone with Bipolar, that's something I want to focus on on my blog.

Letting Go ...

I know it's hard to hear from someone in the positive, when you are feeling in the negative. The less you feel personally offended by the happiness of others, and less you interpret the behaviors of others to be obnoxious, the more accepting you will become of all dispositions in life. Life isn't meant to be lived like an equation, there will always be missing pieces, and things that either don't connect, or upon thinking about hurt your head trying to make a connection. In addition, life is not intended to be lived like a game of charades, for understanding concepts, or for reinforcing the lives of others, nor made with respect to real people not mentioned, those are other people's lives, and characters created by someone who sought for those ideals in life, be represented and by whom. However, as a public figure, as you become more aware of how the news translates to understandings of life, you realize what is being looked at for comparisons or for creation of similar circumstances in life, to treat you as a public figure as a character, for developing a different set of ideas, based upon what another sees, as important or relevant to be addressed, or what can be seen by them looking at you. You will represent a lot of things in life, and maybe I won't be compatible with the thinking of everyone, and I'm sure I will say things that could be said in a more positive way, but never have I threatened the thinking or beliefs of another, and challenged others with regards to how they live their lives. That being said, I may not be perfect at avoiding the negative, but that doesn't mean that I ignore those feelings, and do my best to explain where I'm coming from, with hope not to be bombarded with misunderstandings over countered by others in life, with regards to my choices in life, what has been recorded, or what has been saved, misinterpreted. My life was not made for a movie, but since it's so easy to just scroll and judge, then that is what has become of me, integrated for judgment by real professionals on IMDb. Its not easy to assemble your life, its not easy to go out of your way to help others, and there will always be moments when you are trying to figure out what to do, to make things better, that you seem lost to others, that's not being sure of yourself and others in life. You are most trusted in life, when you are in action, doing something with your life, not just thinking about life, or analyzing things that others are saying, trying to find answers for understanding life better as it happens. Don't waste too much time psychoanalyzing others, while its important to understand what makes a person success, not all people who find success are alike and do not achieve success based upon the same understandings or motivations in life. We all come from different bases for understanding, by education, that is what is intrinsic to your decision-making abilities. Notice that whatever you anticipate, happens, upon worrying or focusing on the thoughts of others, that you begin to say things that support that type of thinking, without reinforcing what is true and correct about your life, that's being sized up, where the more you describe what is being done to you, or others, the more likely a side will be made against you to challenge you in life, your thinking, to figure out what is true about you.

Managing Overhead ...

Having a good working memory is key to being a good writer, without having too much going on in the subconscious, affecting your working memory, and ability to remember.

For example in one research study on medicaily.com: "the brain utilizes both conscious and unconscious learning mechanisms in order to compensate for the effects of stress on the brain. Specifically, this switch from completely conscious learning to subconscious learning is triggered by mineralocorticoid receptors, which are released in response to stress by the adrenal cortex." [1] Furthermore, "these transitions are mediated by the amygdala, a part of the brain that's responsible for both memory and emotional reactions." [2]

Your unconscious learning system, (i.e. your subconscious), gets triggered during emotional transitions of thought due to stress, and that's how your opinions shift from being memory based, based on what you are learning, to personal experience based, what you know personally. Its always important to stay objective, when it comes to discussing your thoughts out loud, and to base your thinking on cognitive structures, that gear your thoughts toward making sense, based on what you have been taught, not rely too heavily on memories from your past to articulate yourself, that would be being ruled by your subjective interpretation of events, not objective.

Why is this important? No one wants to sound out there, in their own world about things, you'll be less convincing the more passionate you grow toward articulating how you feel about things, based on what you have read, rather than articulate what you have come to learn, without the necessity of using your emotions and feelings to explain what you know and why. So much energy is wasted when we rely too heavily on our emotions and feelings to communicate ourselves, its better to step away from information, not internalize information in a personal way, make sense of things as they are now, or as they were past, become too connected to information.

What is the purpose for focusing on our cognitive thinking? Mentalhelp.net reminds us that although many may not be bothered by the past, and although your past may have nothing to do with your present, its important to recognize that: "More often than not even present day problems have their roots in the past." [3] A book that has been recommended by them is "Emotional Intelligence written by Harvard trained psychologist, Daniel Goleman." [4] The book is about "emotional intelligence" (i.e. EQ) that teaches us to "learn to recognize and accurately label their emotions and how they lead them to act." [5] Why? For example, in bipolar patients, on everydayhealth.com, "cognitive behavioral therapy (CBT) to your treatment plan can help stabilize your mood and keep your life on track." [6]

In IOP at UCLA for "thought disorders" that was one system we were taught, to help us to manage what we are thinking, to understand how our thinking affects how we feel. In a bipolar patient, for example: "mood swings are influenced by your thoughts. The researchers found that having extremely negative thoughts may bring on what's called "descent behaviors" (such as withdrawing from friends) associated with depression, while overly positive thoughts can lead to "ascent behaviors" (such as risk taking) associated with mania." [7]

So how are thoughts, feelings, and behaviors connected? "Feelings, unlike thoughts, involve a total body reaction," that are "influenced by your thoughts and perceptions," its how you "react to your own inner thoughts processes or "self-talk," imagery, or memories." [8] Feelings can be further divided into two subcategories "simple and complex," that help us to recognize by what feeling we are having, to determine whether what we are feeling is a "basic emotion" (i.e. anger, grief, sadness, fear, love, excitement) or a "complex feeling" (ie. eagerness, relief, disappointment, or impatience), the difference being a complex feeling may involve a “combination of more basic emotions.” [9] Why is this important with regards to our memory bank? “Feelings are what give you energy,” and on that basis, the more “in touch [you are] with your feelings,” and the more able you are to “express them,” the more energetic you’ll feel. [10] -There is a such thing as bottling up, that’s not saying how you feel, or having difficulty talking about what you are feeling or thinking, that in turn affects you presently, that gone feeling. So much about enjoying life, is being present and able, and when you lose that ability, and as you come to understand that something may be wrong, don’t panic, be patient, and you can do anything you set your mind to, its all a matter of having the skills, to accomplish your goals in thinking. What is causing you to feel “lethargic, numb, tired, or depressed” are your inability to express how you are feeling, that may be due to them being “blocked or withheld [and can] lead to anxiety.” [11] hcf.com warns us that “suppressing emotions can negatively affect our health,” and “stifling negative emotions doesn’t make them go away and could be unhealthy.” [12]

So what types of thinking should we avoid? Some unhelpful thoughts discussed in IOP at UCLA “Intensive Outpatient Treatment,” following hospitalization on a 5150 hold for not feeling well, or self-harming, is to avoid “Mistakes in Thinking,” (i.e. what blocks us from goals or makes us feel bad) [13] which include:

- All of Nothing: generalized thinking (ex. Never)
- Jumping to Conclusions: problematic negative way of thinking, followed by behavior (Ex. No one likes me).
- Fortune Telling: (Ex. It gets worse). “types of thoughts can become self-fulfilling prophecies if you’re not careful. When you’re predicting doom and gloom, remind yourself of all the other possible outcomes.” [14]
- Mind Reading: Thinking you can read the thoughts of others, assumptions about the thoughts of others. (ex. Doctor doesn’t like me).
- Emotional Recovery: cognitive distortion (Ex. making a decision based off temporary feelings, moment, feel like you need to do something, make an informed decision), includes maladaptive ways of thinking, solution: use less emotional reasoning, driving your decision making; and
- Catastrophizing: (Ex. struggling with anxiety) difficult to catch the thought, check the thought, includes thoughts of what it will be like, creating a whole scenario that doesn’t match reality. Playing things in your mind, be mindful. [15]

What is the first solution to avoid “catching feelings?” First: (a) Identify the Feeling, (b) Express it Don’t Judge or Criticize, then (c) Change the Thinking. [16] Be kind to yourself, “Feelings are not “right” or “wrong.” Think of feelings as “existing” whether or not “valid or invalid” and the better able you are to express in words how you are feeling through talk therapy or writing, that is the point at which you can begin to fix your working memory when it comes to how you thought things were, versus how things are now, and fix your “perceptions or judgement[s]” that may or may not have led you to your feelings, whether or not you were right or wrong, valid or invalid, in stating how you felt, start somewhere. [17] Have some awareness, it takes practice.

Ask Yourself ...

If most of what you're going through is happening to you via auditory delusions, ask yourself why, and whether it's deserved, then from there do your best to communicate in public and in private in a way, that does not further separate you from others, or your right to live life. That's what's at issue when someone is kept away from living their life, thought deserved that they be situated alone, or while being alone, taken as insult, by people who are not in my life, or were in my life, that's a miscommunication of interests. Sometimes the best way to protect others from harm, is to keep your issues to yourself, and figure out life for yourself. You can only be helpful, if by the choices you have made, have not purposefully put yourself in harms way or others. As separate it is possible to be misidentified as someone who is not put together or who by default is alone, because one has not been well enough to be picked in life. At what point is it time to stop, when either you or someone else is not feeling good, that's a good time, to stop what you're doing, and see what you can do to do a better job at being yourself in life, without putting others in harms way. That's figuring out what's going wrong, by who you choose to talk to, and without trying to understand why you were harmed and solicit for more negative attentions toward you report, if you have been harmed, that is not my fault, for talking to people in private, and does not need to be a matter of public concern, what was talked about or shared, as though I discuss my problems or views on life, in relationships, that is stuff I keep to myself, unless required to divulge in public, my past. That is not something others can use as confidence when hurting you, as though they have information to destroy you, that is someone coming to know you, and not made to feel good about you, or thinking your condition is a reflection of them, punish you, as though you are reporting what happened to you, to make another person responsible, that is taking two separate interactions, and treating those interactions as having occurred because of something you have done wrong, that's for neither side to attack you or punish you, as though you are not a nice person, strong, giving, and deserving of being well, hurt as though your discontinuation of sending money, or love, puts them in harms way, or deserving of public punishment for a period of months, I did not talk to the other account until July. That's things not working out, and talking to someone else. No one is completely stable alone, I don't have money, I don't have a job, my future does not have limitless potential, I have to work hard everyday, and be a nice person to everyone just to get by in life, and continue living life, without resentments or discussions past, to make my life more difficult than it already is, that's a good life, becoming a hard life, because of choices. And by what I represent or who I was thought to represent, and by the content of my discussions, hurt as though I did not attempt suicide, because of what I thought looking back, and that was my error, to be hurt by an incident that hurt others, not me directly, that doesn't mean that I'm nervous, or have guilt, or knowledge of how and why something like that occurred, it was just something I factored in, because it was something mentioned before I committed suicide. That is not with knowledge of how all incidences occur, and why, and that is how I was mistreated and given voices, as though my confidences were about knowing how harms occur, of believing that I have some imagined ability to help others, I have helped others, and do help others, and that's because I am a good person. No matter what is misunderstood or communicated by me. I don't F with anyone's head in life, I'm always clear spoken, and if I lose my head, or if my hand numbs, that means that I am overwhelmed and need to take my night meds. And this is how talking looks like screaming, or explaining looks like justification, or aggravation looks emotional. One cannot be aggravated living alone. And that was one experiment, with managing my own mental health, as not considered well and hospitalized for 30 days. That is upon losing stability or sharpness, punished and sent to the hospital, that was on Provigil. I understand that if another feels harmed by what I have to say, that I am assumed to be in error, and upon appearing in error, I may sound too strong, and upon wasting my energy explaining, may become burnt out. That's talking without resolve. That's until no positive thoughts are had creatively when it comes to idioms, communications, or symbolism, that's things being thought of creatively in the negative about you, and that's not okay, like these are jokes for sick thoughts, I don't have sick thoughts, I don't speak badly of others, and I don't communicate to the sick, I don't talk to bad people, its people are bad toward me, and that's how I was misunderstood. That's dating, you either want to love someone and be bad with them, or don't. When I choose to be alone, that doesn't mean that I'm not fun or upset, that just means that I need to focus on my own health. I need alone time, to rest and recharge, that's how I've been my whole entire life, someone who is at peace, someone who naps, someone who takes their time in life, working on things until perfect, someone invested into their studies, not someone having a good time, because they don't feel good about themselves, I'm someone in tune with others, not someone who has difficulty making friends, and drinking doesn't make me feel good. Drinking causes my face to age, and I cry, and then I get sick easily. I take meds now.

Be a Nice Person ...

It's not difficult to be a nice person, it requires that you simply be at peace with yourself and others, that's not bothering anyone with your problems, and not needing help or advice from anyone in order to manage your own thoughts about life, that's being an adult. And if you have questions about life, or ever wondering what other people are thinking, that's a problem you discuss with a Doctor, without assuming what things are about, 2008, 2017, and now 2020. That's not letting a difficult time get the best of you, and leaving things alone, that's being smart about your time, not wallowing in guilt, shame, or resentments, that's thinking too hard about the past, and if it's not something that you're currently focusing on, sharing those bits of information about yourself, if not described in the positive, will ultimately lead others to think that you are not thankful, or grateful for the life that you have, and the people who have been in your life, and moved on. There can be no later point in time, of being at ease, proud of yourself, and able to talk to others openly, with confidence, if you can't stay positive, or if you are too critical of others, including yourself, it's those feelings of not being sure of yourself, that cause others to not feel good about your life as lived, treating you as a waste of education, expense, or see your career as being a failure. That's living life in accordance with what others think, or based on how things look, not feel good about yourself. You cannot live a perfect life taking chances, trying drugs or drinking, some of us are not equipped mentally to party hard and play hard, we were not all gifted in that way, to have dark pasts, or live dark lives, and present oneself as normal to others, in the workplace, that's too much for comfort living a life like that. If it's your choice to miss out on life, or miss opportunities in life to be social, that's okay, when you are good and ready those opportunities will present themselves at a later point in time, but not if you are unhappy with the feedback, or the effects of speaking, hearing voices. Don't be a difficult person, or stubborn to criticisms, whether that's name calling, or having an auditory delusion, and think that it is you that they are taunting or speaking about, that's what happens when you share in public, there is always the possibility for you to be talked about, and the more difficult it is to talk about you, the less likely that anything positive will be said about you, just another opportunity, viewing your timeline, to anticipate failure, that's not allowing you to move on to the next phase in life, and that's giving up when things are going well for you, and being social, when you feel like being social, mismanaged issues.

What's a feel good story? Someone who shares, with the ability for others to have compassion, anything past the point of compassion, is overwhelming the sense of others, and that's draining, to be misunderstood, or with expectation for something worse to become of you, expected, that's being loved, being hurt, and then self-harming, that's how fighting feels to me. That's not the solution, to attack me, to watch me self-harm, that's a pattern of what happened past as explained privately (Summer 2011), then tested on me, to produce the same result self-harm. Self-harm can occur when you value the opinion of someone, you think highly of, and do not have a problem with, and they suddenly they have a problem with you aggressive toward you, as though your experience in life presently, is intended to hurt them, and that's why you get scolded in life, as though you should bring more happiness to the lives of others, and a failure to be happy with another, makes you look like you don't care.

What are your attentions dedicated to in life, and who matters to you, and if described, will that be a situation that later gets held against you in life, as being someone who has failed to help others, or screamed at. With different issues shed light upon, different people caring, more people knowing me, to create a system of not caring about me at all, and letting me fall through the cracks in life, job wise.

I'm not a fighter, that's not what I went to Law School for, and that's not my personality to fight with others, or to openly criticize others, if it's okay for others to be emotional, then it should be allowed for me to be emotional at some point in my life, and be forgiven, if I appeared disorganized, or not someone who could be relied upon to help others, or for added insights in support of existing structures, existing beliefs, existing potentials, and existing ideas about life. That includes company names, companies earning, potential, as well as speak in favor of the establishments of organizations dedicated to entertain and manage those who do entertain. That's a system of representation I have had little experience with, but understand that if I am to work, or to represent another, I must first understand how far they have come, surviving all the heat, disaster, and fights over issues and representations of the past and made it this far. Those are private matters, that occur in the news, shared by professionals who write from established systems of critique, network, who are legally authorized to speak about those within the talent industry, or share an opinion about the present management of talent. That's not me joining a profession, seeing myself as more able, that's adding my character, my identity, to a system of managing views of talent within the talent industry that uses IMDB. That's controlling the use of an identity, and avoiding the misuse of an identity key to creating things that make people feel good, and then be about someone who does not feel good, stand out, or upon knowing, think things are about, and that's an example of an unwanted attention, or insight, that someone can see looking at me, but I cannot readily see, directly related to me.

Things are only fun for so long as someone is fun, easy to read, easy to be around, and without worry for what they have to say. That's being at ease around someone. That's without worry for whether or not they are predictable, and in no way am I describing my failures in life, to create wider tolerance of people who have failed, as though its okay to do so, or lend insight from my life, to study patterns from my life, to be used for illustration and comparison to criminals or people who do others in the wrong, or for the wrong reasons, cause others harm. That's a fight you cannot win, when someone does not respect you, does not see your story as special, is not enlightened by your findings or experiences, or sees your life as joke, that's not valuing what I have been through in private, and without acknowledging all the years spent bettering myself, and working my way out of problematic situations in life, we all suffer traumas, whether that's inherent to living life, not all harmed suffered are willing with notification in advance of the risks for leaving a situation, retaliated on, that they just do to you, without explaining why they hurt you, those are people nice to you, that you have nothing to say about, but if you describe them, have nothing bad to say about, that's getting away with it.

Don't wait until it is too late, to turn your life around for the better, and understand that by sharing your story you do subject yourself to retaliations in life, as though you owe anyone anything in life, or owe anyone explanations for the life you have lived, as though what you know benefited you, without helping others with what you came to know or understand in life. That's being treated as someone who is high on medications, who is driven by pills, and without a heart, affected, or feelings hurt by others, meds don't make you invincible, no meds can cure a failing condition, and that's whats not understood, the only way to overcome a condition, is to not think about things in the negative, and if stated in the negative, and things turn out in the negative for you, can cause you to feel sick, upon doing well, and suffering the same abnormalities in life over again, that is bipolar thinking, with worry or fear, discomfort, alone. There used to be a such thing as working hard in life, and then feeling a sense of peace.

Unfortunately the same results have not occurred for me blogging, (that I did not anticipate) working hard and being proud of myself, and suffering any harms, not anticipating harm to me. That may be because that was my solution previously to be sober, because I took myself to rehab once, and then was sent to rehab by my Doctor, and taken off all meds, explains why I stayed in law school, applied to another Law School, and used to perform well. The conditions are much different, now, having gone out and drank, and as a result, instead of being viewed as someone trying to help, I got made to look like someone worth leaving in life. And that's how the side of others is taken, based on where they are in life, compared to you, and your side is not taken in life, and you are not supported, and you are not empathized with. That's judging you for being bipolar, or sharing, when everyone was at peace, December 2011, simply because you were sent to rehab after hospitalizing yourself for not feeling well, without voices. Being unstable is a condition you later learn to deal with on your own, which doesn't require hospitalization it's a loss of focus, and loss of functioning ability, to concentrate that's with nothing wrong occurring, and nothing bad happening to you in life, that's not feeling well and not knowing why, either because you have done something wrong (sex in public), that is an example of one cause for losing your head, doing something you don't want to do, and lost focus. Some are openly comfortable taking risks in life, and I am not one of them, I don't like excitement, I don't get hyper, Im low energy on meds, if Im positive its because I am positive. Im not an actress, who can put on a face, and pretend like everythings okay, if I cant show my face, and am not happy with what my face looks like, that means I need rest and weight loss.

No Matter What Emotion You Feel ...

No matter what emotion you feel, the best condition is when you are free of blames, hardship, questioning, and able to weather the conditions presently, with ease. When you are not at ease, figure out why. One recommendation has been to "delegate more," that's if you are so privileged to be heard, be mindful that others want to continue doing their part to make others feel good around them, with or without your permissions or blessings in life, we all have to work toward bettering ourselves and others. Mindbodygreen.com, reminds us that "other people want to help you and by delegating, you're giving them the opportunity to step up." [1] That's especially true when it comes to the feelings of others, reminding others that it is not their “public responsibility” to care or to step up, not unless they so choose to. That’s to each ones responsibility in life, to live a good life, and focus on whats important to them. No matter how many negatives get thrown at you in life, not lose sight of your own abilities in life, to create wellness, by your words and actions, regardless of how you feel or how others are making you feel. Its easy to think that when things are not going right for you in life, to question yourself or others, its mostly your life to live, no matter what you remember from it, your good years, and your not so good years. That’s letting go. If you are not doing well, then talking about the past will not serve as a reminder presently of what needs work and whats going well, don’t spoil your progress, and regress in life. That can cause a whole host of other problems for you, to assume others think poorly of you, then think of all the times from your life, you were not composed. You are your reputation in life, that’s a simple fact about being known. Whats the purpose for change? To change for the better, your life is best unamended by incidences to prove or disprove your self-worth, especially when you are lost in life, don’t experiment with your own condition, by taking risks such as drinking or going out alone, that’s not brave, that’s stupid. That’s how privileges are lost, when you no longer represent what it means to live a privileged life, that’s upon becoming a disappointment in life to those who cared for you, and do not have the time and energy to waste, buffering you from all your new problems in life, which are of your own making, generally, it starts with a negative assumption, or pattern of thinking, that is not justified, or without evidence to prove, that that is in fact what is occurring, the only way to best understand yourself, is to value what you do have in life, and remind yourself of all the positives. That is how to prevent making a bad life out of a good life, and avoid others losing faith in you, not being able to reply upon you in life, painful to talk to, hard to talk to, or misrepresented by you at any bad moment in life, embarrassed by you, that’s not the solution. Those heavy feelings, are not being happy with yourself, or not being content with your progress thus far, we cant all go pro at the same time, its something you work towards, by proving yourself, capable of getting the work done, without feeling overwhelmed in life, with problems of your own making, or problems caused by others. What happens in life, is not because of you, and not because of me, the only person you are responsible for in life is yourself, you come first and foremost, either help, or not be of service to others, that’s the difference between someone able to help, or not yet readily equipped to manage the stresses of others, quell the anger of others, or explain to others what is going well or what has gone well, and without expectation of what has gone wrong, be attacked for information about, as though one is supposed to be intelligent enough to understand the faults of others, or transgressions, in life, point out what stands out to someone about others.

We All Have Potential to Be Loved ...

We all have the potential to be loved, and while it may be easier to love some than most, that doesn’t mean that we are all not capable of being our usual loveable selves. Being yourself requires you to love who you are, without feeling pressured to conform in order to be loved, but its can improve your chances for being considered a likeable public figure, not all are impressed with the same responsibilities in life, to be a good role model in that way. What is a role model, a role model is someone who can be seen, and does not hurt the sense to know, or to view, someone who represents the qualities of a human being, that has a skill, a trait, or quality about them, that makes them nice to know, or hear from. You will always be attacked for what you are not in life, that is if you are trying to be something you are not, fail to meet the mark in terms of acceptances of you, without question. Its when one is not feeling well, that causes an unwanted wonder about you in life, trying to figure out what is wrong with you, or by looking at you, make their own determinations about what is wrong with you, and judge you as someone who does not like themselves (overweight), someone who is unhappy (single), someone who is a chore to care for (bipolar), or someone who is into themselves (nude). There is always something about someone who is unattractive, what is attraction? Attraction is carrying traits that another notices, or thinks makes you special, its what draws people into your life, whether that’s being a positive person, having a unique trait that differs from the rest, or being confident about who you are, at peace with yourself, and at peace around others, that can be a quality that is desired by another.

Not all environments are conducive for being liked or loved in that way, there should be a mutual care, that is focus on oneself, and what they are doing with their lives, that makes others feel good around them, easy to know or be around.

Then there are private interactions, which are about the energy you carry, are you reassuring, are you confident, do you have problems is there something about you that needs to be shared, is there something about you that if shared, will cause others to not feel comfortable around you? Then there is appearing as though you are wanting more from a person, or wanting a person to react to your condition, to make you feel better, which is an unattractive quality about someone, someone who is into themselves in a way, that another only feels good upon being paid attention to in life, that's not independence and unconditional love, that's control, with expectation of specialized treatment, that when that specialized treatment discontinues, the other is affected by that discontinuation, also known as co-dependency.

There is being needy in a good way, that is in a loving way, and there is being needy in a way that offends the sense of others, a distraction. There is only so much love that another can give to you for you to be reassured in life, that then becomes a matter of whether you have faith, do you have faith in others, are you trusting, do you have trust issues, is it easy for others to trust you and why, how have your interactions been limited as a result of losses in life, and have you changed the way you feel, to better accommodate the hesitations of others about you. Are you available to be loved, why or why not? There are moments of innocence and self-exploration, that's a confidence you carry in the confines of what you do best, whether that's in a work environment, or at home working, those are your private moments of pride, creating work that you're proud of, without help from others. That's being independent of others, then there is dating, when two lead separate lives, and when together, do not carry resentments toward one another, patient with one another, and at peace with one another, not judging the others, no matter what condition they are in.

What makes you special, and how have you been able to achieve? If you don't know what's working for you in life, don't expect others to help you get working in life, that's not unless they care. If you are someone who people enjoy figuring out, and pointing out what your issue is without you sharing what any of your issues are, that's how problems are created in terms of acceptances of you, not taken seriously in life, or treated as though you have issues with others, or treat you as though your issues in life, are because of other people's issues with you. And that's a cause for not being loved in life, or for not loving yourself, being uncomfortable with yourself, that's not solely the product of something privately known about you shared publicly, but you are also responsible for what you share privately, that if known to everyone, does not put you in harms way, or cause others to think that you are gross, in the management of your own life, or criticize your caretaking abilities in life, be seen as someone in harms way, or someone who would put others in harms way, that's others taking out their anger on you.

Being motivated in life. Being motivated in life, is about your ability to feel good about yourself. Are you proud of yourself? Is there something you need to work on? Is there something you would like to share about yourself? Is what you have to share going to offend the sense of others, if so, how so, and is that something you share at all, in private, or later about in public?

There is basic common sense, there is reacting in the moment, and there is a later acceptance that occurs, when people are desensitized or used to things, which is why patterns are sought after, for knowing, to better understand on a combined timeline, what your health was like while other things were occurring in life, to determine whether your health was poor at the time you were doing well in life, to diffuse blame from anyone else's interactions with you as having contributed to your failures, failed image, loss of respect, and see you as the offender, looking for attentions from others, and having been a sick match, or causing the inheritance of problems or defects in life, as having been in your life, later affected by knowing you.

That's sex, and monogamy, and casual sex. If you as the woman, look mentally ill, or responsible for your own mental health issues, that's to diffuse blame that was never casted upon who loved you in life, or who didn't love you in life, if one was well at the time, was why someone was loved, and my condition now, whether stable or not, does not make me a candidate for love at the moment, and that is because I do not feel good about myself, I am not happy with myself, and the progress I have made in life, is not good enough to better my life, in the face of others' issues with me.

Then begs the question, what has become of me later in life, after having the career that I had, am I still fortunate to work for the same kinds of jobs, am I well enough to work? That is about energy, am I able to work the hours, am I reliable enough to wake up early each morning, and establish a routine for myself, and work as a professional, and that's when meds and mental health matters, something about myself I cannot change, my brain chemistry, that's not about mood, that doesn't mean I have a bad temper, that doesn't mean I'm angry, that doesn't mean that I'm mean to others, that doesn't mean that I'm a problem, and that doesn't mean that I can't handle life or reality, and need to be on meds to cope with personal issues, and that also doesn't mean that I'm not stable or smart enough to be around people, be kept away from others, as though I'm problematic, or have issues that others don't want to be exposed to.

I deserve to work, I deserve to have created a job for myself online, and had I not been diligent writing everyday, then I would not be able to continue speaking now. Writing doesn't occur in one big swoop, that's a matter of practice being able to write, and a matter of energy, that's can you remember what you are saying as you are saying it, are you able to write from the heart and say things that make sense to others, or are you making up stuff as you go, just to sound good or sound smart, and that's a matter of negative judgement, to someone who is doing well online, and had 66k fans or followers, and put them back into a position of mental health issues, to see how others respond to someone when they are sick, or self-harming.

That was a coming to be hard earned by me, but certainly not a strong enough momentum in life, to sustain a 66k following via Pinterest. And that's when by looking at your company, based on how things look or feel judge for themselves whats of value and whats not, what is missing from a work to be of value, whats included, and what is causing a work to be devalued.

As a writer, what you have to share, is viewed as of value based on whether or not your writing is beneficial to health of the consumer. And sometimes how others feel is based upon how you feel as a writer. And if you don't feel good, one must also account for not making others feel good. And sometimes hardwork, looks easy to someone not invested in your progress, and who doesn't care to see you shine, or improve overtime. Popularity is based upon whether or not one can rely on you to work hard, without being affected by your experiences in life, hold secret any information not easy to talk about or view from their perspective, and does not interfere with their perspective of others, or confuse their understanding of the issues presented.

As a blogger you are expected to perform everyday, that's with high expectation of you not met, that less expectations of you occur, that's not just expecting less, that's disappointment in numbers. That is something that is in my control, to better fix my attitude in life and to express positive viewpoints of life, that aren't geared in a way that speaks to negatives, that I myself have never thought or carried with me as a premise, or gear for thinking in life. Thought about. What in the event of disaster, photos being shown, did I have a plan? No, I only knew how to respond in the event of a disaster, called the courts and the FBI, to figure out whats going wrong, and to decide for themselves who was in the wrong, and go from there, even if that meant that I would be punished, for sharing photos in private shared in public, I took that gamble in life, of being honest. And because of my inability to detach and say no, I was harmed and money taken for me, for simple acceptances from a celebrity, who was not a client of theirs. That's the shame in having money, and the minute you are given money, money taken from you, which is maybe why I am not given money to begin with, for how it is spent and why.

I think if I am a blogger, and now finally doing well as a blogger, picking up speed, in my ability to speak and communicate, without losing motivations in life, means that I am not a negative influence to others, or the cause for slowing anyone else down in life, or make anyone tired, from trying to understand me, my condition, my meds, my bipolar, or question their own health with regards to me. I treat me as someone who influences conditions in others for the worst. I think confidence will always be based on feeling good, without anyone being harmed in the process of one feeling good, and whether or not anyone can be proud of you, that's competition, and general depression felt upon seeing another, that's not disgust, that's a look. Is it blogging that makes me feel good, what caused me to get out of being in bed all day, relying on heavy meds, and what gave me confidence to speak so candidly about 2013, is that guilt for the passing of Justices, or is that with understanding and comprehension of whats going wrong? I think I am still trying to figure out for myself, how to be in life, in order for things to go right in the lives of others. There was a moment of mutual understanding and care, which I feel now, has been replaced, with too much explanation, and too much writing, which cannot resolve, the upper limits to ones thinking, which is easily overwhelmed, by the pressure that one is under me, to perform under the pressure of criticism and blames, and make sense.

Public Acceptance About the Way You Look ...

There will be many milestones in life, when you will be proud of yourself, and failure is not one of them. When someone devalues you, that is them being done with you, but that doesn't mean that you should be done with yourself, making progress in life. And that's a big lesson to learn, that when you give up in life, with your defenses up, not opening up in a loving way with others, its by that same token when you do, that you subject yourself willingly, to be treated as stupid, that's seeing what you are like when you are in a loving relationship, or under the control of anothers feelings in life, which may or may not have anything to do with you, or be of interests to you, until they are in disagreement with you, or how you have carried on in your life, come to be. And that's being devalued, by a public opinion expressed about you, who you are, where you come from, who your family is, and disrespect you in public, because they think its deserved. No one is trying to make my family famous, they already have friends and connections. No one is trying to be like others in order to be successful, everyone already has jobs and careers. That's an unwanted public evaluation of my body, while trying to build a website, which ultimately caused me self-harm.

And here's why ...

Posting nude photos of women, not by their choice, but by the choice of another, is a private interaction held, for the purposes of demonstrating in the future, what it feels like to witness or see someone, in a loving light, expose themselves privately, and then expose me to the world, hoping for the same reaction, hate or disgust, that's taking a risk with my body, and my mind, as affected by an unwanted showing of my body in public, in a negative light, partially nude. In studies, where AI imaging was used to show the naked body of a woman, without their permissions, was explained to have "cause[d] significant emotional and reputational damage." [1] As a blogger, I photo, and not comfortable yet to vlog, Im 170lbs and need to lose 20 more lbs in order to be figured proportionally fit for viewing as recorded. I have already lost 22 lbs. this year. Note: I do not know who my audience is, I don't know their ages, I don't know their backgrounds, I don't know their temperments, and I don't know their sensitivities in life, likes, dislikes, or level of immunity to being offended by photos shown of an author they may or not know, read, or have come into contact with otherwise, had it not been for my partially nude body shown on Facebook to 7,000 viewers to one video of me dancing, there and on Twitter, as requested for, under the hashtags "schizoid" "mental health" and other hashtags to which the content was not approved by me for distribution to those populations searching that hashtag. If its a condition that has since subsided, publicly announcing a diagnosis of me, that is not my current diagnosis, did not improve my condition, but only made things worse, as thought about in the negative, or after having been viewed not in a positive light, and with the labels given to me. It doesn't matter what your rights are to feel right in life, and those rights do not include your unidentifiable rights or permission to hurt me or injure me in public, on and off for several months, there is no eventually tolerance of hate expressed toward another, its only a condition that one can rise above, that's something no one can help me with, if Ive been harmed by another, or if nude photos were shown of me, to someone who does not like me, or want me, I have every right to keep photos for myself, and that's the difference between a wanted influence and an unwanted influence in life, how a person looks, how a person feels, and what is thought about them, all affects how a person looks, how a person feels, and how a person thinks. I was first to acknowledge that "The images could easily be mistaken for the real thing and used as revenge porn or a powerful tool for silencing women." [2] And instead took ownership of what went wrong, and without explanation of why I had pen pals, explained to everyone else, that what was done to me was wrong, treated as stupid, and at my own expense, embarrassed in public, therefore there is no later shared happiness, there is disappointment, there is regret, there is illness, and the harder I allow others to be on me, the harder my life becomes, adjusting to hate, or discrimination based upon what I look like, how I feel, and what is thought of me.

This is not a new problem. "The image-based sexual abuse of women already existed as a problem. Now deepfakes are adding fuel to the flames." [3] I don't think that self-harm is the solution to hate, but it certainly gave a winning feeling to whomever is detached, and doesn't care about me, that's letting them win. Not proving them wrong. Whenever someone feels threatened by your abilities in life, or promises for your future in life, to live a better life than they are able to create for themselves, whether with you or without you in their lives, that is the basis for an attack upon your character, to see how you feel viewed in a disfavorable light. I can only say that the causes for voices, are a direct reflection of how I feel about myself, and the sense of entitlement others feel, wanting to see me do well photo, or be happy, or appear happy, and that cannot happen if I do not feel good about myself, that's the problem. Why its important to be careful who you share to and be mindful of what you are sharing, and understand that when one does not feel good, they then do not feel good to another, and justifies them talking $hit about you, or trashing you in public, to say that your life is not worth it, worth hiring, worth knowing, or worth living for that matter, even if under the lens of comparisons, that's not my life, that's their life, and no nude models did not invent the concept of what makes a woman beautiful, as their images were captured, and no one not being beautiful now, does not mean that one is jealous, of others confidences in life or feeling good about themselves, that has nothing to do with me, everyones happiness in life is of their own making, not mine.

Groupthink: Benefits and Costs ...

While it is advantageous for you to care what others think, it may not always be the solution to your problems, in thinking, or coming to understand others, there is always value in your own perspective, left unchanged. We are raised to “not worry what other people think,” why is that? Overreliance on what other people think can make “their opinion pivotal to our success ... we start tailoring our lives to fit the expectations of others, and from there it’s a vicious cycle.” [1] Do unto others as you wish done to yourself is the motto. I’m thinking with regards to reciprocal care and attention paid to the issues affecting you. Know that although you may have been focusing all along about others, that care can only be demonstrated by being a good example of how to think about the issues, without getting into the issues, and causing chaos to the thinking of others about the issues. It then becomes a careful balance between, leading discussions online, while at the same time supporting an organization dedicated specifically to something else, not make each a product of reliance upon the other for action or cause inaction in those subsequently affected by your opinions. And that is how responsibility happens, whether in support of another, organization, or set of individuals, you represent yourself separately in a way, that does not interfere with the quality of life lived by others, who should remain unaffected by the causes or concerns you do have, not a direct causal influence to the way in which I have decided to help others online, by blogging. Or draw inference that the organizations you support should be responsible for curtailing violence. That’s not their responsibility, where there is no groupthink, there can be no group blame, and that’s why creativity is so important, a quality about life discouraged by a groupthink system of acceptances, that relies more heavily on feeling right, and proving themselves right, about how bad things happen, misassociate someone to a cause for bad things happening, before they have even taken a stand against, or have already. I asked my Attorney if I could volunteer and be a member of Brady, and he said that that was okay. Remember that “people spend more time thinking about themselves than [they do] thinking about others.” [2] So what is groupthink, and how can a better understanding of the groupthinking phenomenon better situate ourselves in the future when it comes for more acceptance of what others think? By definition “groupthink” is “the practice of thinking or making decisions as a group in a way that discourages creativity or individual responsibility.” [3]

When groupthink is required to maintain stability of a group of thinkers or speakers, “Groupthink [becomes] a phenomenon that occurs when a group of individuals reaches a consensus without critical reasoning or evaluation of the consequences or alternatives. Groupthink is based on a common desire not to upset the balance of a group of people.” [4] One of the benefits of groupthink is that “people will set aside their own personal beliefs or adopt the opinion of the rest of the group.” [5] Sometimes marking a transition toward a desired change in others, acceptance as things are, acceptance for how things could have happened, and acceptance for one another as either having been responsible, or for convincing of taking responsibility for their own actions in life, in order to be accepted into a group, centered in avoidance of blame as to certain issues with regards to politics, based on “attraction not promotion” of interests, personal, such as in AA. When a majority opinion has been established as to what is allowable for discussion, it then becomes inappropriate to discuss personal matters, without carrying on the mission of the group which is to share stories of “experience strength and hope.”

How can one identify where groupthink is at play? There may be many “different “symptoms” that indicate groupthink.” [6] One of the consequences of a groupthink purpose oriented environment, is that it may in turn hurt the inhibitions of those who don’t think the same as, or sound like, and because they may feel different, become shy to sharing their issues, if they do not sound like others, as confident, prepared, have difficulty opening up, not feeling like others. There is a such thing called, “Self-censorship [which] causes people who might have doubts to hide their fears or misgivings. Rather than sharing what they know, people remain quiet and assume that the group must know best.” [7] Basically you lose your sense of agency in life to the confidences demonstrated by others, and its not until you yourself become confident about your life and your story, that you no longer feel influenced by the opinions of others as shared about life, and that marks a change in your recovery, when you are no longer under the influence of what is being said, and hold thoughts and opinions of your own, that’s learning a system of care, you may or may not completely understand, until you go through it yourself, feeling separate from the issues, from people, from stories, that do or do not resonate with you, feel safe in your own shell, about life, safe around others, and safe from harm, that’s when you are given the benefit of the doubt, a whole hearted acceptance of you has been achieved, by the more you show up, the more you share, and the more you demonstrate the quality of care taught to you.

Sometimes You Don't Recognize ...

Don't wait until personality changes occur within you, to understand who from your life, believes you to have been an unwanted influence in their life, a blog is therefore not a means to create a similar condition, of having been viewed in the wrong to another, knowing me. There is a sense of being alone, that's being yourself, and then there are delusions of being taken over, by who is thought of upon insult, manifesting itself through you, that is a connection made, after a relationship ceases. A connection by soul, influenced within you, can only occur upon constant contact, that is sleeping together, waking up together, how time gets lost, and one can slow down as connected, that's anyone asking you about "meals" or about "your day" anyone in a depressed state that is talking to you, does not have faith in you. You can always get your energy back in life. There will also be moments when others are at peace, that may be something you have said to them has caused that, or being where they are in life, has made them feel well and apart of. I think what is not understood is why I am not well, and that is because I do not currently earn a wage, and am not working for a company. I have applied, but that also means that I have to have my life figured out, to dedicate time and attention and focus to learning a new job and that cannot occur if I have problems or voices. That will be up to a company to decide whether or not to hire me, based upon my current condition, believe in me, or hire me, with belief in my potential. Note: People from your life will assume that you are jealous, or watching the lives of others, I have enough on my plate. That also means that being well must be factored in when discovering the issues currently faced, and without a second thought, is apparent that being well is essential to things going right for you and others in life. That is something I had to learn with experience, that if something bad happens to discuss it with an authority figure, to discern whether I have done something wrong, that caused this person to commit suicide, or better understand larger concepts of wellness and connection to determine, whether my life as lived has played a role or a factor in changes ongoing within other industries as affected by well known characters in time. When does wellness occur? It occurs on its own timing, not by anyone crediting themselves for being apart of change, or crediting themselves for having been a positive influence in life. We are not all a product of what is focused on, and it would be wrong to assume, that it is because one is focused on, that others have not been harmed, or out of harms way, that would be looking at my gifts in life in the positive, there is also a risk, that is later inherited upon telling your story, that is a moment when things have not gone right for you, and sides taken without you knowing what any sides are about, or what concepts others are speaking to, who are not fans of American Culture. Then there is shared happiness, that is not wanting what is secretly known about the temperature of the times, known to anyone, who has the capability to disassemble what is going well for you, or for others absent minded you in life. There will always be winning teams in life, they are those who are unaffected and feel good about themselves. If you are someone who did not live a life you are proud of you, you easily are assumed to not feel good about yourself, and are not respected as a woman, loved, or paid attention to in life, until you love yourself, accept yourself as you are, all issues aside. I cannot help anyone, when I myself am not doing well in life, and that's a condition I have had to pull myself out of in life, that is going to bed at 8pm or 5pm everyday tired, on heavy night meds, I missed a trip to Las Vegas for work, and missed a Film Festival, not strong enough mentally and physically to attend, and represent another in public, stable. That was working 9-9pm, and pushing myself for acceptances in life, which generally runs out, when you lose strength or clarity of vision for yourself and others, those losses of faith can be felt, when you are no longer working to the standards that please others, and when in disillusionment, you are considered not in a workable condition fit to represent a company, teach others, or take on your role given to you.

There is stepping aside in life, when another is dominant for attentions, and taking on lesser roles in life, and sometimes lesser roles in life are given to you in life, that's to see you play your hand in life, with handicaps, challenges, and without general acceptances of you, appreciated, for your expressions through essays or statements, not viewed in the positive, or seen as a joke, as though one who works for the Government or wanted to work in DC, is a sorry exception to the rule, when it comes to respect, or comparisons to those who are more successful in life. That's being compared in the positive, to someone who is successful and known for their success, and challenges faced, and who has lived a good life nonetheless. Then there is the challenge of stepping aside, and viewing others as a threat, that is upon being insulted by how one is treated in comparison. Then there is the concept of competition, when one cannot be happy for others, and when another's success interferes with the light of others, intimidates, or lessens ones purpose in life, as compared to someone of lesser importance, such as myself. Not known. That's a woman's struggle, you cannot expect a woman to be shy or timid to others, no matter how smart or strong another may seem, you must always allow a woman to follow her instincts, and then there are matriarchically theories of behavior and acceptance, that is when you accept an older figures position or feelings over your own, based upon your experiences in life, talking to people, or working with people, who can only protect you so long as you are compliant with their wishes, otherwise feel wronged, if you don't listen, or become difficult to care for, that's creating uncomfortable conditions, not leaving room for others to be happy, absent minded your pains in life, your delusions, or your issues, not be bothered by you.

For example, "Women, [are] often experts at being tuned in and sensitive to others' feelings, may easily overidentify with other women's insecurities, projecting how they would feel in the other's shoes and then feeling bad about their own success." [1] Which is why sharing in a space with a feminine title, is viewed harshly, as being someone with bipolar, who has been rejected, or deemed to be behaviorally not sound upon drinking, or by who they dated alone still. That makes one look like they are there for attentions, treat them as preying. And that is how one who goes out alone, is made to feel about themselves, called out, and then it happens, and that is what makes one look pathetic, that's losing a fight with an ex, (we have since forgiven each other) as though ones purpose for being places is to hook up, this is why I stay home, and never going out for the rest of my life. If you have been wronged, or if another views themselves and their life as having been wronged by you being in it, explains why it is difficult to talk to others, be social, and to find companion, date.

Only later in life do you come to understand others as obviously sensitive, by the nature of your story, and upon closer examination, is either empowered or disempowered by your tone, and your manner of expression, sensitive to your needs, or ignoring you all together based upon your wellness, that you cannot control others reactions toward you, just be proud of who is well, and be thankful for their kindred spirits in being strong for others.

By the time everything becomes a complete misunderstanding, people are long gone from your life, and have moved on, and that's just life, it keeps going without you. Much like the news is on everyday and with the same tempo every morning, lifting everyones spirits. That's the unnerving positive spirit of those who care to tell stories, and with precaution. They are not controlled or exposed to people around the clock, who tire or bore them. And they are very careful with their words, that's a trusted heartbeat to stick to in life. -That being said, I think sometimes things can feel too demanding, whether that's me being too hard on myself, or whether that was others being too hard on me, that was how my life was lived.

How my life was lived is something about myself I cannot change, and I also cannot change anyones feelings toward me, having liked someone in common, no matter how strong someone is, and no matter what lengths they go through to accept you, and help you, as someone who used to be strong, you will only feel good until you are strong and smart again. And whether or not that is because you were punished, just like everyone else have to go through adjustment phases in life, even if it's a more challenging life to be lived.

A feeling that does not make others feel good, is one giving up in life, or speaking as though with punishment to others, as though Ive had bad experiences feel. That is to sever what relationships I have had, and make the past seem combative or a loss. That is viewing my friendship cycles as me trying to win others over in life, and treating me as person, not deserving of friends, or who passed bad luck over to friends, subject them to hardships, not a good friend, or a good advisor in life, intended to suffer repercussions in life, for a failure to maintain friendships over the years in public. There have been opportunities for me to talk to friends, I have not engaged in communications with friends seldom, because I have not been well enough to have anything to talk about with them in the positive, and that is why I have improved, so that I can be social, and blog.

Whats sad about right now? What is said, is to hear someone sharing about their struggles when everyone is struggling, as though one struggles sheds any positive light or insight upon life, declared delusional. Then there is acceptance of others being conservative toward you, not on board with you or your choices in life, that's either because they feel wronged by you, or may feel that you are responsible for leaving them out of the equation, when it comes to wellness, not having appreciated the years when everyone was well with light, living a separate life instead. Whenever discussions are problem based, that is not a helpful discussion. When my blog has done well, that is when I have been at peace, and things started to go well for me in life. There is an obvious difference between someone who makes sense, and someone who is talking without solution, that requires work, not only fact checking, but also research, one of my skills from undergrad, and something fine tuned, as a graduate student in Law School.

I have never been in an abusive relationship in my life, and have never been in a fight in my life, until Law School, and have never fought with a companion, until I took alone time away from my ex from Law School. Sometimes you are needed when you decide to be alone, and that is when trouble stirs, that upon disconnect, you see yourself as stronger than you are, and its not until a connection is lost, that you realize how weak you are as a person, how unstable you are as a person, and how difficult things may seem as a person. That's being alone, and not ready to move on or to date, arrive to the next happy place in life, that's inner turmoil, the wait time in between relationships when you have to get well, and be strong, in order to be loved, trusted. Sometimes you make it to the next relationship, and sometimes you don't, its all a matter of how strong you are, not allow your past to define you, not worry what others think, respect water under the bridge, acknowledge your faults, and not make anyone else feel bad in the process of telling your own story, used as a stencil for imitating the lives of others, and that's how respect of you is lost, once you go through comparison cycles in life, made to feel not special, not effective, not intelligent, less than, or not with a good heart spoken to referenced. That is also leaving people alone and not bothering them, to me that's respect. I think there is a false impression of someone who is down in life, as needing another for a lift, this isn't the wounded warriors project, I don't need someone to help me walk, or open up in public, that's affecting my good timing in life, to wrap around another's viewpoint in life of me. If it was a problem for me to be thin, and if a comeback was not wanted explains why I'm 170lbs, and got a benign hemangioma this year. I would never steal love from another, that's not my purpose in life, to have what someone else has, or to affect their peace, become an unwanted association in life, or be mutually loved, accepted, brought under any wings in life. If you have disability, that is something you will eventually face, living a lesser life to others. I was getting well to get married and to have a relationship, because someone saw me as damaged goods, that is why I maybe won't have a child, and that was never not a goal in life, made to wait. I have always wanted love, I have worked hard for it, and I have never demanded love, if love was not given, that's something you cannot fix, love lost, and then you move on in life. And this is where a shared sense of being encounters a problem, when someone doesn't feel good, and doesn't sound good, then no one wants to share a life with you, that's being a difficult catch in life, hard to accept, hard to talk to, hard to love, the other more well without you. You can earn respect back in life, but if you aren't a good person, if you respond poorly, if you have not been consistent and given your best, it can be heartbreaking when things don't work out for you in life, based upon the lack of respect given to you, upon being open, sweet, and well.

When Things Are Not Well ...

When things are not well, its never a good time, to shock the senses of others, that's not being strong in a smart way, being strong, is describing how you have overcome a problem, without asserting superfluous information, as to where you are in life, as though that relates to what you have been through in life, a manifestation of. That's when the tables turn, from inspiration, to being viewed as a threat, a turn off, intimidating, or an unwanted interaction public, that's when others can sense you look at you, and you are looking at the entire room, that's a focus issue. If you become depressed or lose energy, that means that your energy is offensive to others means that your strength is intimidating to others, that's when you look like someone to be avoided, versus someone taking up space, for you to avoid, that's running and someone moves to the other path, experiences in life. Just be kind to all, and to all chatter, not turn your head to look at people, I think that was the point, whether its your responsibility or not to identify everyone around you, that's not smart. When you finally understand what being human is all about, you have thought about life way too hard, if you're thinking about breathing etc, that's stuff that is supposed to be automatic for most. Fitness can help but it cannot fix every condition, related to understanding, breath, trust, nervousness, and ability, that's why its important to stay calm. I think that's the point of everyone being calm, to see whether you connect and imitate your surroundings behave like, or whether you operate on an even keel without direction from others, are you appropriate in a room full of people or do you call attentions to yourself, become uncomfortable or loud. That's normal. And sometimes life gets handed to you, and you become a camera, not living life in action, or within yourself, but with constant concern about those around you. Whether you are made up of: anger, hate, resentments, hostile, an outsider, an outcast, defiant, whether you express love and tolerance for others, whether you are judgmental, and whether as described if life is viewed from your lens, does that cause sickness to others stepping in your shoes, or having been exposed to your life as lived. No matter how upset you get, gone you feel, and no matter how many times others have given up on you, its your responsibility to return to living a normal life, that's people hesitant to support you, and feeling as though things are not working out for you in life, and that's why support is lost. And if you continue on in a direction, against the wishes of others, that's to label you as an offender (why I need an expungement), because one is not viewed as a peacemaker (evidenced by bipolar, mood changes, upon insult, or hearing voices, during my moments of peace, to demonstrate that I am not at peace, and then forced discussion of why I am not at peace alone or comfortable or made sick). Anyone who grants permissions to others to be made fun of in life, out in the open for the picking, I think that was a fair assessment, being a team player, and registering on IMDB for assessment, that's not being territorial, that's just not assuming, things are about me, and not be viewed as someone who has mental health issues, because they think things are about them, and got upset naturally, that's not my story. Its not until life happens to you in that way that you become aware that something has gone wrong and respect has been lost. Its always important to cut to the chase, when called upon, The President recently gave a speech commending “Armenians” so I later added that to my experience with an Armenian Paralegal who was one of my Supervisors, who took his son to Lego Land (2008). There is no delayed response when it comes to living life, you are not expected to be a public figure to live a public life, or responsible for managing your public identity, its called having friends. You either connect or you disconnect, and its upon disconnect others wonder about you, wonder what is wrong with you, and based on what they think of you, treat you in life, that’s doesn’t always necessarily make you a stronger person in life. You only have one opportunity, for being treated as innocent everything thereafter is viewed as an unwanted telling of ones story, and neither makes the story teller feel good, or the listener feel good, and that is an example of someone who is perceived as bad, telling a story, which the other wants no part in, or does not want to know. That’s not wanting to be known, or not caring what you’ve been through, we have all experienced life long enough to know and value ourselves and others in life. Depending upon how fast you are, is how you get treated in life is the main lesson, and because I am on night meds, and day meds, that may be something about me, that’s difficult to read, or viewed as suspect. I am getting my record expunged this year when the courts open. How is peace made? Well it cant be shown, if one has not said enough, and if more is needed to feel calm myself, that means that the last post, was insufficient to quell, whatever is going on within me. Now quoting a book I found at the LAX Courthouse, I later bought online, “History teaches us that many things that had once been unimaginable have come to pass. Such knowledge can inspire not only yourself, but perhaps also those you meet who say they might support your cause if it were not a “hopeless dream.” [1] (Need to finish reading this book).

One attribute key in order for peace to be reached, is to be thankful for all those who are well, and in positive spirits, that would be accepting things as is. Then accepting those we do not understand nor empathize with, those who maybe self-harm, drink, do drugs, make bad choices, not well spoken, not yet arrived to a place of fun in life, its not meant for all. Then with respect for the Courts, comprehend why they did not want to hear from you, and what was said by you, or demonstrated by you, that solicited negative feelings toward you, that is another not wanting to be apart of your life, and take responsibility for not being someone to be loved or talked to on a professional basis. Then be aware that during moments of peace, to leave others alone, to figure out life for themselves, and not influence their power of choice. Its when things are most fragile, you cannot tell people how to live their lives, or talk about others in a way, that makes them feel threatened by you, or insulted by you, as though you are communicating to a crowd that they have done something wrong talking to you, and that’s how you get blackmailed or blacklisted, and photos asked, messaged all day and all night, after being robbed for simply talking to someone who turned things into taking all your money away as demanded, and someone treats you as though you were in a monogamous relationship and expected to be the only person they talked to, and a website threatened to be made of you, of all the videos you sent on your journey back to wellness, out of a dark phase in life, issue by issue, discuss how you think and how you feel, until able and coherent enough to share the difficulties you faced, what was not clearly known about you, explained, that’s after punishments and illness faced, that is minding my own business, that’s non of the business of others, to understand how and why I got sick, those were my choices in life, and sometimes based on your choices in life, no one cares to console you, or talk to you about life, or give you advice about how you are feeling support you. That’s others being well without you, and having to live their lives to achieve for themselves, that’s nothing personal. We are all given opportunities to move forward in life, and based upon whether you care, those are the same people who are there for you, whether or not your alive. That’s the Government who trained me, but didn’t teach me public speaking, Im organized. I have to remember, never to lose faith, to always try hard, to continue to work, and earn back trust. That means not giving up in life, not speaking from moments of bipolar, and not sound well to others, that’s taking things too far, in terms of being helpful and light, to being too much. Then factor in everyones spirit, no one wants to deal with $hit that happened, and no one wants to be viewed as someone who is imitating or not representing well others for $hit that happened. Whos fault is that? I thought I saw President Bill Clinton walk by me in a trench coat in DC.

A Good Attitude v. A Bad Attitude ...

There is you absent minded others, and there is you thinking of others. Its been my experience that when around others, they step out of their shells, to say something, whether or not relevant to me, about themselves, that they think will help others. Whether or not that’s your problem, that’s how you get treated lets say for instance in IOP, someone with an issue of self-harming and thinking songs were about him an ex-model, and when we were asked to pick a song for the counselor to play another picked a song for me “You Need to Calm Down” by Taylor Swift. At the time I am kind to everyone, never assuming anything to be about me. That would be assuming that people know me, and just to make sure am now online, with a better grasp of the issues. When you appear in DC, all records are reviewed with or without your permissions, why: (1) souvenirs were bought (2) why an itinerary was made to visit SCOTUS (3) why a bedside collage of souvenirs were made around a telephone, (4) why one shouted in the street in DC "F-K" and the DC Police told me to "calm down," (5) why CU Buffs was written in the snow in the sidewalk by me, then rubbed out by the time returned, (6) why I was told about the MLK Memorial and driven there by a Taxi Driver who told me "you live by the gun you die by the gun," (7) why I sat outside Barack Obamas house, and later (8) smashed my matching Marc Jacobs watch gifted to Sydney into the sidewalk 200 yards from his home, and (9) why the barback was humping the bartender in front of me at the bar, then left and stood on a yellow dot and called 911 to report them, my first report, and (10) why a cab never arrived to pick me up from Harry's apartment so I walked home back to my hotel room, (11) why an invitation to Barack Obama's inauguration was sent to my hotel room and a bottle of wine, (12) why the speakers were not on during the Inauguration and the gate I was directed to was blocked by a crowd of people no one going in, so I (13) walked around the perimeter in an FBI DC hat, and a soldier by the tanks saw me and told me he liked my hat listening to Nas, (14) why I walked into the FBIDC Office to make a report about a Privacy concern and also asked if I wanted to apply who should I contact and was given a business card, I have already been screened by the FBI was given clearance to work for the Government 2008, (15) why I walked the US House of Representatives and signed every book that was out with my information, (16) why I took a picture of myself on an airplane, and (16) why I went back to SCOTUS in the snow and took a picture of myself in the lunch room with no people around another day, (17) why a box was made of every important document concerning my medical history and education and writing samples and free writing a book about my High School experience and recollections up until that moment and prior to attending Law School, which was USPS'd to SCOTUS, stamped, then USPS to California Supreme Court, stamped, the USPS'd to Attorney John Sifton from HRW. Then I remembered, upon moving boxes into storage, and organizing my notes downstairs all my files where in my Brother's room, and pulled some of my best work handwritten that went missing upon being found and placed on my desk, not scanned or saved by me elsewhere, and was screamed at by my ex while moving boxes, asking me what I was doing. Then (18) went to the bar alone a few times to drink and made two friends I stayed in touch with over the years, and another who did not contact me afterward, prior to which (19) I made videos in my car after drinking, speaking emotionally that "of course I care" even though I was not pretty because I was drinking, talking to no one, just my phone, then (20) met someone who I did not date, met in the daytime, prior to driving to Palo Alto and Las Vegas alone, to get away, and visit towns I have one not been to, stopped by Steve Job's house, and stayed at a nice hotel I did not walk to from a party in Las Vegas 2008, because I didn't want to afterparty and do drugs or drink more, and carried my heels crying in a casino and couldn't find my boyfriend, who was in bed sleeping by the time I got to the room, then (21) in February still going through a breakup while my Ex was applying to the DA's office and didn't get the job, figured that I was the problem and left him and he got a job up North and in Texas, and now in LA, (22) I was interrupted writing in my phone, to talk to someone seated to my right at the corner of the bar, who was initially tough toward me because I shrugged him off, did not want to talk to anyone, told him "I was going through a breakup," and then was hospitalized February 2013 I don't remember how I got there, I just remember them opening up a box of cigarettes that were shared and no one visited me and don't remember leaving, (23) then I searched my closet, and found a Lakers Bag gym backpack free, that had the piece to a Poster that was torn down by me from Wilshire, and later moved close by, after delivering my box to the Federal Building and walked back to my car with it, told not to leave it, and later submitted the pieces to the Poster which was a painting of Barack Obama I thought offensive, a photo of the painting was saved in my phone after tearing down the poster, and gave them my phone number in a plastic bag, and that was the same time period a suitcase from DC went missing, my coat went missing, my notes went missing, and a small kitchen knife with the tip broken off was put in a hole puncher box 2010 while living in Marina Del Rey, and was told "Marta broke the knife" when asked how the knife broke, in the dish washer, I took from the house on Leonard Road, and during that move lost a box of important things, I made sticker labels for all the boxes, my Windward diploma, and a sketch book my cousin made as a Bat-Mitzvah present. That's being paranoid, assembling something in private that if found would look suspicious to someone else, not expecting to see that, in my "Lesley bag" gifted to me by my Godparents nanny who was English, they used to live off of Bentley where the Bauers lived. -Meanwhile, all the while CBS Movies was now across the street, from the bar where I last saw Navid, who I was told died of Schizophrenia, and then later told was doing drugs at the time of his death by a friend in common Major who dated the daughter of a family who's Father passed, and she passed was hit by a Police Car in a "silent running drill" and was the Sponsor to my carpool in high school an underclassman, and their Son passed of Suicide (who I did not accept a friend request from on Facebook, Im not sure if he was the guy in an argyle sweater at my friend Lindsay's birthday party at Macai (a bar my best friend Sydney later took me to with her then boyfriend, who I talked ab out nighties with, because we are overweight, and then they took me on a tour of The Paramount Lot, after taking them to two bars in Hollywood "Harvard Stone" where I was arrested on my way home, and a Club a drug dealer took me too, the same night there was a shooting by the Rainbow Room where we almost went), I didn't talk to him there, went with an underclassman Jules who went to Amherst, I played soccer with in High School, whos Father played for the Dodgers, and moved into an ex-classmates house, from Elementary School, same house different people), who I was told raped my best friend in 5th Grade on an airplane to DC, and cried, while the other friend window seated apologized for not crying or being equally moved about the sharing of her story, which was upon advice asked, when having relationship problems told my best friend to tell him "you don't know me" and to tell him what you told me, and then their relationship didn't work out. CBS across the street from the bar I went to alone, and later complained about girls talking s%hit, and then served my check outside and told that I should go home started punching my head. I was seated by the beer drafts, they were seated on the corner to my left, the same place the guy who followed me to my car, talking to me after I left, convinced me to hang out and play a game of "Professional Responsibility" with I didn't believe him, and there is a game of Professional Responsibility a board game and that was a relief, then he had me pick a movie I picked "Snatch" and then we hooked up and he spooned me, I threw up in my mouth and ran to the Sink. Backstory: The daughter of CBS, who dated a guy in common to my best friend, recommended that I not speak to someone, I later found out had a friend in common to someone she dated and went to the Suitor's school, who I was messaging for 8 months April 2016 to January 2017, met November 2015, was in NYC December 2015 running by my Brother's apartment at the time stayed at the hotel local to his neighborhood, while learning how to build a website, someone I pitched to, who I also sent emails to of all my records, and Twitter archives from December 2011, which was after Rehab Summer 2011 with a job in DC, attended a Women's Meeting with a Crossroads Sponsor who was given to me after my then Sponsor moved out of State, who I did my 4th Step with, and was recommended to wait a year in the first year of sobriety told not to date. And based upon my thesis sent to him, all my school records, and resume, work history, and after crying outside his house, after pitching a music campaign, and Concert Across America was made sat on the other side of the wall by the pool crying tears in front of a bouncer who watched me, messaging on my phone, to someone who would not reply to me, nor wanted to attend, dropped a marching poster off at his house afterward. This was after I ran a flyer campaign down Sunset and through Hollywood, "Brady Music Campaign" was later told, to do something general and said "#bloggingcampaign and that was approved over Starbucks, the President of the LA Brady Chapter, sorry for the imposition, Donna Deese, who later added me as a friend on Facebook, managed and founded Concerts Across America, and is the Leader of Million Mom March. I think because I hashtagged them so much, that Moms Demand Action, texted me without signing up to volunteer with them, already having met Brady and after later attending meetings, and was supposed to phone bank, I phone banked once it's a complicate system, I didn't understand, and was supposed to be a Data collector of all new volunteers and make a spreadsheet added 2 numbers. I attend Vigils, at a meeting it was discussed to build a better relationship with Brady Campaign another anti-gun violence organization founded by Jim Brady who I found out worked for President Ronald Reagan, who also owned a home in Bel-Air sold, who was seen pictured with Justice Roberts shaking hands, sworn in during his presidency. He took down the Berlin Wall I think. My Mom used to live on "Bulingame" sounds like Berlin Game, on Harvard. And there was a Tinder shop on the corner, and when I moved to that home, given a home all to myself, chose the small room, and made an office with the other room, Bauer had two rooms at his house, the other room was for his Music, drum set etc and Video Games. My crush in College, who was there for me during addiction, told me to stop, then went to Rehab and he got clean from Heroine, for some reason we connected, my last year in College. Hes married now and has a child, very proud of him, he married a former dancer, and lives in Pennsylvania. He was maybe the only friend who texted me while living in Westwood, to check on me. I was on meds at the time, and going through something, and was tweeting, and losing 50lbs, happy. Lesson: If you don't put things together clearly you get looked at as not as sharp as anyone else, who sees what you've been up to, and after reviewing your timeline makes decisions for you, or leads others into assumptions about you in life, and your condition becomes their source of empowerment. My housekeeper who moved me, later got a Divorce and moved back to Mexico, she used to run on San Vicente after work, and packed up my closet living in Marina. When I made an AOL box, everything went missing, and a song was made, talking about someone elses trash is another mans come up, and I just deleted my emails, that wasn't trash, that was me recording my journey, singing, and maintaining a diary in private, and gave all my passwords to all my accounts to the US Military and to SCOTUS. That's trying to figure out what went wrong, that's not me suspecting that other people have done me wrong, that's being open, that's not appearing in a way suspect, that gives people the right to search my things in order to better understand where Im at, not trusting me, and taking it upon themselves to decide for me, the direction of my course in life, or what I speak about, as though I would ever be offended by apps, websites, accounts, company names, movies, or songs, and then not stick up for others, or my family, or friends, or subject anyone to harm, including myself. I don't think that questioning is a condition you can rise above, you can be honest, but that doesn't mean that others will be more trusting of you, or loving, some deserve love and some don't, that's based upon your mental health, whats bothering you, how you are managing your life judged.

There are many pros and cons to blogging:

Pros:

Enhanced self-esteem.

More confidence.

Proactive attempt at living a life in question.

Managing your moods in a visible space.

Not interfering with the health or privacy of others.

Setting a good example, and being proud of yourself.

Experiencing life out in the open, living a safe life.

Not being viewed as competition, or present difficult concepts.
Not subject myself or others to harm, or embarrassment.
Not intimidate or pose a threat to anyone's wealth or decision making practices.
Not being relied upon as a voice of reason, to make promises I can't keep.

Cons:

People get to things before you.
You may feel slowed down by the energy of others.
You may not be proud of yourself, or viewed favorably.
You can be viewed as the problem, if you appear that way.
No one will want to keep secrets for you, so get your story straight.
People will assume if you are not happy means you are not with the people.
Based upon your connections in life despecialized.
Based upon who you are, not inflate the chests of others, cause depression.
If you appear strong, leave room for annoyance or attentions drawn.
Easily intimidated by others, or made to look foolish or lost.
Be treated as drug addict if you continue to talk, not in an organized way.
Not be respected for your Twitter feed, seen as in avoidance of word count.
Be treated as someone who keeps secrets, and not healthy by being a good person.
Not seen worthy of attentions or looking for attentions, seeking to be known.
Others may have difficulty relating to you, and that's the difference that can be felt.
Be viewed as a bad influence, given the meds you are on, or whether having attended rehabs.
Seen as a negative influence, or someone with a poor attitude, not deserving of respect.
Being viewed as a lost cause, or someone raising awareness to a cause non-existent.
Not viewing a sense of being put together, or the togetherness of others, as solution.
As seen get minimized to terms, disrespectful of you and your experiences in life.
Seen as excuse, or verbose, without solutions provided of essence to help others move on.
Seen as someone who creates problems based upon their choices made, not apart of.
Then you get tested, to see if you fight, and what is seen now, is not a fight.

This is responding to a fight, and not creating a fight, where none is needed for anyone.
I'm the type of person who would rather self-harm, then question of fight with others.
I'm the type of person who is aware when others become off, my reports are not validated.
I'm the type of person, who complained after a co-worker told me he wrote about "The Armenian Genocide," and a Science textbook was placed in my cubicle, then after complaining, and not responding to a co-worker who asked me to meet him in an alley downtown with a friend in common I lost the 9th Grade election to a shorter speech, wrote a letter about my experience after 9/11 a New York experience, that was shared with me by my cousin, what it was like running across the Brooklyn Bridge and what his face was like, who moved to Hawaii. I talked about my Dad crying while watching the towers get hit in NY, with his arms folded. And after Google searching my name, applying for jobs, didn't get the Government Job told to apply to, after my personal statement was shared, found all the links and articles with my name in it, and cache'd to a deposition, and watched the video of my Dad testifying with his arms folded. And my neighbor, hopped over the balcony fence, and read what I wrote, by candlelight in my apartment in West Hollywood, and asked me who I thought did it, it was about War Overseas.

What You Have that Others Dont

The career path of a writer is not predictable, its by far one of the toughest professions I have ever worked in, and took 8 years of careful study and experimentation with different audiences to come up with an algorithm dedicated to making people feel good, feel assured, and without worry past, presently, or future, and that was only possible by staying sober, and staying home, and applying for jobs, working for jobs, or writing at home, or working on books. That was how I scheduled my time. It doesn't take a hero to create stability within or around you, that's just basic social graces, and requires being a functioning adult, able to care for themselves, and others, or animals, an independent fixer of ones own identity, without requirement or necessity of others to prove themselves in life or get a job, that's something friends cannot help you with. The fewer the obstacles, the better, that's limiting your time spent on things that don't matter as much to you, and focusing your energy on things you want to know more about, such as art, music, film, blogging, writing, books, everything you don't have time for as a student, exploring all those extracurricular studies, such as summer schooling in Paris 2002, studying Art History and Drawing at American University of Paris, or Fashion Design at Otis College of Art and Design 2001.

What are your variables for success in life? That means what are you doing with your life right now, in order to get to where you want to be in life, it all adds up. Life is meant to be lived to its fullest, that requires you make friends, get jobs, be social, manage a public profile, update your public profile, maintain contact with previous employers updating them on your progress and requesting for references, and all of that is possible when you stay on top of things in life. That requires you to be organized, to focus on the positives, and to make the most of the life you have lived, whether or not you are replaced, whether or not things work out, whether or not anyone empathizes with you, whether or not anyone thinks you're not trying your hardest, and whether or not anyone understands you. There will always be something special about you, so long as you treat yourself and others as special in your life, that is how someone or something special is made, by the time spent working on a relationship, or time spent on your schooling, or time spent working, that is how special connections are made, and that is how people come to know you, whether at your best or worst in life, ultimately that is how you are judged by society.

How you come to identify yourself is your job, not the job of others, to make light of your life, to be used to evaluate you, judge you, or decide whether or not to take you seriously in life, your life is not a movie, until you so decide to share your life with others, and wish to be viewed presently performing in life, whether you make it or not, that's never certain. I think blogging was a stretch, but a more feasible option than becoming an Attorney, since I could not keep up with my studies focused, and get good grades on exams, overwhelmed, or not confident by exam day, that's a result of not studying in advance, and trying to cram in an entire semester that's three courses of study into a couple months before the exam, memorize, consolidate material, make outlines long and short, and make flashcards and memorize definitions and rules you felt the need to dedicate your time and attentions to to perform on exam day. That's Law School, your given cases you have to read, and you have to create your own outlines for understanding the law, and figure out how to apply the law when, where, and why, and which cases stood out to you as important, which ones you remembered, so that if you are given a fact pattern in life, able to apply the laws that you know, or have learned during the course of your study in lectures, as well as in private study of the law, realized or understood.

Nothing is given to you in life, not jobs, not connections, and certainly not comrades doing whatever makes you happy in life, or feel whole and complete, we are each given an opportunity to either understand or not understand one another, and that's living life, meeting people you either mesh with or don't mesh with, acquiring skills you love or don't love, learning things you wanted to know or didn't want to know, and coming to know people as identified who don't ring a bell to you, or show up on your radar, or ever think twice about. That's living life, those who do stand out to you, are those you follow, those you are exposed to, and upon knowing someone overtime, that is how some becomes well received unconditionally, and without question occurs upon demonstrating your ability to perform under all types of pressures, with the same result occurring over and over again, that is success, that's being reliable. If you are given a job in life are you able to do it, and if you set goals for yourself are you able to come through with what it is you have promised or promoted about yourself.

Everyone's a critic these days. Everyone gets sized up. And yes if you are paid millions of dollars to act, that is what is expected of you, to make others feel good, and yes if you say anything unfavorable to others or insensitive to the times, that gets frowned upon, sometimes in a career ending way. That then becomes a matter of others having something that you don't have confidence, and in knowing that, treat you as someone who is lacking a quality that they have, that's self certainty, that's then seeing the big picture with acceptance, and that's seeing you in the grand scheme of things as unimpressive, for show, or for re-calibration to what ideas they have about life. We all are entitled to our own right to be consumed by whatever we want to be consumed by, that is our daily thoughts about life, who we think about, and how we come to feel about ourselves, upon exposure to others, always with grace, accept all attentions. And it's when a bad opinion of you is held, that that opinion of you seeks to be reinforced. I may not have lived a perfect life, but that also doesn't mean that I'm here to fight or prove myself in life. Worthy of a job, worthy of friends, worthy of a companion or worthy of making my family proud of me, and how far I have come, through disability and back over an 8 year period estranged from my family, friends, and in Law School online, fixing my resume, to get jobs.

Life's Not Totally Over ...

In Outpatient Rehab 2006 from Cocaine Abuse for one assignment we were required to write a goodbye letter to drugs and alcohol, along with writing a detailed timeline Biography from childhood up until now. I partied one semester in college my Senior Year, Summer-Fall 2006. The rest of the time, I was disciplined, not social, studying everyday in the library for 5 hours a day, and one semester got straight As, was so proud of myself. I was on Deans List a couple times and graduated with Honors Cum Laude. So it was a big deal that I tried Cocaine my Senior Year, with girl friends, and got carried away in the moment. I was supposed to be a Crisis Hotline Counselor, and got the job at the Boulder DA's Office as a Victim Advocate and attended one training session, then let them know that I would not be able to take the job, due to addiction. Know that all your problems may come up for you while using substances, and if you don't understand why you are using substances to cope, chances are you will be creating problems for yourself in the future, mental health wise, socially, romantically, and academically struggle later on in life. That's once you flip the switch, from living a normal life, to living an alternate lifestyle, that most do not agree with. That you can't bounce back from, hardships endured, because of what people think of you, having lost respect for you, or because you have become a disappointment, to those who expected more from you, being who you are. I still took the LSAT three times, and got into two Law Schools. I really pushed myself anyways, and I don't believe that it was to my detriment to attend Law School, although it was a challenging goal, I think I am in a much better place now, than had I not attended Law School and worked in Marketing or elsewhere. A lot about life requires that you be fulfilled, and while now we may mostly be desensitized to hearing stories from others about their lives past, their downfalls, or failures, know one thing: you only have one life to live.

I've been reading a great book called: "Unf#ck Your Brain." by Faith G. Harper, PhD. Who reminds us that our trauma does not define us. [1] (50) Even if its trauma you have caused yourself via addiction. Which is why self-care is so important, "Noticing your emotions and thoughts with gentle awareness is another inward sign of emotional self-care." [2] Just like recovery takes 30 days to heal from addiction, misuse, and abuse of substances and or alcohol, so does the time it takes to recover from PTSD, 30 days. (40) That's the time it takes for your body "to recover from a traumatic event," whether that's being exposed to "a victim or an in-person witness," being hurt badly as a result of an incident, believing you or others are in danger or feeling helpless to protect them or yourself, or having a severe physical or emotional response during the traumatic situation. (38) Whether its your mental health or the mental health of others as affected by you that's of concern, understand why people keep their distance (they have lives of their own, don't take it personally), the best thing you can do is to assimilate, do the research, learn about your condition, and develop better coping mechanisms for managing your moods, whatever they may be, whatever the triggers may be, and no matter how others appear around you, you will eventually be put together again, and have genuine interactions with others, its all a matter of you first accepting yourself as you are, whether or not that condition is permanent, have faith that you will recover, no matter what the conditions are.

Faith reminds us that "trauma is often complex and continuous." (40) I have noticed that while in recovery, it has taken me several tries to get back out into the world, whether that's running, sensitive to loud noises and chatter, how I dress, buying all new clothes, and talking to family, I used to stay in my room during dinner parties, too shy to show my face and talk with my Parents and their friends, one came to my room to get me. That's holing up in your room writing books, that was my solution to being taken offline, that was a devastating loss, but its just an Instagram and Twitter feed, to me it was assembling my thoughts on paper. Well if its online, it should already be assembled, and if you are putting something together, keep it in a safe place, such as your computer, to record your ongoing thoughts, and best to connect to something that is all you, not connect to a space online, viewable by others, in that moment of finding yourself. Know that "you deserve every opportunity to heal." (59) If you put yourself out on the table for surgery, on social media, others may see things differently from an objective lens, not understand your viewpoint, and that's having mental health issues when you are deep in thought, others think your strange, when you are being humorous, others think you are being obnoxious, when you are scared or living in a state of fear, others think that you are being too extreme, when you are too sharp or focused others think you need to calm down, if you see things clearly others think that you are seeing things in the wrong way, if you feel as though you have been wronged no one wants to be blamed for your condition later, and if you are shy, treated as small babied by others.

What does that spell? Patience. Note that “addiction is any repeated behavior, substance-related or not, in which a person feels compelled to persist, regardless of its negative impact on [their] life and the lives of others.” (142) So just as you may feel right about how your feeling, also recognize that others may feel right about their feelings and choices too. That someone being hard on you, is your caretaker, that someone pushing you, cares about you, and that person screaming at you, is your ex-boyfriend, and that’s your choice to leave a loving situation, and all the consequences that come with being on your own in life, so treated. Don’t go into addiction, and engage in maladaptive conditions to suit yourself in life, that’s giving love without love returned, fostering that “barrier between [you] and the rest of the world” (143) that was created by you, giving love without receiving love, or giving love to someone who is not available to love you back. The greatest fantasy match is to someone with a job mature, things were perfect with my ex, then I went out alone when my mind left me in Law School, bipolar. He’s still single now, now he’s the adult with a job and a real car he bought a truck, an upgrade from his Honda cube.

You are the choices you have made in life, and by your decisions to keep yourself separate from others in life, impedes on your self-development, and progress in life, that’s putting yourself down in life, when no one else is, that’s on you to decide to forgive yourself. Choosing not to “engage in the addiction at all,” is one step in the right direction, whether that’s drinking, using drugs, medication abuses, or self-harm, and that will be your “only mechanism of healing,” with awareness that it is you creating those barriers for yourself in life from others. And that is how the “harm-reduction” process begins. Know that while you recover from such abuses in life, whether that’s abusing your body, having sex, or abusing your mind, writing random stuff on Twitter, gaining weight feeling sorry for yourself, exercising everyday and still feeling fat at 123lbs, explains why Im now 170lbs [lost confidence]. That’s the purpose of punishment, its not something to be angry about, “Anger is [an emotion] triggered by: Hurt, Expectations not met, and Needs not met, which explains why I moved home after living alone 2004 to 2017. That’s living alone in one bedroom apartments for 14 years independent of others.

Review: Overall I think this has been a great reading experience, and really helped me put together an action plan when it comes to self-harm, and understand why I would hit my head (2011), cut my wrist (2015), or slam my head into the wall with voices (2017), if only I could be more compassionate, and accepting of all voices, the better off I’ll be, and know that the worse off I become the more aggressive others become over me, my condition, and my health, play doctor on me. And know not to record myself by photo and video, in all of those circumstances, play doctor on myself, and keep track of my own health and well being, while finding myself. I think that allowed me to be put under observation, before I had an opportunity to shine, or rise above these issues in life, and outgrow these problems, which is where I thought I was now, but still having technical difficulties when it comes to understanding why I am this way, and how to improve. I get that my philosophies in life may not pan out and make sense for everyone, but I always mean well when others are addressed or included in my concerns, and not meant for joke alone, for whatever its worth. Im on page 150, and plan on finishing reading today or tomorrow, thanks everyone for listening, Im sorry.

What Does Loneliness Feel Like? ...

Just because you’re lonely does not mean you are living a meaningless life, and does not mean that you are anti-social. If the conditions permit for it, one is social, if one is not sure of the conditions weathered around them, then one refrains from being social. There is nothing obtuse about not trying hard in certain departments in life, and has everything to do with self-esteem, self-confidence and being sure of yourself. We all have issues that Im sure of, and if you are in the process of figuring yourself out in life, and trying to figure out what you want to do with your life, then that’s being lost. When you are lost no one can help you, no one can motivate you, and few will encourage you or remind you of your strengths in life. That is something you have to figure out for yourself in life, being comfortable with who you are and where you are in life, and making the most out of life, no matter where you have to start. We are all the same way when tired, overwhelmed easily, thoughtless, temperamental, and unmotivated, that's called depression, running out of steam in life. It's you that has to set a schedule, get out of bed each day, and do something with your life, that gives you meaning and purpose, for me that was running or walking everyday, and blogging. I have since stopped Tweeting. I'm in a new space now, that's blogging without Twitter, checking on the well-being of others, and without knowing how others are doing, that may make me seem out of touch with reality, not on the same emotional wavelength as everyone, and without speaking to what is going on socially online on social media. I have since started watching, CNN, NBC News, Fox News, and watch Movies. It's not my goal to be a headache, or a source of discomfort to anyone, and although I may have been popular in High School and in College, that doesn't mean that I was popular in Law School social, that was because I don't drink. I think dating is important, I have always wanted to have a boyfriend, and did not start dating until College, and almost got married twice as a Law Student, that something that was missing, was the fact that I have Bipolar, and needed to take night meds, which was not clear to me as needed at the time. Had I been prescribed night meds and taken night meds, then I would've stayed in those relationships, and probably would've been married by now, happily married. I am not someone who dates to begin with, so I would never gamble with my heart. Later in life, if you become less self-assured, and confident about yourself, then you do allow voices to get the best of you and may make bad decisions for yourself, that's a consequence of isolating, and not having positive examples of your current skills, social, and romantic to be referenced to, with regards to your present condition, be trusted. That's the cost of not having dated since 2014, hospitalized twice while dating, that just means that I was not strong enough at the beginning to date casually, and that I was not strong enough to maintain a relationship casually at the end. People will come back into your life, the ones that loved you, and if you loved them back, then that's one another forgiving each other for what has passed, with acceptance of you as you are now. I have messaged with both ex-boyfriends who wanted to marry me, and who still support me to this day. Everything else occurring while single, has nothing to do with them, and everything to do with the choices I later made for myself in life, and experienced bad luck with.

Stick to What You're Good At ...

No life is perfect, we all have problems. Just because your life is difficult, does not make you special in that way, not if you can't speak positively of yourself and others, otherwise it just looks like everything's a justification for better or worse to become of you in life, the sum total, of the times you have f-cked up in life, or a sum total of the times you have succeeded in life. It all depends on which moments you allow to define you, and your progress in life. Each day, we are given an opportunity, and while my goals may be centered on not self-harming, that doesn't mean that all my efforts are in addiction, or causing me to self-harm, that is writing. If it's not the writing that is helping me, that doesn't mean that it is because of my writing I've been harmed, or doing a disservice to anyone else's sense of being and belonging on earth. There are many ways in which you can put yourself at odds with others, one of which is not being believed, or being thought of as a liar, or someone who exaggerates, for attentions. I have done my best to pursue a legal education, and that was because I was a crisis hotline counselor, and took the LSAT three times, studied, and was prepared to be a Law Student. I took Princeton Review twice, and Kaplan twice. I took my first LSAT 2006. There is no rising above, when less is expected of you, and when your success is thought of as making other people look bad or in the wrong, don't be so full of yourselves too. Not every life was lived to make a positive impression presently, to forgive a poor impression past. There is no occasion to rise to, under hate, apathy, competition, or ill feelings toward. That just means that I am not the remedy to your unhappiness, I cannot remedy your hate, and I cannot remedy your misunderstandings about me, or those from my life as mentioned. I have never once, said that anyone I've met has been a bad influence on me, never once have I ever blamed anyone on the face of the earth as having been a negative influence to me in my life, I'm not judgmental. And while I may not express hate, or say any intimidating remarks about those who have caused harm to others, that also doesn't mean that I empathize with them, or have been affected by them by influence, stood up for anyone outside of my immediate exposures in life. I am not someone who turns on people, not my family, not my schools, not my friends, not my sponsors, not my companions, not my boyfriends, and especially not people with good lives, have never placed blame on acceptances, or lack of attentions paid to me, as a cause for my disillusionment, or poor comprehension of the issues present, that took careful study of now. I am always in control of how I am treated in life, and that is something you cannot change about me, no matter what is said, no matter what is done, no matter whos on board, no matter who agrees, no matter who disagrees, no matter who is happy, no matter whos unhappy, no matter whos focused, no matter whos lost steam, and no matter who has friends, and no matter how few friends I have now, or none at all. Understand that someone who is working on themselves keeps separate from others, and for good reason, that is to not disturb others with their problems, and to make improvements to their lives, via schooling or invested time in projects that they believe in, and carry concerns that they believe deserve reprieve from focus on.

I have never had problems socializing, or working. I have never had problems getting jobs, or being hired. I have never faced difficulties blogging or sharing my mind. I have never feared competition, nor never have been threatened by the successes of others affected. And although I have a few distant connections to people in positions of power, they cannot help me, they cannot motivate me, they cannot protect me, and they cannot help me make decisions for myself in life, that's the catch. That its not until you yourself become a success and worth knowing in life, that you become known whole heartedly, and with pride, not shame, not embarrassment, and without discord internal resulting from being a person known, or talked about by others, or brought up to those who knew you, an uncomfortable subject. And that is how spokepeople are made, people who come to know you privately, then upon being addressed by all, seen in the positive, that is how a positive reference is made, to someone who knows me, who is viewed by others with positive reference, having known me personally. I cant say that in the reverse the same has been afforded to me in life, that is others thinking positively of me, knowing who I have known in life, or who knew me well. And that is how bad connections are made, when one is viewed as a negative influence, or a person who has not lead a good life, does not make good choices, and as a result gets viewed as someone who is the cause of bad choices, or bad luck to others, seeing you as a previous connection in life. We all live our lives separately, that would be great if we could all experience success at the same time, but its all a matter of jobs, and you have to apply for jobs, and continue working, to eventually find a job, and that was a process I gave up on, and focused on finishing a masters instead. You can only be where your heart is in life, and that's the lesson, and if you heart is leaving you, that means that you are not where you should be in life, and can be somewhere else in life that you will find more comfortable and suit your needs better in life.

Always see the good in others, and while your presence may be of benefit to others, only upon being well are you of value to be around in life, its can you both speak, and appear well, and if not, that is how you get hospitalized, based upon what you have to share and whether or not you have been able to sleep at night, and if you appear out of sorts, that is a condition no one is tolerant of. Whats embarrassing, is being someone who everyone knew, and then for rumors to go overheard or blurbs about me, "oh Leslie went to jail" "oh Leslie went to rehab" "oh Leslies in the hospital" "oh Leslies on Twitter" "oh Leslie blogs." You determine what is said about you in life, and maybe that was something I realized later in life. That with "oh Leslie is in Law School" that more was expected of me, better grades, and finishing as strong as I started 3rd in my class.

I don't think I deserved to be punished so harshly, and to complain if to subject me to a worse result, is therefore not worth complaining about. Whats so important is how you think, of yourself, and others, and the care you demonstrate toward living your own life, is viewed as an example of the type of care and attention you paid to others when required to in a job. In todays day and age, no one shares this much about themselves, and no one talks that much to people in private, its mostly, hearing what you have to say, without replying much, that's how you get treated post punishment, like you are stupid, or a poor reference to be associated to. And that is what makes getting a job difficult, while I may have had a positive work experience prior to punishment, after punishment, people give up on you more easily, if you don't have a lot of energy, if your hearts not in it, if things occur overhead, that cause your mind to leave, all of that gets weighed, when determining your worth a connection to them. And yes how I am now, although separate from others, does matter to connections past, having known me. And that's a connection I do not have to anyone past, and a connection they have, reading my blog now. That is something I have also come to accept, that anyone can read, past, present, or future, and hopefully the same determinations will not be made about me, not live up to negative interpretations of me.

Therefore one of the purposes of blogging, is to demonstrate that I have moved on in life, that I do think in the positive, that I have good worth ethic, and that people do like me, and that if I work for a company, if it is known that I work for, will not hurt the company's name, will not be considered a risk to the company, and whether or not it is me that is the cause for any issues socially, I will not be viewed as the association that interfered with treatment of anyone, or the cause for anyone to be viewed in a negative light having been associated to me in my life. You are your issues in life, and while you may try to prevent the misuse of your confidences in life, it is what is said in confidence or privately that gets used as ammunition against you later on in life, as having been an accurate account of your current thinking as connected to them, demonstrated, and that's how a fool is made out of someone bright. Someone with expectation of hearing about specific issues, as is relates to your ability to love or be in a loving relationship, then hurt you publicly treat you as a reject to society, injured. And this is what makes it difficult to have online relationships, never in my life has someone I have liked or who has liked me, ever hurt me in public, to change my odds in life, or cause me self-harm. Just "be careful." I think it is best to live life freely, without worry of being harmed, and maybe that's too tolerant of me, to have few fears in life, when it comes to socialization or impressions made upon my face or body, that is not something I can control, what becomes of me, all I know is that so long as I stay positive, and take good care of myself, that no one will be able to affect me or change me.

More is Not Always Better ...

On my #dontdodrugs page on Facebook, it was recommended to keep things short. That's from the viewpoint of someone in recovery, and for the most part I have kept things short, and have not gone too much into depth, running the risk of anyone getting lost in my thoughts, and not able to comprehend or see a bigger picture. Blogging improves overtime, and yes some writing experience is required, that is if you want to keep an audience, demonstrate some professionalism, without being too loose spoken about your personal experiences in life, which sometimes can or cannot help what it is you are going through. We are all given examples in life, and blogging is not one of them, everyone has a different style, and a different set of standards they adhere to and tone. What is blogging? Its coming up with a system of thinking that works for you, and works for your readers. It's a place where people can go to think, and to better understand themselves and others. And more isn't the solution when it comes to writing. Its all about how well you articulate a point of view, without becoming overwhelmed, and without overwhelming your reader. This requires letting go. Not all value is contingent upon a total value of all your work, as accepted, life is too short, to need to have read everything about a person, in order to accept them in life. That is a standard too high for most to be held to in life, I have been kind enough to share timelines, and have writing references from different years to my life, and as developed have either improved, or encountered new problems in my personal development as a writer. Don't be surprised if others first want to know what is wrong with you, and how you relate as a blogger to sobriety, don't do drugs, and mental health issues, and what are your valid personal experiences relevant to your mention of having been apart of groups in life, in recovery. Yes, I have recovery experience, both in rehabs, AA, and NA meetings. And no, blogging is not solely me sharing in a way conducive only to those in recovery, as they may or may not relate to me mental health wise on meds, Ive lived life long enough to have had more experiences in life, and have lived more days to my life sober, than moments spent using or drinking, that's for sure. Its apart of my story, but is not my story. And that's the limit to others understanding of you, whether you represent what you represent well, and if someone else represents those facets of life better than you. How you are compared to someone else, of your same intelligence, degree, or standing, respected or not. Know that everyone sees themselves as smart, and while you may be simply sharing your thoughts online, as it relates to your understanding of life, know that there will be some in disagreement with you, who do not value your writing, or what you have to see, seeing you as less than in life, based upon the meds you take, and the condition you are in, lifestyle, and living conditions in life. And wondering whats special about you? How you were able to generate a following up to 66k on your Pinterest, and ranked highly on Alexa as a website. If its something you are paying attention to for improvement, that's where you will improve in life, if its not something you register into your comprehension and factor into your self-improvement, then it will not be known, as an accurate measure of your worth online as a writer. I am someone who is only able to focus on one thing at a time, maybe why I did not finish my JD, with a boyfriend, and maybe why I was able to lose 50lbs, but had not yet fully launched my website, as I pitched, and as I wanted it to be, a database, which it is now, of information I have assembled and created in direct reference to either what I have gone through, what Im going through, or while trying to figure out my future, where I belong, and who I want to be one day. If there is misunderstanding of you, it may be the case that someone wants to know what you have to offer them as a service, or what you have to say, that will be beneficial to their health, while viewing your personal history judge you based on your demonstration of living a life as told, or having achieved on good merits, and become successful now as a blogger. That's just life. Who are you? And what do you have to say to be considered of interest to me. And if you do not have anything to say that is of interest to me, not thought about, or brought into ones life. Everyone has lives of their own, and that's just something you later come to recognize as a blogger, that while others think youre smart, they expect everything for free, and if you are considering earning a wage as a writer, treat you as though you don't have anything different to offer, aside from your blogging, that is of value, to be paid for by them. That's assuming that my readership or following is expected to buy my book if I sell a book. And that is how a writer gets devalued, when what was assembled to be sold, is handed out for free, that doesn't seem to change anyones feelings toward you, to demonstrate that you have something of value, you've been working on, all they want to know is up front, what you know, to leave you alone in life. As a blogger there is an interchange between moments of peace, and moments of discord, and there will be moments of chaos, but there is no rush or any place in particular you need to be in life, position wise, in order to feel whole and complete, all that matters is giving it your best each day, whether that's bullet pointed or not clear to others rhetoric wise.

As you become more experienced as a blogger you will come to understand the Cycle of Thoughts, occurring between you and your readers, and recognize if discomfort presents itself, that's something you have said, that as processed by them, makes you uncomfortable, that's empathy, always imagine yourself in both positions in life, the writer and the reader, sometimes we forget. And while their position may improve, and as they become more confident having known you or come to understand you from their vantage point, that doesn't mean that you will similarly feel well, understood, or feel whole or complete, that's the give and take between a writer and ones readership. It is therefore your responsibility as a blogger to stay motivated, no matter how many are following you, no matter what changes you endure in numbers, be consistent, and that requires that one stays well, stays on a schedule and continues to exceed expectations of themselves, improve, that means not allowing negative expectations of you to take hold of your stability, and thinking processes, be convoluted changed, or dismembered as a thinker, and lose you place in life, or your train of thought. Many thoughts get lost in the process of thinking, that you cannot control, so keeping a notebook handy is an acceptable way of staying on course and in tangent to what makes you feel good, regardless of whos on board with you in life, voices, readers, watchers, judgmental people, refined, not refined, or put together, not in need of your help, reading for amusement purposes. There is writing to expectation, and there is writing from the heart. Always stay true to what makes you feel good, and say only what makes sense to you, without gearing any topics, or explanations about others, the less you describe others, the less you open yourself up for criticism, as the reader runs its course in thinking, assuming things are about them.

Chances are if you are not happy with your life, the way it is, there will be some manifestation of regret you will encounter at some point, during the course of your self-development. Whether that occurs in the form of frustration, mental disturbance, or unhappiness, like all things that cause you discomfort, is just another feeling to overcome. As you reflect on your life, however recorded by you, there will be things about yourself, you dislike, or based upon your current viewpoint, think that you should have done a better job of articulating then, what you can see now. Usually when we are not well, and unsure of ourselves, become emotional about things, and upon expressing ourselves as emotional, others do not understand us, that is the cost of being vocal about how you feel, without being specific to what in regards you are communicating about, and that is how you get judged by others. What gets viewed closely, is how you were, compared to how you are now, and what is being studied by an onlooker, is what changes you have undergone in life, that have made you a better person now. Not all change means that one is resilient, that's the defect in logic, with concern for someone's health, whether improved or not, sober, or having gone to therapy, that doesn't mean that a person feels better, simply because they have addressed one issue, which was an issue at the time in question. Why was someone emotional? Why was someone drinking? And what were the causes for failure then? And how can something viewed now be seen as existing at the time of failure then? We all improve overtime, and even though improvements have been made, does not mean that one is invincible to life's challenges, and just because something can be comprehended, does not mean that what is understood now, needed to be understood then, in order to be smarter, or confident enough to work on a website, and develop a website. The better your time is spent, the better you'll feel, and that goes without question. Whenever you are doing your best, you are less likely to have regrets in life, and the more collected you feel about your time on earth, what you're doing with your life, and where you have been in life. Even if you cannot accept all parts of your journey, as having made you a stronger person today, that doesn't mean that you still cannot get hurt, or set up for the same failures in life again. You are how you feel about yourself, and so long as you allow others to dictate how you feel about yourself, then you will forever endure those internal struggles in life, when it comes to acceptances of you, whether that's discomfort, insult, aggravation, or annoyance, it's important that you stay centered, no matter what your exposures are in life, and no matter who is around you, talking to you, or not talking to you, be affected by anyone, or triggered to think about things, no matter what is relevant to them looking at you, but not relevant to your own experiences in life, judged. Note: "Guilt and regret weighs heavily on your mental health, which as a result can disrupt your physical productivity." [1] Therefore, if you're not moving forward in life, chances are you are relying too heavily on the experiences that changed you, rather than focusing on what has been working for you absent minded those experiences in life. Your day to day schedule need not be reinforced by negatives in life, that's not the solution, but adherence to internal motivating factors in life, will surely get you to the end of the road, intended. And this is where affirmations come into play, reminding ourselves of our self-worth, rather than pick ourselves apart, for what we are not, that's no way to a healthier happier you in life. You have to accept all parts of you, unconditionally, if you are to be comfortable around others, your work alone cannot represent you in life, and that's something you realize as you get older, that what has passed, has passed, and who you are now, is most relevant to how you get treated now. But understand that when you are proud of yourself, looking at yourself, things begin to change around you similarly, whether that's not being scared of others, not being intimidated by others, you also begin to see the possibilities again in life and that's what gets afforded to you in return, for having a better attitude in life, and sense of direction, and purpose. No one can make you a positive person, you either see the good in others, or you don't, and the more defensive you become, the more hostile those interactions are perceived to have been, it's all about how you see things. The key to having a good life, is to view things in the positive, the more you look back, and blame others, the more closely you get looked at for errors, and that's how judgements work, either you have done something wrong, and get examined closely for errors in life, or you rise above hate, and become something else in life, that under no close examinations, sheds any negative light upon you or others past, that's moving on in life. According to lifehack.org, "Holding onto regret is one form of self-sabotage, and moving forward means having healthier conversations with yourself to get to the root of "the thing." [2] This explains, how what you think, manifests in what is seen later by you or others. The more you enable others to think poorly of you, that is putting yourself down in life, or making fun of yourself, the less seriously others will come to know and accept you in life. People sometimes have a better grasp of concepts, the more they can minimize a person's attributes to being about negatives, until that is what manifests itself in another, same idea. Therefore it matters both what you think, and it also matters what other people think of you, in order for things to go right for you in life, accepting what is in your control, as well as accepting what is not in your control, what others think of you. No one can change your core, when someone tries to change you, by calling you names, or insulting you, that is simply their way of not accepting you as you are, and thinking you are something that you are not. It is not your responsibility to defend oneself against commentaries, "auditory delusions" and create arguments in public in reality on your blog, that is their fight with you, not your fight with them. And that's how negative people are, transposing their feelings about you to you, to see how you respond as described in that way, whether you are empathizing with someone who is that, or whether you yourself are interpreting what you hear, as being about you, heard. And that's to say that you are like this in public, with an edge in life, or respond negatively to others thinking things are about you, combative, and that is why I was given voices in life, a disability. If I cannot cure voices, that doesn't mean that those who have voices, feel the same way I do, about the voices I hear, we all experience mental health issues differently, the more you can work, and live a normal life, the less you feel tortured, hearing things that don't resonate with you, or hearing things that cause you to self-harm, that was how I was affected by voices, it's a private struggle, not a public struggle, for deciphering. -I wish I could remember the times when I got voices and understood why, I just know that I got voices in 2006, the again 2017, and then again 2020. I have faith that I will recover, most do not, and it's a very debilitating condition to maneuver around in life, and eventually not worry or think about yourself as being affected by others, that is a delusion, to think that the thoughts of others can control you, or able to make you feel so bad about yourself, so embarrassed, so ashamed. Theyre just voices, remember that those voices are not you.

Playing Victim ...

If you don't understand the concept of being told something, and then feeling bad about yourself, that could just be because either you or someone you know has identified, or misidentified you as being something your not. There is a such thing as things ringing true, and then not feeling good about ourselves, having been identified as something we do not believe we are, but which has described a feeling or emotion we have experienced, and then labeled as such. Have you ever had trouble getting going in life, while someone tries to motivate you to do things in life, and then losing all motivation? That's being pushed. It's the kind of feeling, had you not been told something, there would be no feeling to fight, as identified. Sometimes looking at things from an outside perspective, doesn't necessarily reflect whats going on within a person. That's people trying to help you, when you don't need help, or people trying to tell you how it is, without you needing someone to identify what it is youre going through. Some things are better left unsaid. And then there is denial. When you are going through something, and not wanting to admit what is going wrong for you in life, and facing your fears, or the shame, or embarrassment, associated to your thoughts, how youre feeling. Being in denial, means that you don't want to admit you need help, but the same time need help, and the help you are given in life, is not the kind of help that you need in life, that's being in denial. Your condition solicits for attentions, and the attention given, is not the kind of attention you need or want, not wanting to be pushed, not wanting to be exposed, not wanting to be given advices, not wanting to be sized up, and not wanting to be told whats wrong with you, by another you are not completely convinced should be given the authority to identify you as being in the wrong, or indicate that there is something wrong about you. Don't be stubborn. Always see things in the positive, be thankful for those who try to help you, get back on track. Just as it may not be easy for you to ask for help, it may not be easy for them to care or to try to help. If your condition is annoying to them, then maybe those are not the right people to get help from. Someone who understands you will be patient with you, acknowledge when you are on track, not just be hyper and bossy when you're not on track, that's just family, they always seem to pop up and be everywhere in your life when things are not going right for you. -I was raised to never play victim. Then I read an article on lifehack.org, "14 Signs Someone is Always Playing the Victim," and go this is exactly why I was raised never to play victim, it seems like a whole host of other issues are inherited in the process, of playing victim to circumstances outside of your control, and can be really bothersome to others, trying to get through to you, stubborn. While it may not be your fault totally, that also doesn't mean that it's the fault of others, should things later not go right for you in life, that's in your control. In order to "avoid similar situations in the future," you must learn to accept what is and what it is not, and this marks your "opportunity for growth," knowing the difference between how things are in reality, versus how you have made things up in your head about circumstances, which is usually worse in your mind as remembered, than it looks. Being in Your Shell ...

Many of us are shy, although we don't like to admit it. A lot about enjoying life, requires you to not be in your shell. As one woman describes it on theartofsimple.net, "So I decided it was time to stop living in a state of fear. Life was no fun (they call it painfully shy for a reason) and I was done with missing out on connecting with people." [1] While bolde.com recommends, "If it's something that challenges you, then set it as a goal so that when you achieve it, you feel more confident and you'll keep on trying!" [2] Be open within limits, blogging is the one place where one can share their mind, but its important not to cause yourself pain, through the process of sharing what you think, whats on your mind, and sharing how you look while doing that all. Be proud of yourself, according to introvertspring.com, "Shells are meant to protect" and "An introvert's shell is more like a shield that preserves our inherent awesomeness." [3] In the grand scheme of things you are supposed to follow your instincts, but never to the extent that you become antisocial, and stop socializing all together, a part of you must continue to try no matter what your senses tell you, and if your senses are telling you to stay in bed all day, then by all means fight that feeling and don't regress, and stay in your room all day moping about what could've been, and start living the life you want to live, and not watch life go by, watch the weeks, months, and years pass by with no ongoing changes within you, to stimulate change for the better. If its your thinking that's off fix it, if it's problems with family work on it, and if its being estranged from friends, then reach out and try to contact them, and get some conversations going. Its never too late to start building a better life for yourself, and you'll thank yourself later for trying, and see that it wasn't that hard to begin with. So instead of making a harder life for yourself than needs to be, put a little more effort in your self-improvement, put a little more effort into being social, and never stop setting goals for yourself. The more things you have to talk about, the better, and this is why staying active is so important to building better relationships overtime, some of the happiest people are doing things with their life that they're proud of, they have jobs, they have hobbies, they play sports, they work out, they go to classes, they take courses online, they continue their studies, there are so many ways to live life, don't stop now. And if its problems on your plate, that's are eating away at your insides, then talk about them, Im sure your audience will forgive you, and your friends will forget, no one expects you to be a perfect blogger, and no one expects your story to be perfect, just always do your best.

Searching for Answers ...

Most of what rings true for us, is our answer, the ability to set one subject down at a time and move forward with our thinking. Then there are things we cant set aside, also known as problems. No matter what gets projected toward you for understanding, or misunderstanding, about yourself or others, always remember that that problem lies within you to resolve. Not the job of others, to make sense to you, or make sense for you of what youre going through in life. I just went to therapy today, I can barely talk for an hour, pretty much. Ive been this way since I started therapy 2017, Im not a big talker, Im a quiet person. Some people are comfortable talking and some people are not, I usually shy away socially, either sitting by myself or away from people, Im just not someone to put myself out there, and approach others, Ive never been that way, not when it comes to making friends, and not when it comes to having companions in life.

As you get older, the balls always on your side of the court, to either make moves in life, or to stay static, and live the same day over and over again, until you decide to make changes to your life. That's in your 30s, you either grow, or regress, over what life you could've had, what life you never had, and figure out what you want the rest of your life to look like, without being too reliant on unnecessary feedbacks, to dictate to you, what youre about. For everything that brings you discomfort in life, keep to yourself, or talk to a Doctor about, that goes for your condition, your diagnosis, your likes, your dislikes and your problems, that's generally not food for thought for others to decipher, and sometimes can cause comprehension problems to those who don't understand, why someone capable of having it all in life doesn't have it all on life. We are not all that confident in life, that's the main point, some more driven than most. It depends what you put your heart into, determines what goes well for you in life, and if you've been hurt before, that makes it difficult to have intimate moments with people, to share intimacies with others, and to be an intimate person all together. To me when I'm most put together, is by not exposing others to the other side of life, the types of decisions, that cause problems for you in life, or the types of decisions in life you later come to regret, we all go through pains in life, and it's more about accepting yourself as you are now, without shedding too much light on what has passed, as though that explains where you are now in life, or why you are feeling a certain way. There is no perfect equation for wellness, but one thing is for sure, the more well your thoughts are, the more you think about things in the positive, the less bothered you are by the moods of others, and the more focused you are on yourself, and the more goals you set for yourself, and the more you learn about life, and managing your own problems in life the better off you'll be, content.

Content is the feeling of being at peace with yourself and others, it's not having a problem with anyone, it's saying the right things in life, and it's not saying anything that would hurt your feelings to hear, or to hear from someone else, toward you or about you in life. It starts with you. The better able you are at reading yourself, the better able you will be to witness the positive changes you go through, recognize those moments when you are doing well, and taking a moment from time to time, to be proud of yourself, that's wellness, recognition of oneself as well, and seeing everyone else from a well frame of mind, that's positivity.

That being said, appreciate those who speak their mind, without whom we would not have music, movies, news organizations, newspapers, blogs, artwork, poems, singing, acting, directors, presidents, congress men and women, judges, justices, courts, lawyers, doctors, and nurses, all of whom protect the health and general well-being of all people, no matter where they come from, accept them until proven otherwise, that's your inherent freedom in life, to be viewed in the positive, unless proven otherwise, to be respected, until given a reason to not be respected. They are everyone who cares and then some. Those are starting points for thinking, they understand that sometimes it's hard to start thinking about life, until something is said to help you to think about life. One of my favorite classes in High School was American Literature, I think I got an A, that's when I discovered I enjoy reading and writing, and that's how the rest of my academic career path was chosen, on courses and classes that focused on reading and writing, all the way through Law School. I've never been good at multiple choice questions, probably because I think too hard about the answers, and create an answer in my mind, that maybe doesn't reflect what's given. We all think too hard sometimes, life doesn't always work that way, having the right answer in mind. That's why some subjects are cut and dry true or false, like science, some thinking is memory based, research based, governed by past decisions, in light of the future, such as law. Some things can't be done better, like artwork, and the best has already been made, and made famous. Then there is singing, forever evolving based upon how we are feeling sung to. Then there are movies, to help us to see things we can't readily see in our minds or visualize or put together on our own, provides us with feelings to have. This is an example, of stuff you should think about, what to appreciate about life, not overfocus too much on what's being said, or who's doing well and why, if people are doing well it's because they are living good lives, staying out of trouble, recording their every thought and every decision made, and every citation to everything exposed to, researched, or known, every source, and that's being a blogger. Keeping track of your thoughts, citing where-ever is needed, and monitoring your exposures in life. Why? Because I know that what I feel, think or see, may eventually be communicated to all, having seen something, and that's how a big picture is made, based upon a composite of all things we are exposed to, some things sticking to us, some things we forget, and that either helps us to overgeneralize, think more about, be drawn to, or not accept things we are told, as being accurate. It's important to always think for yourself no matter what is said about you.

When Things Don't Jive ...

Different things get you going in life, and what makes you special never forget. It's not until you respond to hate, that you then get used to be mischaracterized to shine light on other characters to further reinforce their thoughts or thinking that they are smart, or able to redirect or misdirect your audience to thinking like them, and that's someone trying to control what people think in a disfavorable way toward me. That's no one's business who I date, who I like, or who I choose to talk to or confide in and get help from. That's a misuse of my identity to reinforce bad identities or characters and make fun of me, in a hurtful way, to encourage non-existent bullying of me. This was when people did not know me, and when not impressed by me, I fixed myself, and worked on myself until I improved. And if your goals are to graduate, get a job, or date again, and by your education, and based on where you are accepted or your goals are, are what gets factored in to their memory banks for judging you, based on where you are headed in life, and hurt you, so that you don't make it in life, and that's not deserved. To be watched and to share as I have improved, and then injure my ability to be loved or well liked. It then becomes a comprehension problem then thinking that everything is about them, and further convincing themselves that what they are doing is deserved.

Causes for Bullying ...

Bullying is a condition of the heart, its another who does not feel good about you, and expresses that distaste toward you, as though you are the cause for their discomforts, as though you have done something wrong, or are doing something wrong, and not living an idealized version of life, suitable for acceptances, whether that changes one another for the best, lets hope so, more often than not, that's what agreeing to disagree means, to keep one another's feelings to themselves, and not to discuss or vent toward one another, how one another feels, as though the other is responsible for curing that condition, if its your own condition, fix it, if its their unhappiness with you, accept it. You haven't lived life, until you feel good about yourself, and until that moment in time, don't expect anyone to support you during a difficult time, not unless they have to, and that's a good time to pick up speed, and to improve your condition, not make things worse for yourself than needs to be, that's how the bullying doesn't stop, that's when bullying serves their interests and their sense of humor, to make a poor example of you to others, and watch you fend for yourself in the world, of others made better, just by looking at you, realizing what they have in life, that you do not. Sometimes, we learn, and sometimes we don't learn, some of us grow, some of us blossom, and some of us stay put, never wander too far from your course in life, there's not much to be found elsewhere, if you haven't already found yourself. Always do what makes you feel good, whether or not that's for public discussion, I think personal routines, habits, exercise schedules, mishaps, likes, or enamourments, is not something you confess to out loud. Its if you can be looked at in a good way, that is how others will continue to see you in life, that's unless proven otherwise, don't expect me to rise to the occasion and model, and be sweet to everyone, I'd rather not, and prefer not to model right now for anyone for that matter. And that's one cause for self-harm, being convinced you are something you are not, or others trying to convince you that you have caused others harm, sexually, or interpersonally, make another feel good, and that lack of acceptance from you, can only be further justified, if you become, sick, suicidal, or mentally ill, giving up in life, and that's not the solution, to claim: "Im mentally ill" to the US Supreme Court, that's when its your responsibility to fix your condition, not give up in life, and if it's a problem that you cannot resolve, unlike incidences when you were able to help others, and others were not bothered by you, it becomes your duty to figure out what's causing you pain, who's causing you pain, and do everything you can to plead with this person to stop hurting you and ruining your life, that's to everyone, who deserves a chance at living life, free of harm, unjust punishments, ridicule, sabotage, unwanted interferences, and capitalization on another's good deeds, to experiment with what it feels like to be special and loved, that's because I am special, and I do not have difficulty being loved in life, I was a keeper and left to respond to the US Supreme Court 2013, and have made it my duty, for others not be put in harm's way, or to assume guilts for the actions of others, political systems for generating interests in perspectives, to view one or the other, as enemy to the interests of all, that was what was done by defacing President Barack Obama, why I did my best to get the people going posting flyers, its what you let happen happens, and its not until you care, do others feel like they've done their part and can move on in life, without fear of being hurt, and that's public safety, sacrificing your life to care for others, and becoming a public figure to help others, not assume blame in life. When there is nothing bad to think about a person, is usually what defines a good person from a bad person, and when there is something bad that comes to mind, looking at a person, that is because something bad about them has been shared, or is known about a person, or rumored to be true about a person, as though having consensual sex is a misconduct in life, as though I am not harmed in the telling or sharing of my private life, outside of relationships, that's how life is, and if another does not value me, because I gave my body to Men who liked me, then that means I will not be attractive to them, and that maybe explains why I am not trusted by Women, not considered a role model to Young Women, and not respected by Men who cherish healthy Women, who they feel are of more value, compared to me, that's attraction, and turn off by stories. There is a such thing as knowing too much about a person. No one needs to know how you shower, no one needs to know if you self-harmed where and why, and no one needs to know why I hear voices, that's not my fault, I stay home, I don't go out, and I don't date. These are things you don't want to think about about a person, its like ripping someones heart out for show. When you have a bad feeling about someone, disconnect, that's plain and simple, and although you may not always be gifted with good feelings that let your mind know what is right and what is wrong, that's for you to be the judge, based on what makes you feel good, or better about yourself in life. That's not selfish, to not be close to anyone, that's protecting your heart, not all are capable of being warm and loving to just anyone, that's also how you get hurt, when someone thinks you are stronger than you are, based on your age, sexuality, demeanor, or look. We are all capable of being harmed, and jaded or not, I gained 50lbs and have been hospitalized 9x with bipolar disillusionment, and that was my struggle in life. To continue to believe in myself anyways, and running everyday was my solution, and working online on my public speaking abilities was a gift inherited, by acceptances without complaint. And building a website was my dream 2013, and its now 2020, 8 years later, and can share what I went through, and how I stopped that habit of giving up, based upon feelings, and accept my condition and disability in life, whether another can rationalize the causes for my condition, be well behaved, and not talk to myself, write, and not make a show of myself, be polite, calm, and even tempered in public, and its voices that feel better when you suffer or appear to embarrass yourself in public, is your tipping point, whether you allow voices to affect you in private or public, and that is why I stay home. In order to be loved, respected and appreciate, its best to talk about yourself, not to talk about others, and let people see things for themselves, whether you are made apart of those good feelings, good insights, whether you provide insights or not, be good. Suicide is not selfish, its condition incurred, from not taking good care of yourself and convincing others not to care about you too, that's pushing love away, that's not accepting people into your life, and keeping yourself isolated, its not okay to punish yourself, and its also not okay to punish those who care about you, and leave earth, like its not a fun place to be! Get a TV, eat some popcorn, make a collage, start a blog, we don't care what you do, just stay alive! Suicide is not a cop out, its not knowing what to do when you don't feel good, and dying is NOT the solution to any amount of difficulties in life, no matter how devastating it is to be connected to, to know stuff, to not know stuff, to be I tune with others, to not be in tune, to have a quiet life, to have a stressful life, to be fulfilled, or not fulfilled, to be important, or not be important, its never too late to stop caring about yourself, and be proud of yourself, its not your fault if you feel that way, and its always important to check in with someone if you do feel that way. Just because its something I experienced before Law School doesn't mean that it's a problem inherent to my story, or a manifestation of something Ive done wrong, or something I don't like about myself, Im plenty smart and talented, a gifted athlete, to find something to do in life that makes me happy. And even if Im not selected for marriage and have a baby, that doesn't give anyone the right to trash me, or make fun of my genes in life, or give them the right to destroy me, and my future life, or give up on my ability to have a child, hurt me, so that my child suffers harm politically. Just because two people cannot be happy with eachother, does not mean that one is not good enough for the other, or that better is being sought, [dont panic in public just report, and get help, if thats the best you can do to figure out whats wrong, and if you need help, they can decide for you, thats being in over your head with issues in life, beyond your scope of expertise], concerning my wellness, and the balance of opinion about me, once respect is lost, all future opportunity is too. That's why respect is earned not given on the basis of who you know, it's a feeling provided.

Personal Update ...

10/26/2020

Just applied and interviewed today with American University "Master of Arts in International Relations." to study "International Negotiations and Conflict." Its a 1-2 year commitment.

Here is a copy of my "Statement of Purpose" for applying, and furthering my education:

"My reason for applying to American University's "International Negotiations and Conflict," [Master of Arts in International Relations], is expand my understand of peace and conflict studies, to become a better writer and blogger online. Once way I have been able to contribute to these professional standards and goals of acceptable content, has been to start my own blog, recording my writings about what it takes to create peace, drafting a "Motion for World Peace" and posting a video of myself and my writings online, to start. That was my first speech written, with no public speaking experience, that was after watching CSPAN over a period of a few months, felt compelled to speak about what issues I found relevant to the cause. I have always wanted to get more involved, attending two Law Schools and graduating from one with a Masters in Law (MSL) in Financial Compliance and Risk Management. I never gave up. Since starting my own blog, and drafting my first book, my website has received a lot of positive attention and feedback online, ranking 19,034 on Alexa in the US and 105,867 worldwide. I have also been selected on Feedspot, recognized as a Top 100 Personal Development and Self-Improvement Blogger, and a Top 50 Blog and Website in Los Angeles. Self-growth has been key to my personal development, along with maintaining sobriety, and staying out of trouble. Focusing on my strengths, not my weaknesses, including being diagnosed with a Learning Disability in College, and being diagnosed as Bipolar in Law School, I have never allowed myself to be limited to those terms in life, and have always identified myself as well, and have continued to set goals for myself in life, that demonstrate that I am capable, if given the opportunity in life, to succeed with the best of them. It was only later in my development, that I encountered difficulties, and when faced with difficulties have always done my best to report and get help, and that is how I have been able to continue to make progress, and be consistent professionally, applying for jobs wherever there were jobs, and have done my best to adapt to changes in the economy, no matter how few jobs were available to Law Students. I still focused on improving in writing skills, by taking a research and writing centered curriculum in legal studies, a Masters in the Science of Laws (equivalent to an LLM for JD Candidates). It wasn't until I became a Member of Brady, that my life changed for good, inheriting more responsibility to represent myself well, as well as the interests of another, in all my endeavors in life, personal, academic, and professional. That's when I first realized that who you are connected to matters, and to not also not feel limited by those arrangements in life, and make the best of my life, as situated, care about the right things in life, and not give up in the middle of controversy. Sometimes non-issues are created when we do care, and with acceptance, for the work done in caring, be free from the burden to care, and this is why when the right people come forward, it makes others feel better, that work is being done, without intruding upon their personal interest to focus on other things in life, not be limited to their individual cares outside of work or school. My academic and career objectives are therefore to create an ideal system of support online, to hold conversations about all issues, faced by people with mental health issues, incurred from caring, to still feel good about themselves and what they care for, not be made to feel bad, or powerless to circumstances outside of their control, and be more readily assisted with tools, that can be learned through a program such as your institution, be spoken to their benefit."

I'll find out in two weeks, wish me luck, until then, will do my best to rest and take it easy. Thank you for following, hope that everyone feels better, and continues to do well, in spite of what I go through. I think this is the best decision for me, so that I can focus my attentions on work that matters to me, and focus on the issues that matter to me, with regards to my health and the health of others, not be limited to tit for tat issues, private, that go public, and work in a positive environment, to dedicate my time and attentions to, away from personal issues, and focus on issues that matter more, wellness. I now understand that when I am not feeling well, that decreases my capacity for helping others, and that occurs when I am not proud of myself, in order to be proud of myself, I have to go back to school and earn another degree, and start my life over again, and hopefully recover from the pain and embarrassment this past year has caused me opening up in private online, and taking away from the general tone of my blog altogether. That's me being in pain in public, which is not my responsibility to discuss out loud. I have therapy tomorrow. This is my next long goal, so that I keep going in life. And not get set back in life, or suffer any more hardships in life, than need be, being known online, by the private records kept, be connected to people injuring my self-esteem and confidences in life and sending me voices, as though I'm supposed to read people I don't know, as though I'm expected to empower who is watching me, to feel empowered, or be controlled by anyone who is not also looking out for the best interests of everyone, only to suit themselves in life, experiment with my condition, and that's not okay, it's time for me to disconnect, and to focus on my schooling or not blog.

Just called Judge Brown and spoke to someone, regarding my case, and described what happened to me recently, to apologize, and was directed to my Department that heard my case, and spoke to someone there, who then told me to contact my Attorney or the Civil Courthouse, and called them and left a voicemail to notify them of what happened to me, and waiting for a call back, Have called the police already several times to inform them of what was occurring, and the FBI told me not to call.

I'm sorry that this happened to me, I'm sorry if what happened changed anyone's opinion of me, I'm sorry if I brought up the past, that's not related to what's happening to me presently, and know that it is not my business to enjoin new people to past people from my life, and misconnect new people to previous issues, concerning my health, when I was suicidal.

Basically:

- (1) Ive decided to stay home for another two years, thats six years in my room working on myself.
- (2) Staying home, so that I can get a job one day, and keep to myself.
- (3) Keeping to myself until voices go into remission, or else go to the hospital to disconnect.
- (4) Applied, and wait two weeks, to see if I can continue my education, be somewhere in life.
- (5) Try to go to at least one AA meeting a week, therapy once a week, and run/powerwalk everyday.
- (6) Not do any volunteer work, or make anymore commitments, or memberships until well.
- (7) Do my best not to describe the pain Im in, the causes for it, and come out of it on my own.
- (8) Not pen pal with any individual people, who are not connected to larger organizations.
- (9) Be a person of trust, not lose trust, due to stupid decisions, or lose privileges in life.
- (10) Continue to report any concerns to the police, or call the courts if I need help making decisions.

When It Comes to Pride ...

When it comes to pride, you have second thoughts about engaging with others in a sexual way, if its not something that makes you feel whole and complete, then it will not be an activity you engage in to feel whole and complete. Its not until you feel whole and complete, that you are readily able to engage with others in a sexual way. Theres power in being attractive, which is a direct reflection of how someone feels about themselves, those are who get jobs, those are who get married, and those are who make others feel good, and better about themselves. Its all about self-care, not sex, not sexuality, but has to do with how you feel about yourself, that is what makes better results for you moving forward in life. Those moments of pride when youre feeling good about yourself, is when you are doing things that make you feel good, and because you feel good you make others feel good. You cannot be a source of empowerment to others, if you don't feel good, and that's where the line is drawn between as influencer, an inspiration, or being a motivating factor for others to better themselves in life. When you have made a mistake in judgment, and when you look stupid, that is because of your choice to open up to others, and that's the risk you take when it comes to reserving your right to privacy, which is important to maintaining your identity, and to feel like yourself in life. Sex is an exchange of emotions, and feelings between two people, who feel at peace with eachother, and make one another feel good inside and out, and is an encouraging factor for self-betterment, and feeling loved. We are not all privileged and well to be in relationships in life, or to have companions, or to keep a Man's undivided attentions, and like all relationships that falter, it all has to do with your physical and mental health, which is so important to maintain, to continue to have faith in yourself and to feel good about yourself, that's a quality about yourself you should pride yourself in maintaining. Then there are mixed emotions, occurring when someone who you love, is not able to make you feel good, or who doesn't make you feel good, that's when there are competing interests at play, where one benefits from having interacted with you, and where you do not benefit from having interacted with someone in private. We are all capable of being loving to whoever provides us with love, that doesn't however mean that we are expected to tolerate all their conditions for love and acceptance of us, that's taking things too far, that's being too demanding, that's not respecting the right to privacy of someone, who was a provider of love and encouragement to another, without be judgmental of them, and when judgment in the negative is passed to all about you, that can impact your self-esteem, your sense of pride, your physical health, and your mental well being, that injures ones ability to adapt, to think clearly, to not feel bothered, and to feel stable, in spite of the obstacles they may have faced, or currently face, when it comes to feeling good about themselves and living a good life. Its by our choices that we come to regret, having been so loving, or so trusting, or so at ease with someone, who took advantage of us being nice to them, and made fun of us in public, as though we were throwing ourselves at them in a sexual way, if what is wanted, is received, and then they hurt you, that's because to them, all they need is to see what youre like, and if they don't get what they want, then they perceive there to be something wrong with you, and that does not give them to right to notify all people, of what they think about you, given their experience and time spent with you. That's not for public scrutiny. If someone is not making you feel good, if your best thinking is off, and if you feel physically ill, that's not accusing them of having harmed you, that's an internal notification of something being wrong or off, I don't need to be loved or connected to anyone to feel safe or good in life, and that's the mistake in thinking that love shelters you from harm, it can actually do the opposite, making you concentrate on one person, instead of focusing on everyone, instead on your blog, and that is how a public speaker suffers mental deterioration, and heartache, that's an unnecessary circumstance to face in life, be put under unwanted pressures in life, to see what one has to say, when they are struggling, I need no forgivenesses in life, I need no empathy, I am a good person, I mean well, and when its time to stop, and make progress in life, I do so. Lifes not all about love, but it is about feeling good, and not making others feel bad about themselves. And that's an unnecessary experiment upon my identity, which in turn produced a negative result, bipolar, auditory delusions, instability, and loss of positive momentum, Im a human being, stop. And this is how someone who did feel good to others, becomes a struggle to understand, why they do not feel good, why they can read, and why I am not physically strong and hear voices.

When Someone is Negative Toward You ...

Step One:

What is the reference being made, what is to be inferred from a comment, and recognize how you have been offended, by a leading deduction made concerning your good character, in defense of themselves, criticize you, and mislabel you an offender, in support of themselves.

Step Two:

Do you know this person, how do you know this person, how do they know you, what information have you shared with them personally, and what information have your shared publicly, identify which facts are being made referenced to, to make what deductions about you? How have you been harmed? That's the first step in reporting to others, you've been harmed, and to reverse the cycle of harm, *do not cause harm to someone harming you.

Step Three:

Whether you like it or not, there will be those who take personal offense to your writing, if you say things in a way, that they cannot relate to, or feel offended by or in defense of others, decide to cause harm to your decision to blog, criticize what your about, and make you seem stupid to others, as though your feelings are stupid, your life is stupid, its not, be strong!

Step Four:

Always be diplomatic. That's the best way forward, during any amount of controversy in life, concerning you doing well, and another not being made apart of your wellness, that's a choice, to not include others in your wellness, and that should only be the case, if they are causing harm to your reputation, or mismanaging your heart and feelings, overexerting control over your well-being, life isn't marriage, you know people, or you don't know people, and no you are not responsible for the feelings of those who decide to not like you, or be appreciative of their time spent with you. Your world is not small, not unless you allow someone to make your world small, and that's how bad connections are made. Learn to let things go, the more tolerant you are, the more generally you speak, the less others will be able to kick you into a box in life, never accept yourself as deserving of harms. At some point you have to stick up for yourself, and say to yourself Im not going to allow this to happen to me. Im not going to allow this person to destroy me, and be important to yourself.

Step Five:

Be sensitive to the insights of all people, past, present, and future. Although you may not be able to undo harms in life, that also does not mean to speak to issues, not directly affecting you, put your heart in the right place in life, and surely things will go better for you, if you put your heart into the wrong things in life, that is how you wind up off course in life, behind. No one truly subjects themselves to being hurt knowingly, its usually something that you find yourself in that you cant get out of, and don't know what to do, to make a situation stop in which you are being harmed, and this is why not to respond to someone who is being aggressive toward you, that is how a fight continues, until they feel good, until they feel reassured, and after many fights, and doing my best to be loving toward someone, that wasn't good enough to please this person, and wasn't good enough for this person to be happy for me, to respect my progress, or value me as a human being, and that's how trust is lost, its not personal. When you are not good enough to make another person happy, its been my experience, that this person will find more happiness in life, on their own, or with another. It is therefore not my responsibility to take care of anyone in life, I cant afford to take care of, and am not willing to subject myself to harsh scrutiny, in a permanent form, via photo and video. That's rushing the process for acceptances in life, that's not waiting for someone to be in the mood to share, that is going by anothers person timing in life, and if youre not into it youre not.

Step Six:

If over the course of a year, you have gone shopping, bought all new clothes, and makeup, and have been working on your self-image, then no, taking nude photos, will make you feel worthless, and everything spent on your personal improvements, a waste of time, energy, and money. That's a feeling that sends you down in life, hard work for nothing, for a worse result. And that's not appropriate to squander the assets of another, and their progress, just to make others feel good about themselves in life, and that's how someone who has improved, gets disrespected in the face of others, who don't value them, the same way they value themselves. And that's how someone who does not value you, convinces you and others, that you are worthless or not of value special, that's being degraded in life. Your life is not meaningless, we all have beautiful lives, we all have feelings, and sometimes things don't work out, that's not a flagrant rejection, that's expectation of acceptances, and being intolerant of the length of time it takes for someone to adjust to a new condition of terms, to accept who the maker of the account is, not being a political figure, or public figure, someone using the identity of another, to draw attentions to themselves in life on social media, who is not a fan of the person. That's being misled in life, to believe that someone is in support of another human being, that is not in support of them, then makes an account, falsely representing themselves as being a supporter. And because he did that to President Trump, he is also doing that to me, for over 7 months. And expecting more love, or a change from me, or acceptance from me, how can I accept someone who is making fun of me in public, why should I subject myself to that treatment?

Step Seven:

Understand the content of conversations with others, although in private, things are kept generally light, that also means to make a good impression online, and be the same loving person you are in private, as you are in public. That discomfort, is a manifestation of anothers unhappiness with you, that need not be spread to the conditions of others, to cause your fans or audience to turn on you in life, as though if that's whats done to you, means that that was appropriate to be done to you, given the pictures sent requested for, and that's how you look wrong, and they feel like they are doing the right thing in life, to ask for more provocative photos from you, then claim they are victim to your condition as suicidal, and that's just things not going right for you in life, because of one persons expressions of hate toward you. That's why not to share stories from your life in which you have been harmed, so that someone new doesn't come into your life, and hurt you in the same way, and cause you sickness, and illness. That's the feeling of everything going well, and then everything not going well. As a public future people have the free time, to read your story assess your whole life, and if brought into your life, do with you as they please or see fit, no one is to be the controller of your destiny in life, and if someone is not rooting for you in life, then don't make them the enemy, criticize.

Conclusion:

I was very nice to this person, I did everything that was asked of me, and that still did not stop this person from flipping out on me, as though I was not being loving enough, kind, even tempered, toward him. Once you insult a person, you cannot expect love from them. That's someone using your material, your photos, to generate a response toward you from others, that's not how respect is made, that's how controversy arises, and that's how embarrassment is caused to someone who has already been harmed and robbed. And no the more you make fun of me and punish me for being harmed, the more you increase my risk for suicide, its not deserved, and eventually you have to stop hurting someone, and allow them to move forward.

I am not in love with anyone at the moment, I am not in a loving relationship with anyone at the moment, and I am not in any serious relationships at the moment, nor having any serious conversations, what has changed is the energy around me, more aggression = conflict, as though Im asking for negative attentions in life, or speaking in a way that offends others. I am always well spoken and clear spoken, and I don't need any lifestyle changes, or more hardships in life, I have lived a hard life, hospitalized 9x bipolar, with two suicide attempts, that means STOP! That means stop hurting me, that means stop making fun of me, and leave things alone! Why Im losing 50lbs.

Worries vs. Reality ...

Sometimes what controls your thinking, ends up ruining your life, always be geared toward positive results in life, not gear your life around negatives or run the risk of creating hardships for others or difficult concepts to comprehend like "unhappiness," that's the difference between luck being on your side in life, and things working out for you, versus worrying what others think, and responding in a way, conducive to their thinking about you. Until ultimately what people think, controls your thinking, that is someone outside of you, who you cannot see, who is watching you, speaks through you, upon you not being able to see them, and by them keeping their thoughts to themselves, be spoken through you, is what makes them feel better, or more reassured in life, that's being led by the thoughts of others. And that is the wrong way to think about life, no one can control you unless you allow them to. Don't let anyone affect you. No one is to be made for use as experiment for deciphering the thoughts of others, Im not a psychic (i.e medium joke), I have faith, and I don't read others, I talk to others and others talk to me, and no we don't talk about problems in life, politics based, that is something later done to my identity, as though solution needs to be provided for my identity, or how I feel, to explain others and their uses of their conversations or treatment of me. This is an example of something that cannot be proven. I speak no differently in private, than I do in public, Im the same person online, that I am in public, and even if in private I get upset, I explain why, Im not someone who gets upset, and complains or blames others, I understand my condition in life, and understand when things are not going well, and no blogging cannot fix my condition.* That is something occurring within me, that has nothing to do with another human being, just like people who feel good, when they are feeling well and doing well in life, not everything is about comradere, being understood, having friends, or dating, some people live independently of others, and that's how most of us solve our own problems in life, not talking about stuff we don't understand, or cannot readily comprehend, or discuss any fears out loud, that cannot be rationalized in life, by how you are treated in life, like its okay to blame people, for others being inspired in life, to live better, do better, or be more successful, that's in everyone best interests. And no a blog is NOT made in competition with the successes of others, who come from an OJ Story, and no Im not sharing my story, to make others be more compassionate towards me, and no I am not speaking and not angry at anyone, that is treating me as less than, simply because I am not rich and successful and social. Who cares. Then there are auditory delusions, that's things that are said, not spoken by you, that you hear, that doesn't sound like you, and is not the way you think, but things said to you, to make you think or try to understand where they are coming from, you cannot rationalize hate, that's by someones exposures in life, identifying you as not being sound of heart and mind, not your fault. We all lose our heads from time to time, you know you best, and the best way to control your thinking, is not to worry what others are thinking, that's others reading you to have an effect on you, and that's a misuse of a human body, for whatever research is being done on me, to figure what about life, as someone who is well spoken, as though Im to be made to speak on behalf of whom? Beyond who I am connected to in life, who is not harmed by me, who I make sense to, and do not communicate to others, things that would make me sick, or not feel well around others, that's why its important to speak from a condition of strength, not weakness, and not to speak to whats bothering you, and shed light upon aspects of life not everyone needs to be exposed to in life, that's not thinking dirty that's not hearing dirty words, and that's not speaking to others in a dirty way, to cause them to have dirty thoughts about life or others. That's not the solution to mental health issues, and no sex and no sensuality, and no femininity feels good to someone who does not like you, is not attracted to you, and who doesn't find you pretty, and that's what being a tomboy is about, not using your femininity to attract people, that's being yourself, and being a strong person, not caring what others think, not bothered by people, not having any enemies in life, not competing with others for attentions, thats being well liked, by Men and Woman, someone who others are not threatened by, and feel smart around, feel good about themselves, and not bothered by the condition of others, harmless. Whats not what people want to hear, is someone upset, especially if anyone does not have compassion for them or who thinks poorly of them, like they are changing their life to accommodate others, or had it not been for those who punished them, they would not be where they are today,* and that's taking credit for the good decisions made by someone in spite of whoever thought they were so entitled to put me down in life, and remove me from all equations in life, as though I ever needed to be factored in or made a negative example of. If that's the case, then I don't need to talk to anyone, I don't need to help anyone, I don't need to have any friends, and I don't need to make any money. No one cares only for themselves anyways.

And that's hearing from me, talking about myself, and expect me to feel good talking about my mental health condition out loud, this is why I keep to myself don't connect with anyone, except on a professional basis, and no that's not having fun in life talking to others, that's earning back your privileges in life, to communicate with others in peace, and just like everyone else who doesn't feel well in life, its hard to talk to people, and to feel well.

When You Can't Fix Your Life ...

That's a gift in life, when you are able to take care of yourself and others, that's when you are living a good life, and gifted with the ability to make others feel well, or reassured. That's an upper hand in life, earned, that's something you have overcome, or been cautious of, success is earned, and it doesn't occur when our defenses are down or by cutting loose in life. When you are able to cut loose and be social, that's also a gift in life you are rewarded with, when you are living a good life, stepping outside of your zone of comfort, to give love or reassurances to another. That's a risk you take with your life and heart, providing comfort to another, or sharing love. Those are private examples, of being loved, and giving love, that's not for blog content, and that's not for public controversy, that's not what makes a good writer, and that's not how trust is made, when your life, becomes a source of entertainment to others, causes you to feel stupid, makes you look stupid, and makes others feel stupid, undervalued, or under appreciated. If you are to ever draw attentions to yourself, it should always be in the positive, is how a good story about life is told, with reservations, with careful thought, with an editor, with permissions, from the LAX Courthouse, Judge called, by visiting the US Supreme Court, and talking to an Attorney who is hired to council you if you are not doing well in life, tell you what you need to do. There is breaking laws, and there are social norms for acceptance, there is breaking laws, and suffering hardships, like doing drugs, and there are breaking laws, and getting trouble in life, such as drinking and driving, and those create misdemeanors, that means because of what you look like, because of where you are, because of where you should be, or not be, is why you get punished, if you are some place unfamiliar, to cut loose in life, or be social, and that's how you get treated like as stranger or up to no good, treated as though you are investigating the health and businesses of others, and think anything is about you, that is how you get treated as an outsider. You can be a quiet inspiration to others, depending on how well you are able to live life, or you can be a source of pain to others, who may not understand you, or think you think things are about you, when its really to do with them, having a problem with you, not liking you, not wanting to be social with you, and rejecting you for no reason, that's thinking you are doing well to attract attentions for others, and that's when your wellness offends others, who don't like you. Some people get looked at and immediately disliked, such as myself, that's if Im alone. Why its not proper to be alone anywhere where there is alcohol if you are a Woman and alone, how you get overcharged, or the DJ gets offended, if you have your headphones on, and what causes one to talk to themselves, is a discomfort, that is when you are somewhere you are not wanted, and overtime it becomes more clear to you that you don't fit in, if you don't feel good somewhere, leave, don't wait until you are told to leave, to realize you are not welcome, or the odd man out. That quiet confidence in others, is in observance of you, whether you light up social around people pretending that everythings okay, what you are like when you are yourself, and for determining how dumb you are, based on how hard you try in life, and whether you can tell if anyone is messing with your head, and feels good about it, without you knowing it. Life doesn't become evil, until you allow for it, and when you wake up, and think things over, if you ever feel offended don't be, that's a manifestation of others feelings and behaviors in life, that causes them to accept you or not accept you, with their defenses up, that's what its like to be treated as an unwelcomed advance, with no advances made in life, that's how Men treat Women they don't respect, or who they think are out to get laid, and that's why you get treated as stupid, out in the world alone. Which is why Im going back to me Ex Aaron, who is an Attorney, not worried about what others think, has been exposed to crime, and a good life, and is still normal, well.

When All Bets Are Off ...

You can't make a good life, out of a hard life, that's when you need to slow down, focus on yourself, what youre doing, and then assume, that everything youre doing in life, is up for others to relate to what they know in life, whether or not they can relate to you, think the same, or know the same information in life. And that's what hurts, for some based on what youre focusing on in life, come to terms with the past easier than most, its when you think of the past as related to your own life, that causes yourself instability, that's not living a good life, and losing a good life in life, because of who you were then, who you were not, and whether the conditions you were in, where to be empathized with, treated as though you are coming on to others too strong for advices in life or reassurances, and that's how you get punished in life, asking for help. -We don't all live by the same jokes in life, nor should anyone die, due to the lack of shared humor amongst us. The issues are either clear to you, or not, and if you don't have a deeper understanding of the past, or now, then don't bring up facts about life, that cause harm to the foundations for thought in others about life. That's viewing things in the negative, that's allowing theories of destruction to overtake, your understandings of life, living life, and what brought success to others, caring for us, building for us, protecting us, and living for us. -When you feel as though you are a person, based on their likes in life, that's when you start assessing your life, for negatives, to figure out what's wrong with you and why. Don't cause others to think poorly of you, you are not responsible for the feelings of others, especially those who have harmed you in life, turned on you, not believed in you, or who thought less of you. -There will always be those trying to make another example of someone who had it all then lost it all a house and a car. Never trust anyone who needs something from you in order to love you, that's a relationship built upon power, power to feel smarter than, power to know, and with power to disempower you, knowing your strengths, your weaknesses, then convince you or others that you're a waste of time, space, and energy, and that's what causes one to lose a good life, and that's how a good life turns into a bad life, it's all based on your perception of life. -They will always eventually lighten up or try to be nice to you, or come back into your life. That's when they start to see the positive, with you no longer in their lives. That's by doing what they thought was the right thing to do, to play victim, to ask for photos, to then expose you to the world in an offensive way, to cause others to feel like victims to your exposures private. That's after 4 years of staying in my room writing, and sleeping, being at peace, alone in life. -There are no warm welcomes to life, not especially if others think you are the weakest link, and that's how death is caused, when you cause harm to someone who means well, just for a reaction from others, or to generate a reaction with them, and cause me suicide, that's trying to control a situation that is under control, and shining light upon other happenings in life using my life as an example, treat me as the bad influence, a bad cause, worthless, like no one cares about me. -That's reaching out for help and being rejected in life, that's not what you go to Law School for, to correct the past, to shine light on later insights, to repair a reputation, or to make a better life for yourself, you're either in a profession with direct honesty, attack the issues when it comes to your life, and not attack or assume the issue that others have with you. -You don't look bad, until you feel bad, and if you feel bad, and poorly represent yourself, and lose sympathies in life, that's others happiness being well without you, and not feeling sorry for you in life, and not wanting to help you in life, reject you, your concerns, or your efforts to help make the world a better place, by living a good life. -When others experiment with your life, that causes bad luck to you, everyone who loves you, and to everyone who did care about you, results in a loss of faith, some are too old to fight, too old to care, too old to try harder, and too old to correct, too old to fix the past, and too old to explain what living is for in harmony, and what loving is for, to be yourself and shine for another in life. That's when someone doesn't have anything to lose, and you have everything to lose. Your freedoms, your trusts, your fans, your progress, your livelihood, your abilities, and your resilience to stresses in life, to maintain value, under attack by others, as to your credibility. -Accept that those who don't know you, may not understand your struggles or pressures in life, to make a good life out of a bad life, or to make a beautiful life, in spite of what harms you have suffered in life, no matter how vague. Being hospitalized is not one of them, that's not from a private understanding of the issues held or thought about, that's not feeling well without people in your life, and that's a normal chemical imbalance to experience in life, everyone well when you're not feeling well, and not knowing why, that is why some people become sober, to do well in life, to live a better life, and to not be a burden to others, maintain abilities in life. -And that's when all bets are off, and I join IMDb, that's for the sake of accountability, not making things about someone who later comes to be a controversial figure, such as me, not met with total acceptance, vs to be considered underground, without likes, and without others believing in the caliber of my work, nor recognize how special my stats are, or how well earned. That's someone testing your human condition in life, not caring if you don't feel well, not caring if you don't look well, not caring if your hairs falling out, and you have to die your hair dark brown, and today being the first day, my hair is not falling out in my brush, kind of stress in life. -And that's why I challenged myself, got registered on Alexa and Certified, became a Member of Brady, joined OFA Fellows, made Pages on Facebook, ran everyday out and about in the Community, reported to LAPD all conditions unstable or to determine whether I needed to be hospitalized based upon my thoughts or my condition share all the time, since 2013. That instability is permanent, and the cause for it are losses, whether that's a broken friendship, a broken relationship, not hearing from someone, being ignored, being let go, and that all has to do with your health, are you having fun in life and why, should they care about you why or why not, are you being social, if not why, do you have skills for the job, or do you not have all the skills. And that's why my Company did well ranked 19,211, because I registered my Company and hashtags with The State of California, paperwork completed by LegalZoom. That's to protect myself from harm, put my life in jeopardy, should I fail to represent myself or others well, to stick to my company objective to be a "publishing corporation" and to do my best to publish my work with pride to the best of my ability, and in a style that matches the quality of my writing, to only describe myself as my education does, that's not pretending to be someone you are not, that's actively taking steps, to check in with others, whether or not you are punished in life, or found to be to blame, for the struggles others encounter when it comes to acceptances in life. That's not creating problems for others, that's staying home, with no boyfriend and no social life, and no money except for cigarettes and food daily, that's not wasting money, that's not pretending I'm more professional than I am, and that's taking responsibility for myself, and respond as best I can, not to create waves, and that's is how you determine responsibility, and that's what connections are for, building trust, not for making fun of people or taking advantage of them in private, to see what they are like when their guard is done, and that's an example of an unwanted connection seeing through your lens of understanding, and while feeling good about yourself, and with viewing everyone else's progress, hurt you as unstable. That's me coming forward and not tolerating being blamed for others misunderstandings about the use of my character to distort the perceptions of others, and that is why I'm uptight now, why I'm not friendly now, why I'm not loving now, why I don't take photos, and why I don't video. Why because when I was nice, everyone made fun of me, and this is my stand against bullying. -And that's how others get strength in life, to then compete with you, to put you down, to destroy you, to hurt you and your family, I don't sit and watch life happen, I actually go out into the world and make sure everything is okay, that's not making $hit up, and that's not making $hit happen, and that's not what life is for, stirring your own emotions, stirring the emotions of others, and making me look like I'm a fraud, or don't set a good example or be situated to barely be able to live life myself, you are who are you criticize in life. -And in the face of aggravation, thankfully I am doing well in spite of becoming suicidal living life anyways, whether I sounded clear, whether I sounded positive, and whether or not I got in trouble explained everything, in order to fix what was going wrong, why people separate. Hurting someone's ability to speak, is not seeing the value in their education or respecting what they have been through, not wanting to hear their story, to preserve whose conditions in life, people died, because I did not launch, my website was not made in time, and then we got COVID. That's the order of life, you are either well and apart of life when things are going well, and if you have an idea that threatens the momentum of others in life, then you get ignored and punished, and that's how one become suicidal, in a make believe fight, gone public: voices.

About Death and Dying: Speak up or forever hold your peace. Be helpful or don't speak at all.

"I am participating in the Writing Contest: Scare Your Readers (Seriously)." [1]

Scrolling through accounts whether that's on a dating app, or socially on messenger, can be a nerve wracking experience, finding someone as interested in talking to you, as you openly share your life to another, for acceptances, just for a reply, and that's how things go started, this was 2017. My routine at the time was learning how to blog, my cousin suggested Shareasale, and so I joined just to add banners to my website. Coincidentally later in life, a banner was removed from my website, then hired a Sober Coach in Florida, who my Mom did not approve of, for people in sobriety. What is beautiful? Don't let your life pass you by without trying things at least once, would be my suggesting, not the biggest risk taker, but someone who when convinced $hit has hit the fan, does everything possible to make things better. I appreciate my life, I work hard. In an apartment in Marina Del Rey, with seals barking at night "wow you have a lot of wildlife around you" my Best Friend told me, after picking up her and her older Sister from the Airport, after visiting their Father in jail, I was 3rd in my Class at the time, our first course was in Wrongful Death, Introduction to Legal Studies, my Professor exclaimed "Poor Farah" when Michael Jackson was all over the news pronounced dead, I used to go to Neverland as an adolescent, and have one polaroid saved from the Arcade photo booth, we were in Middle School at the time, I remember that top, I got one in yellow and one in blue, both V necks, from Ron Herman, she took the "wife beater" tank top, with a hologram picture girly in black, on the front, I saw in a picture with her Aunt. "Do you guys want to stay in the Kids rooms" and we said no, and they put us in the Guest Cottage across the driveway from the main house, a chef cooked for us each day, whatever we wanted to eat, he made. One year I was gifted a box of CDs and a yellow jeep boombox. He lived on a Ranch, complete with a carnival, free candy, a movie theater, a zoo, a waterpark of towers you complete with waterguns, and a train that started at the train station just North of the house, up a hill, we drove mini Cadillac Golf Carts up to, with sound systems, all his music, and took the Train to the Zoo, or to the Carnival, it was all attached, with one road connecting it all. -There will be things in life you never talk about, until something bad happens, and when something bad happens, either think about, or disassociate yourself from moments in life, when you had a good experience, where others had a bad experience. That makes a memorable experience, complicated. The types of failures in care, that haunt others, just thinking about, as though we are supposed to accept our own discomforts in life, and be treated well or not well, based upon who our connections are in life. When memories, no longer become good stories to tell, then it's a matter of when you find out. There's an App, I think is named after a smoke shop on the corner of your Moms Street, Tinder. And that's when you begin to think, maybes in life. That's after you get voices hitting your head into a wall until it bled, something obvious to everyone, except you, the street name and business. The more you think about, or question others, the worse things get. When sympathy of you is lost, is when you become an unwanted connection in life, and the stories made of you afterward, are to present you to the world, as a joke, when a Man plays victim to a Woman's love, after I wrote my thesis distributed online on my website. That's a Man trying to represent a Women's issue, then kicking you out of an equation in life, using your identity to shed light upon other issues. Explain what a good life is and what a good life looks like and what a good life feels like, and then treats you as though you don't have a good life, that's not being included in life, or credited, that's being put down in life, and should you broach the topic of anything in life, then you get treated as though you know everything. How public do you need to be and to what caliber? -How well do you need to know a person, in order, to be nice to them, some feel entitled to more in life, as though you have something that your not sharing? It was after being hurt, I published my Book, figured it was best to prove my value, I don't keep any secrets in life, I'm an open book. I don't deserve to be treated as prisoner to anyone's questions about life, so threatened. That book was only sent to The US Supreme Court and my Best Friend, before Kate Spade died, then Justice Ginsberg died. That's prying expecting answers from someone, prepared or not to present or to speak about death and dying, and those losses are irrecoverable. It then doesn't matter how big I am in life. What can restore faith in companies who cared about everyone, and that hurts the pride of what makes a person special, not by the secrets they keep (voices) known, or the book they have spent thousands of dollars on writing and editing over the years, beginning after the first fire, that was my response, in a life threatening situation, to try harder, and make the most of life, and launched a website. What's their version of peace may not be your peace. And that's what a fight looks like, over whose victim to who, and who got wrongfully taken advantage of for the purposes of making another feel better about himself. That's wrong to do, that's wrong to hurt someone in private to hurt them in public, what purpose does that serve? That only caused me harm, physical pain, and embarrassment. I've never meant to hurt anyone I was in a loving relationship. If that was what was asked of me, that was for his pleasure not mine. Made to do. And that ruined my life story. I've never had a bad experience with a Man in life who publicly shamed me, or presented me to the public as someone I am not. I'm shy, it's usually the Man who hits on me, not vice versa. I can do better, I will do better, and I will not tolerate, anyone putting me down in life, to make a comparison of me to someone famous. And that's how someone becomes a source of pain to you in life, someone who you knew, who no longer loves you, and only seeks to harm you. It's been a living nightmare, an unwanted aggravation in life. Enough is enough. That's not funny to cause me suicide, to pleasure yourself in whatever humors in life you find funny, that's not okay! -I got lice in Kindergarten and then we got quilts for our head to nap on the rectangle carpets stacked on the bookshelf, we took naps in Kindergarten, how we were accommodated. I remember my Mom picking lice out of my hair, with a comb, at 555 Barrington, in her apartment, my Parents separated when I was 5, that was what the sandbox was for, built on the other end of our house, and that's how we met Nicole Brown Simpson, playing outside, she asked my Brother if he "had a Sister," and that's when I met Sydney under a Magnolia Tree, with a wooden swing, and yellow wire, she was 3 and I was 4. What's scary is being looked into in life, that you never get comfortable with, the van driving by your driveway at night, the guys pulling over to talk to you in the street asking you "where OJ's house is," that's when you don't talk to strangers, generally more excited about you than you are about them, that's people looking into your life, without you looking into the lives of others, and then we made a Lemonade stand, my idea, made the lemonade, and my Best Friend and Sister were featured on the cover of People Magazine, that was being positive to a crowd. That's having a good heart about things, and being sheltered from the times, that's being a professional best friend, keeping their best interests at heart, unfortunately no one is there for me during tough times, no one is around if I do drugs, no one can console me if I drink, and no one can stop me if I become suicidal, unless I call 911, and talk things over with a police officer, and not keep things to myself, that's living life. The moral of the story is be compassionate, whether or not you understand others, and whether or not you think they're dysfunctional life, is the cause of others hardships or abilities to grow, that's living a separate life, and getting a crowd going, being myself. But that also cannot stop others from telling you how it is, or treating you like a poor investment, or a problem, if I want to stop gun violence, I very well will do everything possible I can, to help generate an interest in caring about a subject when no one else cares, and make it my business to care, the very issue, he was put in jail for, committing. Don't search my home, looking for a gun, and then search my Instagram, with a hole in my wall made with my head, after seeing my Ex in Yorba Linda the night before, having received a call "from someone who cares" and use my line stated to a friend in college to tell his boyfriend when I hid his gun in a suitcase. Because he was shouting at her calling her a "cokehead whore" and was scared and showed me his gun and she didn't know what to do with it, that's being a good friend. Everyone will come to know your life, and remember anything that pleases them, then treat you as though you cause harm to others, and play hero. That's the risk they take, in turning on me in life, and not include me even if things start going right for me in life, that's something they don't care about. Like I deserve to be harmed not diplomatic. Becoming a Member of Brady was not controversial to me, but maybe to others, like Im someone who backs out, if not successful as though Im trying to hide my connections to causes I support. If you dont support me, thats not supporting me, that does not affect anyone who I support by law as member to or by job, and that's what a banner installed at AFM Film Festival is like, by my Ex-Boss, for her Film, featured with Balloons a poster she made me, with a car, I watched my first day of work. And a banner was removed from my Website. And that's how people T things up in life, to make you speak, first (1) make you look guilty or suspect (2) create a change you must respond to (3) make you feel guilty whether or not you are and (4) watch you put the pieces together, as though you are intended to be a joke as someone (5) who puts themselves out in life and then (6) be treated like a problem then (7) difficult to understand or accept, treat as combative or a loss to others, that's not being a "winner" in life. Her life story = a Pulitzer Prize.

Joining a New Profession ...

If you don't know whos here, and you don't know what the scene is like, and if you don't understand whos doing well and why, then do your best to figure out how to integrate oneself within a sub-section of a profession, called Technology. You may not be a startup, you may not have pitchable concepts, and you may have no money, but that doesn't mean that you have been discriminated, on the basis, for your direction in life, judged as someone knowing, or who has yet to figure out the bases for deductions in life, and assume that was because you have done something wrong, or guilty, made fun of as deserved, as having not been smart, or having not done well when everyone else was happy and doing well with jobs. That's the price for participation in life, who you open up to, where, and at what point in your life, you decide to open up and about what, matters. Don't worry too much about where peoples ideas came from, and make sure that you yourself have the fundamentals down, in terms of being yourself, being nice to everyone, being careful about touchy subjects, and do your best to stay well. What feels good to others, is to not be connected to you, not worried about you, not intimidated by you, not responsible for you, without reason to not trust you in life, why its important to be accountable, to continue your education, and not be treated as someone who looks good but has no idea what theyre doing in life, only engage in something you have practice in speaking publicly. That's not the game, that's everyone comparing a human being to beloved characters in movies, to say one was inspired, or behaves like, or is like, because one is that way, or thinks one is special in that way, the more you try to assert yourself as unique, the more you get treated as though you do not value and appreciate where you came from, or realize how hard your parents work to provide for you and support you, that's an investment, and so should one invest in their own well being. There is no automatic acceptances of you in life, and even if youre good at something, that doesn't mean youre automatically going to feel good, and that's where the audience matters, you only go as far up, as your audience feels, and they cannot thrive or appear well if they feel underappreciated, or not valued, that is trusting professionals, with symbolization and creation of concepts, that have been tested to keep others feeling good and excited about life, not all connect on a basis created by someone viewed as a failure, with mental health issues, or an addict, we cant all be treated as smart, so long as you do not partake in the whos smart whos not part of life, just always base your thinking on what makes others feel well, better about themselves, not just focus on what stands out to you, bothers you, or may makes sense to others but not you. That's banter, is not being up top anywhere, and those signals are to everyone not just me, there is no inner agency in life of communications between people, that propels one person or the other to feel ahead of others in life, that's not how success works, its based on your ability to be reliable, and to have proven yourself worthy of an opinion in life, and whether you do a good job at protecting others from harm, or whether you say things that expose fundamentals of other peoples thinking, that may or may not make everyone feel good said out loud, that's not trusting the private communications of others, and judging someone based upon their social skills. Learn to leave people alone, I don't have anything in life that anyone doesn't have in life, we all have the internet, we all have an opportunity to share, and we all have an opportunity to read. Just because one is successful, doesn't mean that they have everything in life figured out, and doesn't mean that one thinks about life too much, usually what is needed to be said is said to clarify issues, to make things better, so others don't become defensive, so no one feels bad.

You Can't Get Far If You ...

You can't get far is you have positive experiences with others, then later question those interactions, with sudden worry for what others think, just be yourself. No one thinks that hard about others, especially while living life, which is best lived with acceptances for one or the other, theres no need to be hostile toward people, and its important not to blame people for anyones unhappiness in life.

You can't get far being too critical of others, that only makes you seem like you think your above another, or as though someone needs to be corrected, you will always be based on your demonstration of being kind to others, in order to be met with kindness in return. Certain things you keep to yourself in life, those mini happy moments, are when you are light hearted, that neverending pain, is not headed in the right direction, needs to lighten up, not isolate.

You can't get far worrying what other people think. Who cares if you're the smallest person in the room, the least positive, with the most problems, that's your life live it, so be it, etc move on. You cannot outsmart the system of peace, which requires that you be respectful of others, their privacy, and not share those moments out loud, subject those you know to vulnerabilities in life. And if you've been punished, that's that something about you that's disappointing to others, how you respond under stress, or after relapsing, self-harm (2017). And that's another form of rejection you'll face in life, people being nice to you, then feeling wronged by you. That's them taking the time to speak to you, then be turned off, and don't hear from them. That's sharing too much, or being too upfront, if something doesn't feel right, then maybe that's why you are being judged, based on the decisions you make in life, or thinking of working for whom and why, that's another form of loss of respect that occurs, your career direction.

You cant get far in life mentioning others, sure at the time you may be okay with sharing a story that impacted your decision making and how you feel about yourself, its not a good story unless and until you get to a positive place in life, otherwise, no one understands if your not happy and doing well prospering, as though you hold resentments, or still think about the past. That is how others treat you like a class action joke, like you're a cause of hardship to the lives of others, I think people are doing great, and many are positive and successful. I just think its an unwanted connection if you are not doing well in life, not successful, and that also doesn't mean it's a wanted connection if you later do well in life, you have to be proud of yourself. You cannot expect anyone to be proud of you, that's expecting others to care, or speak positively of you, once they know you are bipolar or have self-harmed, then that's the condition caused. To show that you're a weak person, or to show that you have temper, or to show that you have trouble with men or women or identifying yourself in life as beautiful, that's how you get picked apart in life. Whether you are basing your wellness on the wellness of others, or whether you are doing well when others may not be doing well. Ive been working on myself, and no matter what phase in my thinking and thought development I was in, eventually I started writing.

The More You Talk About the Past ...

The more you talk about the past the angrier people get, that's people not in your life, judging you in the negative by who is in your life, or by what you have to offer work wise, of value. Understanding another's past will not provide you with solution to your problems in life, that's how one's defenses become unnecessarily hurt, that's a misunderstanding, talking $hit about someone, ie. Me. There will always be people not happy with you, and that's always a disappointment that no matter how well you're doing in life, you're not good enough to enter the next phase of life, ie. The work force.

You can have everything in life, and still become sick mental health wise, you're only human, and some are not fit for experiments to find out more about someone, or to connect to control, that's mismanagement of my body and mind as connected to another, who then becomes angry with me, if I get tired, we are not machines, for energizing a man up, I can be positive, but we all get hurt, and tired, don't take it personally. I do a lot of manual labor, trying each day and thinking using my mind, to create work of value for interpretation, therefore it's not necessary to hurt my progress, or worsen my condition, as though I have it all in life, or lead a better life than others, I get hurt too, I get in trouble too, I get rejected too, I can't get a job too, I have trouble making friends, I don't have a companion, we all want love and acceptance, don't abuse people's vulnerabilities in life, to change them into something else, someone who doesn't feel good to others.

It's not plentiful health, if you hurt someone's self-esteem, and make fun of their condition, that can result in losses of faith, loss of positive momentum, and failure to live up to what's expected of me professionalism, that's being in control of my emotions, and still performing anyways. And that's why they think it's okay to hurt me, because I write everyday, that's my commitment to myself to work that hard everyday, and just like anything else well made, things can fall apart and you can lose everything in life, beyond money, etc. I have lived a great life, a few relapses, but the majority of my time, I've spent writing, and managing my writings, and working on myself, whether that's losing weight, keep track of my thoughts, my progress, and my face, noticing changes or improvements, with exercise. -If it looks easy, they think that's a privilege not that's by education earned, and ability to talk about life in a way that makes sense to others.

Anything painful from the past if talked about, only makes me feel worse, that doesn't make things better, that's how things become painful, when someone is trying to figure you out, high energy, confident, and you lose energy, lose confidence, that's going from feeling well around others, to not feeling well around others, and it's directly associated to your interactions in life, and how others make you feel talking to you.

All fighting causes a slow down, causes one to reflect on their thoughts, and to continue to have faith, no matter how painful life gets, we can improve, but that doesn't mean will be accepted, not unless you feel good about yourself, and rise to the occasion, of applying for jobs, interviewing well, and carry a potential in life, to do well, and to succeed at what you put your mind to, that's when there is nothing wrong with you, once you have problems, or don't feel good about yourself that's how you get rejected in life. Just be patient. Don't fight, don't self-harm, and don't get mad at others, that only makes pain worse, the more you let go and center yourself, the less you feel disempowered in life, why it's important not to talk about the past, unless you have something positive to say about your understanding of life, if what you have to say is not viewed in the positive, that can cause you sickness, worrying what other people think.

No one has it easy in life, we all have to work hard, and just because one person doesn't feel good about themselves, does not mean they are not a good person, there are so many things to do with your life, than put yourself down, or lend insights that cause others to think less of you. Life's not a popularity contest, you can set yourself up in life, and expect to live a perfect life by physics, or equations, that's too many rules, that's being too hard on yourself, and if that's not your reality, then don't think that way.

There's no reason to not be a positive person, happy with yourself, being alive, and to continue trying in life. For example, I read books, I go running everyday, and I blog each day, that's my routine, and that includes reporting my condition to the police, when I'm not feeling well, or giving up in life.

It's usually a good story, that makes people feel good, that's a cure, when a cure is made, it's to provide others with reassurances in life, and that is a solution that makes everyone feel better, to watch people succeed in life, positive. It's those who are successful, who challenged themselves to work day in and day out, and create a life for themselves and others, that's being a caretaker. That doesn't mean that everything will make sense, that's not how to cure discomforts in life, a requirement to think the same, feel the same, and talk about problems. That's only for therapeutic settings, in which everyone is told not to be judgmental accepting of one another, as well as keep confidential, ones experiences in life, in therapy or AA setting, that means their shares, their identities, their problems, that's not how to judge people, by whats wrong with them, and think that how they feel is based upon something known, figure out. That's a sore misuse of analysis, about a person, to provide what solution? To hate? #stophate #stopsuicide. -If you cant accept someone the way they are, that's something to do with you, it is never required, for anyone to accept shame, and blames in life, or get hurt, so another does not feel guilty, or look like theyre in the wrong. That's sending me to the hospital, everytime theres a loss, as though everyone feels better without me, or feels better knowing Im in the hospital.

The stopping point to thinking negatively about oneself as it relates to how others feel about you, or how you think they feel about you, is when you feel sick, trying to understand others, always view things in the positive, the less you talk about the negative ramifications of your poor performance professionally, the less responsibility others will take in life, when it comes to your health, which then gets reinforced by negatives, to make your condition worsen, not feel well, until you feel broken, until you give up in life, and thats no way to live life, everyone competing with one another over who has it better in life, who cares, success is not about that and lifes not a competition, everyone lives separate lives, its not important to connect, when life gets difficult, that causes me pain,

Thats the difference between living a better life, or becoming worse off. Thats not a win win situation, thats others thinking you have it good in life, and not feeling sorry for you, there comes a point in your life, where you have to keep going and moving forward, when you cant stop to think about the past, and when talking about everytime youve felt hurt in life, doesnt make things better now. And if others think youre up, the quicker you get put down in life, to see what you can withstand, to determine how strong you are, to see what you can endure, test your ability to live life, and thats an unnecessary use of force to punish someone in public.

The Ability to Step Away is Key ...

Whatever you do, don't draw attentions, or expect attentions, when you are not feeling well, how my Pinterest went from 66k to 25k, its how you feel, that affects others. Everyone has their own lives to live, and while you may have been through some challenging stuff in life, its not something others need to process or comprehend, be aware of their feelings too, no one wants to feel sad, disappointed, powerless, or get hurt and not feel good, that's how I got sick and lost momentum too, that's being made fun of online, until I don't feel well, and don't maintain stability, that affects everyone, how they feel, how they progress, what they think, and its that disappointment, that becomes painful, not your fault. This is why addicts are such a let down, not only do they hurt themselves and abuse substances, and become a failure in life, then they feel heavy to everyone else, as connected, a sad subject. If youre a woman be a woman, selfies are an okay realization of ones own beauty, sometimes you need a visual representation of yourself, in order to make things better for others. That's them hearing from you, but not getting to see you, for some its by what you look like that lets them know whether to accept you into their lives or not, that's recovery, make sure to look well, that's the goal in life, not to get sick and age fast, pace yourself in life, there is no reason to live a fast life for no reason, get help. That being said. Either be a team player in life, and remember whos important to you, or waste time people pleasing, or being misled by others feelings in life, its not okay to send provocative photos, that's if your feeling good, follow your instincts, if your instincts do not permit for sharing what you look like, that much should be respected of you, one can only handle so much abuse and threats, as though its my love that's required for another to feel good, what about me? Don't forget to think about the person, just because one is successful online, does not mean that everything is going to work out for me in life, and that's a sad fact about life, you have to continue doing well, so opportunities arise for you, or doors close on you, if you are not doing well in life, that is how you get ignored, and miss chances in life, that is someone not having faith in you, not seeing your potential, and only accepting you if your top notch, and well. This is why not to divulge your past or share too much information when applying for jobs, just state the positives. Working toward an expungement of my record, why I am being ignored, or rejected from jobs, and because I don't have enough recent work experience to qualify for a paid position at a law firm, work with an Attorney. Going to Law School, does not mean that your reliable, its your health that matters. And if you cant stay well without a job, then that is why your chances decrease applying for jobs. Just stay positive. You can overcome any conditions you set your mind to. Im an example of someone who has worked hard, but doesn't maintain wellness, but performs well under pressure, that's just me, maybe not prepared for everything in life, or able to read others and say no in life, that's just me, accepting of all people, fearless. Keep a schedule in life. Its when you fall off schedule, stop goal setting, then you have to start your recovery all over again. Stepping away is key to caring for someone with addiction, at your own discretion try to be supportive, it is a painful subject, what causes mental health issues, or substance use and abuse, it's a path in life, traveled by the few physically able to tolerate and manage themselves under substances, and some of us get tired, feel pain, unhappy with ourselves, feel worse.

Personal Update ...

10/24/2020

Have not been feeling well, recently, not my usual self enthusiastic about life, tackling my day in good spirits, but recently have fallen under a spell, thinking wise, when you don't feel well, because youre thinking about whats wrong with you too much, and that's playing doctor on yourself, to analyze your thinking, or subject others to analyze your thinking. If Im not feeling well, means that my thinking is off, and not my usual positive self, upbeat in life, happy. I know that I have to continue trying in order to make my life better, and blogging has been one way to have a life of my own, besides sleeping and reading books, an doing internships. Work is work, it doesn't matter where you are in life, paid, unpaid, funded, alone, among others, the same risks apply to your own work settings, to pace yourself, continue learning, meet requirements, research requirements, and broaden your skill set. My Mom approved of a life coaching program, which Im going to apply to, after I finish a certificate in Public Health Thinking Systems. That actually really made me feel better, to hear from someone else whats going on, and being taught what to look for, or sound like, effectively communicate in a positive way.

Love is a Quality About You ...

You either have what it takes to be loved, individually by someone, or all, or you don't. And if you don't, that just means that you are still working on yourself, not opening up to anyone at the moment. Everyone seems to be infatuated with seeing the other side of people, what they are like in love, what they are like when upset, or what they are like when bipolar, always curious to see how things happen, without accepting things as is. In order to enjoy life, its not necessary to experiment with the emotions of others, to generate different reactions from them, not unless that's based off of how you feel, not respond to someone, or solicit for attentions, and then ignore someone, we cant all be that forgiving of each other, and most of us move on once tired, by any amount of attentions, or too much attention, no one wants to be controlled in life, that inner stability that's you, either gets along well with others, or does not.

The less comfortable you are with yourself, the more difficult it will be for another to accept you, not see you as genuine, not see you as of value, only see you for your faults in life, or previous appearances in life, if unimpressive to most, or pathetic. Its not a waste of time, experimenting with your smarts, or sharing how you feel, and if things change, always question for what reasons are you not yourself, what is causing you unhappiness, and whether you are doing things for attentions or likes, and ask yourself why, why do you need likes, why do you need acceptances, in order to become successful, wheres the progress in that.

Social acceptance goes a long way in life, its not something taught to you, you either make friends easily in life, maintain friendships, or you find difficulties being social, when not happy with yourself, or proud of yourself, it can feel like a risk putting yourself out there in life, but you have to continue trying hard in life, even if it makes you feel uncomfortable to be anywhere public for social purposes, to be out and about.

When it comes to love, don't take those leaps of faith, especially if you are a girl, solicit for attentions from any man you admire for that fact, its most likely to be viewed as unwanted attentions, or infatuations, mental illness, not pride. We are not all blessed with connections and a social life, and if you are feeling desperate or don't know who to love, don't just love whoever loves you, those may be your biggest regrets in life, not interactions you are later proud of. And the more you put yourself out there in life, and less good others are made to feel by you, that is how you get hurt, by how they feel about you. That's someone not being sure of you, such as pen pals, if you have to try hard for acceptances or love, or just to make conversation in life there will be no later point in time, of them being proud of you, not if they weren't sure of you to begin with, that's not how love is made, love is made when someone accepts you totally at the get go, with a genuine smile, and excitement to be around you, without a dull thought in mind, or hesitancy, willing to love you, and accepts you the way they are, openly giving their heart to you, that's a good man in life. And sometimes you have to earn acceptances from Men, the ones you have to win over in life, can find better, trust me.

We all have dark sides, which are merely moments in life, that one night stand, that trip to club dressed up, that march the 8th time for no reason, your heart will take you places in life, and sometimes the places your heart takes you in life, does not send reassuring signals back to whomever is connected to you, that's taking risks in life, and while it may be fun to Tweet, learn how to use the many thousands of word processing systems, for work that is of value to you, its what we develop in private, which upon sharing, becomes of value to others, to read, and spend the time invested in trying to understand your writing, or figure out what you are trying to say. Then there are the brainiacs that just scan highlight and circle, and find problems, expecting more depth or explanation for a thought, and this is how you raise your own standards in life, by comfort, by your comfort, and by the comfort of others speak. You get less out there overtime, and more methodical as you go, and veer off course from time to time, when it comes to being commercially acceptable, in the proper formats, easy on the eyes.

So don't lose faith, forgive yourself for your drinking years, forgive yourself if you ever tried drugs #dontdodrugs, and be proud of yourself when you are able to fix your feelings on your own without the need to substances such as drugs or alcohol, to take you away from what you are doing in life, functioning, and cause yourself dysfunction in life, that's not the way to smart.

Smart is a general acceptance of all matters without fear, it's the ability to consistently and continuously observe life as it unfolds, for you and others, without losing your own sense of control in life, over what you are doing, how you are feeling, and stay motivated in life, to continue making progress, why? Because someone smart knows that they are relied upon, whether that is told to them directly or not, its when you fail, that you become a problem to others, an uncomfortable subject, and it will not be until you become a success in life, that you will recognize the successes of others, and feel apart of life, as though you are living in a way, that mirrors what is expected of you, not misled by your fears or worries, or others responses and reactions toward you, when someone is quiet around you, that's them figuring out life, and when someone shines, that is them being proud of themselves, not needing you in life. And that's being liked, they need you, then like a soldier their off, putting themselves together in life. We sometimes have that affect on people, they see your hand, and create a hand in life for themselves, thinking beyond their problems, not feeling sorry for themselves, feel more capable in life. That's a positive comparison that occurs, when someone sees more than you.

Social Media: How to Avoid Self-Harm ...

Although you may protected by "government censorship," The First Amendment, and Freedom of Expression on Social Media, does not protect those who engage in: hate, obscenity, misinformation, and harassment. [1] So while it may be fun to be opinionated, and engage in commentaries regarding public figures, or yourself for that matter, mention with precaution.

Here are some helpful tips, while sharing your opinions out loud:

- There is a way of speaking about controversy, that doesn't offend the senses, and that occurs when you stay abreast of what the issues are, do the research, and from an educated standpoint, present information in a way that enlightens others, without challenging their own condition, or feelings about the past, or present circumstances, be offended by what you have to say, that's building tolerance on both ends.

- Its important not to say thing in the negative, that is with blames, being obnoxious, too confident, insensitive, without detail, in the defensive, without alluding to whats working when discussing our own viewpoint, without telling people how to think allowing people to think for themselves, its when someone does not agree with you, or does not understand you, or feels threatened by your opinions on matters, whos interests are not served by your expressions in life, that entice the reverse feeling onto yourself, met with backlash, or intense feelings as expressed by others toward you, that's learning how to avoid a fight online, and that's not what Social Media is for.
- There is a such thing called peace, and it starts with being at peace with yourself. Be mindful that although you may feel your story is special, and although you may feel like you've been through a lot, there will be others too who have lived through worse, or who have lived better lives, who may or may not relate to you, or find you interesting, knowing that, its in your best interests to avoid excitement, or draw too much attention to yourself, not to overpromote yourself, or your interests in life, or who you support, it then becomes a matter of maintaining internal integrity, with regards to presentation of your thoughts, what research you have completed, and share what is bringing you peace in life, and how you have been able to achieve that, without causing mental disturbances to those resistant to change.
- Those resistant to change, may not care to understand you, nor appreciate what you have to say in life, don't try harder for them, try harder for yourself, and be resistant to those who are resistant of change, the less you change to accommodate the interests of those whos best interests are to disfavor you in support of another, the worse you will feel, the more you will inherit feelings of guilt, shame, and embarrassment, for having shared your life with another, who is only using you or manipulating you, to make themselves appear as victim to your sexuality, your beauty, your demeanor, your presence, and that's not how to build trust, online.
- When the times are tough, be professional, that's not the time to experiment online with your sexuality, or to be too confiding or close to companions online, who may be going through their own issues, under the same times, and probably not in the mood for schmoozing, unless what you have to say is important and helps.
- There is also a such thing as unsolicited advices, or help in life, that's also found to be offensive, why its never appropriate to demand change in others as you see fit, that's a really arbitrary way of examining the behavior or conduct of others, and expecting that change within them, will foster better results, in regards to whats not mentioned or known about you, supported.
- How to benefit others? To be beneficial to all, assume that everyone knows your issues, your disabilities, your strengths, and your weaknesses, without needing to declare your characteristics, traits, and gifts out loud, allow people to see things for themselves, and make their own determinations, upon comparing your work to others, figure out for themselves what intelligence is, without being too demanding for attentions, accolade, expect that others have a sense of pride too.

Love and Compassion ...

Giving your heart to someone is a risk you take in life, opening up to someone, and being positive toward them, not all will appreciate you for what you're worth in life. Love is about stability, and if you can't stay clean and sober, and become unstable, then that side of you will be shown, even if it's a new side. People can only reach out to you so many times, before they give up on you. And if you're not sure about them, then that's a problem with reading your heart and making decisions in life, as to who is the best fit for you, and then try for love again. It's hard to make personal changes for yourself in life, out loud, that's one thing that needs privacy in order to bloom, relationships, once public, then becomes a matter of what others think, which can interfere with how someone feels about you in public, whether they are comfortable with you, or made to feel uncomfortable liking you, give it time. If you divulge your thoughts or worries in private, then that will cause you to become paranoid in real life, as though others can read your mind, or are even looking through your life to determine whether or not to accept you. Always do step work with a Sponsor, on paper, not in your phone or computer, unless you don't feel like writing. If you like someone, don't convince them that there is something wrong with you, not after they have already accepted you, that can be disappointing both ways, and be the cause of your discomfort talking to someone that you like or admire. Whenever you're forced to do a self-assessment, give yourself time, to process, and be at peace with yourself and your past, that's processing then moving forward in life letting go. There's a difference between, feeling good about yourself, and not feeling good about yourself, and it shows, whether you like it or not, others can tell if you're not feeling good, and can tell if you have low self-worth, not confident, or poor self-esteem issues concerning the way you look, these are usually feelings you go through in your younger years then perfect, not in your 30s. That's too late to work on your image, you either get by in life, comfortable around all people, or you become paranoid, and feel inferior to others, or scared. Don't forget to be brave, usually what scares you most, isn't that difficult to accomplish, such as keeping in touch with friends, applying for jobs, going to meetings, going to therapy, the more you rebel (drink or go out) the less gets done moving forward. That's putting yourself down in life, not the solution. There is a such thing as being too hard on yourself, and that's the problem with being called an addict, whenever you are content, others are not content with you, whenever you are happy, others are unhappy with you, and whenever you are not bothered, someone bothers you, that's not being in sync with who you need to make proud. Never give up in life, no one will come and rescue you from your problems, not unless you ask for help. The more difficult you become, the less likely opportunities will arise, to work with people, to work for people, to be included, to be given jobs, to volunteer, to be a member, don't make your life more difficult than it needs to be, even if you're not running on all cylinders in life a soldier about your day, who cares, we all live at our own paces in life. Don't subject yourself to harm in life, be experimental with your health, that is what makes it difficult to be in loving relationships. You will want a lot of things in life, the point is to work your way toward being someone of interest, thought of in the positive. Unless you say something, will others think something, that's one rule to keep in mind, if you think of a negative interpretation, not speak to it, say it out loud.

Off-Thinking, Recognize It ...

If you're not thinking clear, if you're under the influence of feelings or voices, and if you are stressed or under pressure, and not able to perform, don't take risks in life. Don't take risks with your image, don't take risks with the image of others, and don't share unless it will add clarity, otherwise purposes to qualify oneself, or to share an example of good decision made to care, later looks like, you have not made a positive difference, or responsible for things not going right. I don't think anyone is that powerful in life to control people, and to control the feelings of people, and cause a disheartening of the independent spirit of others. Sometimes the more you focus on an issue, the more it becomes an issue, and just like people follow you, so do your thoughts, so only talk about things, that if brought up again, will not bother you or anyone else to think about in life, that's being careful with your words, no matter what you're going through in life. Never take out your discomforts in life on others, that means not shouting at others, not blaming others, and taking responsibility for when you were struggling. If accolade is a goal in life or applied for ("The Webby Awards") that means that I'm at my very best, and have reached a peak in my writing, and performing to my absolute potential in life. However, at the same time one cannot expect accolade, for having returned to a more normal condition, working, you must have done something in life commendable, that outweighs, any poor decision making past, and why should you be credited for your work completed, recognized. Work-product should always be something you're proud of and feel good about, and hope that what is of value to you, will also be recognized as being of value to another. Regardless what your issues are, as a blogger, one is always responsible, for how the reader feels, whether that's someone who judges you, someone who doesn't like you, or someone who is just getting to know you, the less you anticipate for things going wrong, the more things go right for you in life, and that is one way in which success can be found, not by fighting. You are allowed to practice before speaking in public, whether that's in private, journaling, talking to others, video-ing yourself, taking a few good selfies, just enough to recognize your own improved condition, and then that's how you determine whether you have the potential to be liked by others. I have always been a blogger, and it took many years of confidence building speaking in public without suffering mental health issues or self-harm, before settling down on my own website, which has surprisingly worked out for me in life, but is very high maintenance, meaning I have to feel good, I have to be at peace, I have to push myself, and I need to look well, lose weight, and manage my energy, so that I do not sound too strong, appear erratic, or get challenged in life, as though I'm stronger or smarter than I appear. I am not someone to measure my success, by who can relate to me, I think that's a painful expectation for anyone, to portray themselves for imitation, I think that's without crediting people for what makes them a good person, absent minded me, or what I have to say. And that's what blogging is all about, watching progress not expecting it, and keeping your distance, thinking for yourself too. Some subjects cause fear to others, that means they do not trust you, do not trust your sense of direction in life, and trust themselves more, that's the benefit of not growing up in a news story, and after maturing and having worked, be your own story in life. Everyone is entitled to living their life without unnecessary attentions, pain or suffering, some are more sensitive than others, and the more sensitive you are to people, the better off you'll feel, not be scared of someone, simply because you thought less of them, and not proud of them now, having done a better job at living life. And that's one example of discomfort, trying to figure someone out, and not accepting someone until you know everything about them, trust them. I keep an Instagram, to show my face, and my progress, and what I'm working on, what I've thought, so everyone knows where my head is at, and what I look like, as well as stay home, not social, until I reach a moment of stability and pride, and have something to talk about, recovered. I think it's customary, and a common courtesy to share as you go, what you have learned, and to share your progress with others, that's without worry for others getting a headstart in life, to your decision making and choices, that's having fear of competitions in life. Why I focus on myself.

Address Reactions and Chaos (Voices) Through Writing ...

There will be moments in life, when you are alone and things are peaceful, and there will be moments when you will feel hurt, or aggravated for no reason, based upon what you feel, feeling like others expect more from you, or expect you to speak, to cure a chaos. All insults hurt, and while you can't control what people are thinking, you can always do a better job of not being insulting, and not sharing in a way, to which another may feel insulted, and then feel pain yourself, having said something that empowers someone to dislike you. That's empathy. You must first manage yourself, and keep busy in life, it's not necessary to figure out others in life, unless you can do a better job, representing yourself, or your ideas about life, without affecting others. That's stepping into the middle of a fight, or knowing your place, not to get involved. It's really difficult to come forward in life, and to share your story in a whole and complete way, that takes time, and although there will be moments when it feels urgent to get something done, handle all things with care, including your own voice in life. Sometimes responding, without a backbone, or success, can make things worse for you, presenting yourself to the world. What is loving? I think when you are young, and you have your whole life ahead of you, you meet people, and you are able to open up eventually, and be loving toward them. Those moments are rare in life, you have to be in a certain place in life, in order to give and receive love, not all were gifted in that way, to be loved, or adored by a companion, and supported. Sometimes support is lost, if you become unstable. And this is how some of the greatest relationships come to an end. That's when things are painful to revisit, when consoling cannot repair how you feel, when they are no longer the answer to your ability to feel good in life. That's upon not being good enough, leaving, and then returning in a worse condition on more meds, and that's the risk you take, being single, and not settling down, when the time is right. How does writing help resolve disability? It allows you to work through your problems in life, until you hit a clearing, that is a moment of peace, with disability, there are always pressures you face, and that has to do with your self-confidence, feeling good about yourself, proud. Don't limit yourself in life, just because things are not going well for you at any moment in time, always have faith that things will get better, and set goals, so that you create a better life for yourself, and that's how a life is bettered, no life is a bad life, unless you make it so, that's your choice. And always be cautious of who you choose to love and communicate with, although people will not understand why you speak to more mature adults, its simply because they are easier to talk to and more prepared to think about what need to be done to make things better.

This Year Has Been Tough ...

When last year felt like we were all lost trying to figure out how to be happy again, I don't think this year really did the trick for getting us going in the right direction again. When life gets slow the tough get going and so it follows. When the times are tough, being quiet can be difficult, and when given time to think about life, sometimes we get carried away, protests and all. Follow your instincts, and if your instincts tell you that more work needs to be done in order for everyone to heal from the events that have taken place over the last year or so, then do your part, to contribute in a positive way, which doesn't always mean that you have to be a forward thinking individual, its okay to take it day by day, until you begin to see clear, and gain a better perspective on life, and that's also known as recovery. A journey Ive been through once or twice in my life, having suffered from addiction at the end of college, and while dating in Law School, eventually you settle down, and find your purpose in life again, those who love you don't usually leave you lost for too long, before you get to a point of no return. So take it easy on yourselves, within moderation is always the best advice given to those who in their emotional states, can say just about anything, leaving the other person quiet, the quiet people are good people, theyre the ones who make you feel normal, no matter what state your in. That actually takes hard work and effort to break the silence, and the monotony, of the news, to step outside of circumstances presence and speak to an audience, make a song, make an album, grow a blog, where there is faith there is opportunity, its when there is a loss of faith, that's what turns heads and hearts away from things theyre not so sure of. Always be sure of yourself, that's the beauty of life, that if you are clear headed, and have something helpful to say, you are able to get jobs, and speak with ease, that's with a clear conscious, and with some pride under your belt, good years spent well. I think during moments of crisis its normal for people to be experimental, that's usually for the purposes of making things better, no matter how late you are to any punch lines in life, if so relevant to meeting me later in life in my 30s online. What makes people popular is how the come out of difficult situations in life, after much needed rest and thought, and come out better people in the long run, no matter how much trauma and heartache they face, always be proud, Im sure all of us, have been faced with feelings, or energies in life, that we weren't really quite sure of, or which made us paranoid, or ever wondered about in life, that's normal, its not always people that are causing that, that could just be a matter of where your heart is in life, with you or wandering someplace else, you have no idea where your heart belongs. And that's how focus is lost, when you are worrying about one thing, and not into something else, you need to be focusing your attentions on, so think, what is important to you, and these types of conversations occur, during natural disasters, happy to be alive, fortunate to be taken care of, happy of what you have accomplished thus far, lucky to have met such special people in life, and its okay if you are not readily able to plan out your future, its not required to always have a plan in life, not all successful people are future planners, such as myself, I am someone who lives for the moment, Im not someone who thinks about life expectancy, the past, or worries what others think, but if you set your mind to those types of thinking then that's what happens to your head, wrapped up in what you think is happening, without having a finite understanding of why things are happening in life. Don't ever waste time wondering about those who are well, just do your best in whatever state your in, not to be a negative influence in terms of your fears in life. And that's what separates the strong from the weak, those who care, without abandon, those who share without repression, those who report unfiltered, those who demonstrate care professionally. Then there is messenger, a place to talk to people from different areas of life, you are not privileged to work with or know in real life, and that's when famous meets fans, that's when you either share commentary in support of the work they do, or run the risk of creating trouble for yourself, they are those who do not have time to waste worrying about specific people in life, or time to be affected by specific people in life who are associated to people with fame, whos more important? If its something your passionate about pursue it, why I took an Internship in Film instead of a paid position at an Escrow Company Fall 2018, I should've worked as a paralegal, but followed my heart anyways, and pushed myself to learn what its like to work in Entertainment, all exposure is good exposure, that doesn't necessarily mean that it's the right job for you. Always do your best to prove yourself, you can break any condition of giving up in life, in bed all day for 6 months or more, on night meds by 8pm for a year, and get out of bed daily and go to work. That's a choice, to stay disabled, you can fix that, and no matter how difficult, to interview and be accepted, its an easier process than you think it'd be, you wont know unless you try. Learn to go with the flow, its COVID, not Wallstreet, and no one is in any rush to get anywhere in life, that's not how life works, you either arrive, or youre still working on yourself to get to a better place in life, content with who you are, managing your conditions whatever they may be, taking meds if needed, etc. The less you talk about others, the better you'll feel the more you infer what others are thinking, the more you will be criticized, and this is what makes writing so challenging, being professional on good days and bad days, and not allow all the other things about life bothering you, to be spilled out online, and bother anyone else, especially if those were conditions already overcome, no one needs to know or understand why or how anyone has gotten sick in life, that's really no ones business, but your own, its called HIPAA. That means its your health, your privacy, and has nothing to do with anyone else in life, not their right to know that type of information about you. The less you lend insight for people to try to get involved in your life, as though your life affects their life, the more so entitled they feel to disturbing your progress, as though you owe it to anyone to include the thoughts of others into your own writing. I always write in a balanced way, whether thats to my detriment or not, its not an argument, and its not a fight to write online, and its not telling people how it is, its just writing, one thought to the next, and I think that is how trust is built, what are the composite understandings in life, that make up your general outlook in life, and what have been your misunderstandings past, and why thought of, and whatever provoked you to be a writer, was it because you see any system as flawed, or was it to help reinforce or make a system better, to make a system better, not criticize.

What is a Business Secret? ...

Positive thinking is necessary to the survival of feelings that empower us, not disempower systems of respect and trust. Which is how any disclosures about systems of trust, or thoughts shared about the inner workings of systems of trust, eventually erode the trust given to others, with respect for their opinions on matters, later alluded to. You are not included for interpretation within the entertainment industry until you participate via sharing your interpretations online, with a shared sense of humor for the creative processes that make up the movies and songs we love. The reasons for which crimes occur, should not in return, ruin the progress of those so dedicated to the cause of making people feel good, rest assured, that things will be okay, in spite of negative happenings. For whatever its worth, I thought integrating myself into a system of trust, would help prepare others, by aiding them via my insights and experiences shared, make better decisions moving forward with regards to how these painful experiences can be overcome, and will be overcome. You cant let any one person, bring an entire industry to its knees, nor can you allow any mishaps in life, to ruin an entire system of thinking based upon respect, not ridicule, pride, not hate. It takes approximately 8 years of writing and sharing online and offline, to eventually present your story (if you are related to a high profile case, that's to ensure that there is no precipitation of a continuance form of negative energy about the issues past, raised again in present times, that would be a unworthy inference to be made presently, you cannot explain the past, you can only best tell your own story in life, not the story of others, is key). It was then I became a top character on IMDb for reference, sharing a different perspective than the perspectives already shared, its by my own insights, sheltered from a case, not watched by me, not having watched the news to it, maintained an even keel in life, not intimidated by others, not scared of others, and not thinking of myself as any more special than anyone else in life. Stayed normal. When you get likes, which was a goal to begin with, that means you are starting to become an easy story to hear, and with satisfaction, others feel that you are presently able to be known, and known in a good way, that's after having observed you for many years, finally witnessing your condition as improved, with a more solid head on your shoulders to speak. That was an unrealized potential, and a type of confirmation, that lets me know that what I am saying is okay, and that what I am doing is okay, without bringing in anyone elses interests in life, present or past, and without causing harm to the credentials of others, who have been already paid, already made successful, and should not be required to change for anyone under any circumstances, that's not what sharing my story is for, to be of influence, its just a story about my life, and my daily opinions and thoughts moving forward in life, without assumption or insult, and that's how you become well liked, people at peace with you, not bothered by you. Then there will always be a few who think you are piggy backing on the successes of others. I got into Law School on my own two Law Schools, and I got jobs on my own, before KUWTK ever took off, that was me doing me, not me doing me in honor of who has passed, that's with respect to those who have passed not get sick or interfere with the progress of others, that's support, not competition, and being made fun of, to shine light on a past experience of someone else's road to fame, is not meaningful its hurtful. When meaning is added, in observance of the life lived by someone, that means a later interpretation is done so with respect to those successes in life, I would not know the causes for anyones downfalls in life, as not connected, not my responsibility. I have myself to take care of in life, I was never a leader in the entertainment industry, and never a forthcoming entertainer to be, that just happened by writing on Twitter and Blogging, later came to be. That's having a good attitude in life, that's not being bothered by others, the times, and with respect to those who have passed, not shine light upon those happenings, vaguely or subtly, that's when you get looked at in reference to things before you have even campaigned for those causes, such as becoming a member of Brady, and started beach running 2014, when I lost 50 lbs. "Take my word for it" runs skip deep these days apparently. The quicker you identify yourself, the quicker you get put down in life, by those who don't identify with you, or think that your identity is not deserved well earned, online, well liked. When there exists an inherent need to restore faith, minimize risks, and when unwanted disclosures are forced out of people (affecting appearances, confidences, smile, attitude, focus, such as occurring within an industry, that indicates harm is occurring to be deciphered). Its never an appropriate to use Justice as a clutch in life, for reinforcing negative opinions of people in life, who have not done any harm, be compared to those who do cause harm, on a grander scale, and that is what is causing illness by association, thinking someone is bad luck, not good luck, and that how failure to organizations occur, when people who could empower, are used instead as a clutch for negative interpretations misused, to help aide in their identification of positive and negative viewpoints on their own, its not a fun process of being used, so someone else can figure out how their mind works, or feel energized in the process of figuring out life for themselves, that's called an over-dependence, and what goes up must come down, eventually that train of thought stops, and that occurs when what you are doing or what you are thinking no longer makes you feel good thinking about or thinking in that way, that means that your thinking is off, and there must be a better way of grasping the subjects in a way, with more focus on what is going well. That's how someone positive gets used to support a negative interpretation, just to protect a company name, or a series of choices, and hurts someone as though their bipolar is due to knowledge of being made fun of, I could care less actually, its by the harm that did occur, that someone reacts, without knowing why, and that's a direct result, of using an identity and misrepresenting the causes for action, or purpose for study and job choices, attack that point of interest, what makes a person unique. You know if you cant stop telling jokes, maybe that means that you love the industry and maybe that means that there is a neverending source of optimism ingrained in such an industry, such as entertainment, it was meant to keep going, and should not be made to feel bad about it, similar to my disposition, I feel like people cant stop making fun of me, and that they get so many ideas, just by knowing me, energy, just be careful not to hurt the well being of others, in your quest for better knowledge and understanding. When the truth gets villainized, that occurs when the truth is not told but when a negative interpretation takes hold, that prevents others from seeing the positive, be care just to block your own thoughts from seeing someone in the positive, not block the thoughts of all, by focusing on one persons negative antidotes about life, that hurts the identifying factors for success and that which cannot withstand impression made, later gets made to look like the misunderstanding lies within the one who feels misunderstood, not vice versa, a caused effect. The basis for interpretation in the negative will produce a negative result to whom that energy is directed toward or about when all things are viewed in the positive that's not to allow negative interpretations to take hold of what ideologies protect ones faith versus what types of ideas about life, people, and personalities hurts the faith of any group of people misidentified.

Learning a Big Lesson ...

Preserve your liberties in life and protect your rights. That's the difference between living a quiet life, and being compelled to speak. Always pause, before you speak, and if youre not sure, only speak to things you understand based upon experience. Becoming a public figure is not easy, and even today with 14,740 Page Views and Ranked 18,599 on Alexa in the US, doesn't mean your in the clear, and can say whatever you want. Learning to be yourself within reason is key, not push the boundaries for acceptances in life, that's when the harder you try the harder you fall. Only speak about things you are comfortable talking about.

Its been my experience that everything is okay, so long as Im okay, and the only thing that can make me not feel okay, is if I become uncomfortable about something Ive said, and later cannot take back, which is why it has taken me so long to become a writer, in a commercial way. Ive blogged for many years, and have had difficulty building a following, you don't earn a following by names these days, and it doesn't matter if you know anyone famous, its are you of value and why, and does what you have to say make sense, or is what youre saying to draw unwanted attentions toward yourself and others in life. Then it becomes a matter of are you prepared. Being prepared doesn't mean you have to know what people think, but with respect to the past, are you careful about your commentary or analysis, and with careful thought address issues, without shining light on specific people or specific examples, or experiences to illustrate or better articulate yourself. Usually what you say in support of something you are saying is not necessary, not at this level of acceptances in life. As you grow your blog, its better to not talk about people you know, and not say names, and just speak in a general way, not put yourself down in life, or run the risk of making anyone else feel bad for being apart of your story.

You will at times face unrealized pressures as a public speaker, and that's when confidence is key. So no matter where your life takes you, and no matter what happens, you understand the value of maintaining positive rapport with others, and that's not made by socializing with people for reassurances in life, sometimes its by mentions that we get dragged into equations in life, and become known to people on a personal level and its better to not get that close to anyone you don't know, famous or not, there is so much power in observation, that means not being a party to your discussions about life, its with reference that subjects others to feeling insulted. And that's how your writing gets put into question, whether you are headed in a direction away from the past, or whether you are using the past to explain your thinking now, bring up lose ends, or try to tie up lose ends past, does that do anyone a service in life, or does that only do you a disservice in life to discuss the past. If there is nothing you are ashamed of, and if you have done nothing wrong, then its okay to wonder, but its not always proper to wonder out loud, especially if some people have moved on in life, and don't wish to make those losses of issue now, be affected. Whats important to you matters, within reason, but is what your thinking important to your life as it is now, to discuss out loud, don't waste too much issue on non-issues in life.

You would think that being on the inside of life, that things would be easier, its not. And that's the false belief of someone who has lived a life not knowing you, as though you have something they don't have in life, or have something to share they feel entitled to knowing. And that's how someone who has shared everything gets heckled for more information than they are comfortable sharing about. That's why not allow anyone to cause you to question yourself or lose faith in your abilities in life. And why to communicate only with those willing to communicate with.

The more important you become, the more people will feel entitled to claim victim to you, why its important not to get too close to people in private, why your private time with people is to be limited, for a limited engagement period only, and its not necessary to respond to anyone who is threatening you. The only way you can give your power away in life, is to allow someone who doesn't know you, to cause you to make bad decisions for yourself moving forward, how your future potential is affected by recordings and writings private, that becomes their ammunition against you in life, that's the price of opening up meeting people in private for conversation. And that heaviness, is if you get hurt sharing in private, explains your difficulty connecting with others, without developing an aversion to being close to anyone, and that's how one ends up alone, that's when you have a bad experience somewhere, and then don't feel comfortable in those places in life. Be nice within reasons, but don't give up all your rights and freedoms in life, just because one person is not happy with you, when someone feels harmed, that usually ends a relationship, if its not your loss, it means that its my loss, to continue talking to someone in private, and means that it is my life that is being made to look stupid, and that means that Im not having fun, and not willing to risk my rights being taken away, looking indecent in public.

What I Went Through During COVID ...

(I) After attending a Laker Game, and seeing Ari Emanuel in person, that was my first introduction to his name, and to his face. I had heard of his name through a popular television show "Entourage" I've seen only a couple episodes of. He was wearing a vest, and sweatpants, in navy blue, seating next to a friend, who then mouthed something to me, from across the court, someone who looked like they were from the show Jersey Shore, a man, had a purse at his feet, maybe a real Birkin. During halftime, I stayed, and he walked over to greet Jeanie Buss, who sits in front of us, behind the courtside seats. Behind the family who owns LA Gear, they were Windward Students, and had floor seats for several years, I attended almost every Laker Game 2008, and saved all my Free Taco Tickets, in my Business Cards album. That was before her Mother passed away, and before we lost Kobe Bryant in a helicopter crash. I met Ari Emanuel November 2019, on Messenger, and sent him updates, had just started distributing my blog on blopros July 2019, and started getting likes that showed up in my Facebook button, and when I was getting 200 Likes per post, the Likes stopped showing up, I had been blocked from posting links on Facebook, due to a "Community Standards" violation, I was not made aware of. This is why you have to be careful what you say, no matter what amount of pressures you are under, no matter who has passed, to always respond with etiquette, by what you know, not go by what you have been told, following their passing, that's insight shared from another, that later does not reflect the care and attention paid following those losses, to support my Siblings, while in Law School 2010, I took Criminal Law and got two As on both essays, and was #3 in my Class to Start. It was all of my Brothers friends who called me to talk, and then to call my Brother to break the news to him, he had been suffering for some time, and once recommended that he go back to school and to take his meds, I did not believe in at the time, I had a WLAC Course Guide in my car, because I wanted to finish my Paralegal Certificate too, to start working, bumped into him twice before he passed, once outside the Beverly Center on his way to Sushi Roku, and once at Qs he was eating alone in a booth. I used to pick him up in Boulder when he needed a ride, and gave my bong to him, when I moved into the dorms, because I could not keep it there, and quit smoking weed 2003. In a spur of the moment response, to the fact that his Mother did not invite any of his friends to his Funeral, made a Page on Facebook, my first Page, and they all responded, and shared stories and photos, and participated on Facebook, I got his birth date or a year wrong, and my Brother corrected me, it was then I started to have paranoia, managing a page online, and instead printed all the photos and posts, and made an album for his Mother instead, to keep as a reminder of him, in case she didn't think his friends cared they did. So when Major visited me for coffee 2017, and told me that he had been doing drugs before he passed away, I was in disbelief, because I knew he suffered from "Schizophrenia" and my Sister's friend suffered from "Depression, took Wellbutrin" who I was told had difficulties in her relationship with her Father. I last saw her picking her and my sister up from a Club in Hollywood the designated driver, and we ate at Ketchup afterward at The Roosevelt Hotel, and when she bumped into me at CVS, paid me back for dinner, I didn't ask for money, she was always very sweet and energetic the two of them hyper together, putting in her hair extension clip ins, in the bathroom, and had photos in my computer of them I think at one point. I saw her older sister who attended school with my BFF, at my BFF "guy's" house, she is friends with his Wife, the last dinner I attended at his house before they got married, and was not flown to his wedding because I was up all night running, and was not keeping a fixed schedule working, but had lost 50lbs. I saw them last in DC, after having visited, I was supposed to work in DC Summer 2011, got a job at DC Law Students in court, and with a job already accepted, I then received a call from Bazelon, who I did not disclose acceptance to, they were my first choice, "mental health law" since I had been hospitalized once before beginning Law School February 2009. In responding to one of the questions, I mentioned why I was interested in the Clerkship, because two family friends had passed away, and explained that to me it was a problem, and that something should be done, in order to prevent these types of losses, without knowing why, or understanding how possible. This was Fall 2010, I interviewed for jobs Summer 2011, Two Semesters in advance, I had just started dating a New Boyfriend October 2010, after we met Summer 2010, working for Children's Law Center, I worked as a Law Clerk to Two Attorneys, and was very busy working at both office locations, and in court every morning taking notes. We did not meet until lunch one day, sat with a few co-workers, they were talking about something and by the end of the conversation, mentioned that I was half-asian, and he goes "why didn't you say anything" exclaimed that to me, I was the only one not smiling, I didn't understand the joke. Eventually he asked to smoke with me, eventually gave him a ride one day to the Courthouse, he did not have a car, he took the train everyday with another Law Student from Yeshiva, who mid conversation, said "Oh I share my notes with everyone," and I didn't that that was a good idea, but since she went to a better Law School than me, eventually shared whatever notes I had left in my computer, we met in the beginning of the Clerkship she was making "two hot pockets" in the microwave. And was told she encouraged Aaron to date me, go for it, I was hesitant to start, he was very shy, and eventually we went on our first date to the only bar restaurant in the area, and there was salsa dancing one night, and we danced, and he laughed. He was very shy, and awkward, he's tall, was a wrestler in High School, when I took him to a Wine Bar, everyone was bumping into him, he had to lift his arms so they could get by, was not comfortable there, so we left, that was October, that's when we first hooked up. When I went backpacking in August in Portugal, I was invited by my Best Friend, who took me, who travels a lot, I didn't pass up the opportunity, and we were going to meet somewhere else, but then he chose Portugal last minute, and reserved a hotel room to meet at a Marriot, we never ended up staying at Hostels, I just found hotels and paid. He read a book the entire time about the US Supreme Court, we didn't really talk, he was always on his phone. We are comfortable with each other, he always laughs at all my jokes, who has always been very positive toward me, and am sad, that I could not stay well, to continue my friendships with everyone, be apart of, and took a different course in life, working in internships and writing online. If you don't know how to help ask, and if you can help do so, but if you get in trouble, that's your own fault in life, how a good deed, quickly got misunderstood to be for bad reasons attended a US Supreme Court hearing 2013 January, that was not not anything, and starting somewhere, and have not stopped writing since. So when I say Ive come a long way, I feel like I have, and while I have tried to stay in positive spirits and not try to take on many responsibilities in life, when I was well and able took jobs, and during the interim kept busy working from home, managing my own life, records, and files. If I couldn't work in a Law Office, then that's why I bought plastic filing cabinets, and used my high speed printer, and made folders for myself, and at least practiced skills, so in the event I was ever given a job, at least practiced managing my own life first, before stepping into another's life and office. There is reporting and there is having fun, and you cannot mis the two, when it comes to talking in private, and if you ever stop and think and things seem serious in your mind, respect the lives of others, and not share those deductions or fears out loud, life is meant to be lived with normal conversations shared, talking about approved content, not stuff you think or fear, those worries become turn offs, and no one ever clarifies to you, what's going wrong in your life until you figure out things for yourself. And that's instability, when you ever get lost and question others, is how friendships fade, and if you go public, is how you get ignored, and if you are being fun or entertaining others sharing your mind, then you look stupid. And by the time you arrive back to normal, everyone already knows what they know, while you suffered for 8 years just trying to get a solid head on your shoulders again confident, not following anyone's lead in life, not being bothered by any comments, and without worry for anyone trying to cue you into things, and cause you to believe that others think differently of you. That's laying low, figuring things out for yourself in life, without contributing to any chaos. I think that losses cause you to reflect, and that's a normal reaction, and sometimes we ask for help and want to know why, and that's something no one can explain to you, and always based on what your doing with your life, get viewed as the person known: and that's what's being decided without my advisement, and why I'm hearing voices, as though I was not positive enough or successful enough, as though my identity was hard to accept, as though I presented myself to the world in an offensive way sharing all the photos I had and took along the way, and whether anyone cared to understand my issues, or thought I was just looking for attentions in life. Well if no one talks to me, and if everyone is always busy, and if I have to be the one to maintain all my relationships in life, then eventually I get tired, and just maintain contact on a yearly basis with Friends who have known me my whole life. So that's the burden that was suffered, how to blend in with the successful without interfering in their progress as a unit, and not to be someone they blame, as having contributed to any false understandings of the value of a human life, the preciousness of time, and the importance of being honest, and continuing to move forward in life, its that understanding of life known, that is what is not explained to you in life, how everything is connected, at best you are always responsible for your own connections in life, to make them proud, to work hard, and be a positive influence to others. So its doesn't matter if all my photo albums are gone, all my yearbooks are gone, it doesn't matter if I don't have everything important to me, and things went missing, I never thought twice about it, or looked that hard for things in life, but its when things go missing, that you should say to yourself, do I deserve this, and when it starts to matter, that's when your life is in danger, or being misunderstood as a cause for bad luck, and that's how you eventually get mistreated to be someone more difficult or complicated than you are, simply because you are on meds, you are not well adjusted to in life, not feeling as smart, not easy to move around, in bed all day, and all you had time for was running and writing from your bed, or working dressed to the nines. Those were my only two modes. Be sure to speak of yourself in the positive, if you don't present everything in the positive, that's when people assume you have always been this way, no its not until later in life you get smart, and that occurs through education, not by luck, by choices and focus, and by doing the right thing, without the necessity for politicking or being social, I later found out, that only makes you appear to be more powerful than you are, as though you have always been this mature or bright your entire life, when it comes to the philosophy of public health, happenings, dating, love, relationships, friendships, academics, we all blossom at our own paces in life, and if you don't work hard, then things don't happen for you in life, and you don't get jobs, not strong enough, not smart enough, not bright enough, not energetic enough, too many snafus in your past, and that's what eat at you little mistakes in life, you beat yourself over in for in life. By the time you regain control over your own thoughts, don't be sad about the years lost, not applying for jobs, you can only do what you set you mind and heart to in life, and if working doesn't feel right, and if you have already worked, and know what types of jobs you want in life, then its okay to stay home, and work from home, and make a job for yourself, and create a life for yourself, without interfering with the lives and progress of others, not be an embarrassment, not cause trouble, not being defensive, not being accusatory, and keep thinking, when one door closes another one opens. That's how I live life, I never look back, not until AA, if you don't recognize your problems, you won't think about your life, in a negative way, that's when your functioning, and the minute you get made to feel ashamed of yourself, that's when you stop functioning all together and getting good grades. That was the difference between having a career and working in DC, to being sent to Rehab because she would not prescribe me 3 adderrall, and was taken off all meds, then finishing my Paralegal Certificate and working in Marketing, then getting two jobs Summer 2012 one in Criminal Law Defense, and one at VWAP DA's Office in Compton, that was August 2012 I got screamed at by those who have known me my whole life who didn't understand what was wrong with me, maybe too focused and intense, and withdrawn quiet. Life isn't a secret, never be ashamed about your worries in life, and its always okay to ask questions along the way, not keep everything to yourself. The main lesson is, the stronger you appear, and the more successful you become, the more others think that they are entitled to attack you, the more is wanted from you, the more is demanded from you, and the more you get made to feel like the work you have done thus far is not good enough, and that's how someone of value, gets devalued in public, stands out, thinks no one is watching, then hurts me while everyone is watching, just to get a reaction from a crowd of people, and witness changes to my stats, I went up anyways, that's the difference between giving up and losing in life to hate, or not contributing to questioning of you, as though you've not been reliable for 8 years helping everyone to the best of your ability, not trip out, and give up in life, and not put anyone in harms way, that's being overprotective, not telling my family about what I think, and figuring out life for myself, on my own, without help from anyone, figure out my own self-worth.

(II) I contacted this person on messenger a "Donald Trump Account" I have spoken previously to an account circa 2017 after leaving an AA meeting, someone to talk to, who responded, then went to another account, that's two accounts I spoke to and received replies from, then I started work Fall 2018, and my phone was taken away during work, and missed text messages, and eventually the relationship ended, he left. Then February 2020, I remembered I had a pen pal, and tried to look for him, but could not find him, and texted a few accounts, and this one account responded under a different name "Real Donald Trump Tweets" I usually send photos for them to choose whether to talk to me or not, because if they are not attracted to me, or don't like me, then probably would not talk to me and reply. We maintained positive rapport, until March, when I texted a "Joaquin Phoenix" account to fan mail him, following his success, just in case he ever wondered about a poster taken down by me, whether that was relevant to their decision to make a movie featuring just the Joker, after I made "Batman 5" jokes online, I'm sure that may have sounded insensitive to blame a Movie for being the cause for the loss of their Star Actor before Aurora, since I went to school in Colorado, I made a choice to submit a preliminary research proposal to CU Boulder's HRC, which based on my request, they could not approve, I have gotten approval from them in the past as an Undergrad, so they were the first organization I contacted, if I were to study crime at all, or its effects on society, and changes that we have undergone overtime, not typed, handwritten, not professionally submitted in a rush, this was living at 158 Anita. So to me it a meaningful interaction, then heard his story, and found out who his Brother was, and what he went through, after we talked. I used to be taken to The Viper Room to drink with my then Ex Boyfriend, a couple times, and then moved to West Hollywood, to be closer to his work location, to be more convenient to see me, while a Paralegal working for the LA City Attorney's Office. Because I paused to talk to others, he got upset, then eventually turned on me, asking for nude photos then posting them online, after I got robbed $7000 from a Leonardo Dicaprio Account, and Identity Theft from another Joaquin Phoenix Account who then texted me by phone asking for personal information, to make accounts for me, and move money through my accounts, to send to others, using my identity, and then making me do things for him, I did not make any money through that interaction, but I lost money in another interaction, where money was taken from me, belonging to me and my Charles Schwab account, as down payment to meet Leonardo Dicaprio.

(III) I'm sorry, I am doing my best, and I always do my best even when necessary to prove myself wrong in life, and not allow others to treat me like I've not done good work, to help others, reporting to others, calling the courts, and not waiting until something bad happens to get help, that's being prepared in life or anything, and then there are some losses you cannot prepare yourself for, and that's working hard and not making any money, that's blogging. I'm sorry if my life is too intense to have business associations, have friends, or date, I understand I have an intense life.

Personal Update ...

Courses Im Taking on Coursera (coursera.org):

[1] “Systems Thinking In Public Health” (Certificate)

“This course provides an introduction to systems thinking and systems models in public health. Problems in public health and health policy tend to be complex with many actors, institutions and risk factors involved. If an outcome depends on many interacting and adaptive parts and actors the outcome cannot be analyzed or predicted with traditional statistical methods. Systems thinking is a core skill in public health and helps health policymakers build programs and policies that are aware of and prepared for unintended consequences. An important part of systems thinking is the practice to integrate multiple perspectives and synthesize them into a framework or model that can describe and predict the various ways in which a system might react to policy change. Systems thinking and systems models devise strategies to account for real world complexities.”

[2] “Positive Mental Health and Psychiatry” (Certificate)

“Define mental health in a positive sense, i.e. WHO definition of mental health and how this may be influenced by mental illness and social factors. Discuss the different components of mental health, i.e. social, emotional and psychological wellbeing, resilience. Define the role of stress in everyday life and understand how to manage stress as it occurs naturally. Outline the important contributions of positive psychology and the recovery movement.”

When Your Image Needs a Lift ...

If everything you do in life, is moving toward certain goals in life and feelings, then “self-image” should be one of those things you factor in along the way, eventually it happens, matters. Its what makes or breaks you eventually, when it comes to self-esteem, which if your not paying attention to, too busy living for the moment, and having fun, more years will go by wondering whats going wrong, than time spent in the moment, enjoying being yourself, that’s the difference between being happy, or being made aware that there is something wrong with you. According to positivepsychology.com, “self-image ... is a number of self-impressions that have built up over time... These self-images can be very positive, giving a person confidence in their thoughts and actions, or negative, making a person doubtful of their capabilities and ideas.” [1] We don’t all live perfect lives, and no one expects you to be perfect. You can only get by in life so long, rolling with the punches, or accepting blames, or criticisms in life, before you saddle up [2] and say you know what I am not going to accept being labeled this way, Im not a bad person, I mean well, I have been doing my best, my disability is not my fault, I am smart, my life is not over, I have time, this is not the end, until you ultimately admit that I can do a better job at being me. Your “perception” is what makes you unique, its what people see looking at you, its how people feel knowing you, its what people think looking at you, and it's the deciding factor about you, that gets you into schools, gets you into jobs, or be picked for romance or ultimately marriage. And although you may continue to change overtime, you always have the power to see things in the positive, and to maintain a positive outlook. Know that, "self-image is based on our perceptions of reality, that it is built over a lifetime and continues to change as we do." [3] -Theres a false impression, for example, of being a blogger, that's someone knowing you by how your write, that's hearing how you sound at your best, and if this is not how you speak, then an inflated version of yourself is perceived to represent how you are in public, or when talking to others, which is the direct opposite, I never make eye-contact, I mumble and don't speak in a high voice, soft spoken, I don't share a lot, I don't talk a lot, I don't talk about my problems, I mostly talk about myself, I never talk about others. Then there is you in words, which is a mix of how you feel, where you've been, what you've experienced, and where youre headed. Mostly people read for themselves, to agree or disagree, to accept or not accept, to believe or not believe, to trust or not to trust, to be impressed or not impressed at all, and that has everything to do, with what you find of value, not something I can control. No matter what anyone thinks, the best way to help others, is by being comfortable with yourself, and not worry about them, not be too observant, and more focused on yourself, without worry, that's having "A healthy self-image keeps you from beating yourself up over the slightest mistake." [4] Whether anyone recognizes me as smart, special, unique, capable, of value, beautiful, kind, generous, or giving. Sometimes it feels like for everything you are, becomes the basis for which you crumble, or feel attacked in life, like its not okay for you to be you. That's the worst, being forced to tune into others discomferts or unhappiness, as though you are responsible for changing yourself, or accommodating them, unless you care do so, and unless they matter to you, improve, and that's what I did on my own, to be a better friend, and hopefully a better girlfriend one day. Not bottle up. Understand why I am the way I am, and figure out how to better live life, so that I am looked at in the positive, not on a negative note, scrutinized for being myself. Sometimes you wind up not feeling good about yourself. If your subservient like me in relationships, you do everything you can in relationships to make another person feel loved and wanted, and its when you are not wanted, you back off, some people just like to be chased in life, and doted upon, that's with attentions on them. Note: If you are "more giving in relationships and people will naturally gravitate towards you," [5] and sometimes that's exactly how you wind up feeling drained, always maintain a healthy balance, without being too "needy" [6] of them, be confident without being assertive, and that usually helps the relationship continue on, Ive been in two long term relationships one for 4 years and one for 3 years to marry, then I started therapy in my 30s. Too late to open up privately, and not soon enough to prevent me from sharing online on the fly. Its important to be a friend, they're not your doctor, and its important to be a girlfriend, they're not your psychologist, that's one way of feeling hurt by someone who doesn't know you, playing doctor on you, over-diagnosing you, and ultimately judging you as defected based on what medications you take, and that's a really degrading position to be in in life. Solve your own problems in life, meaning: get help from a professional, especially if youre in dire need of advice/love/friendship etc, desperation is usually a turn off, too heavy a feeling for anyone to read into, theyd usually rather keep their distance in those instances, best to have faith in yourself, not expect someone to come into your life and restore it for you, that's actually what boyfriend heroes are for, Im totally kidding. (Book: Alchemist). The decision that ultimately make or break you in life, career wise, timing wise, are sometimes how weeks, months, or even years can be wasted in life, putting yourself back together and getting strong again, if youre not careful about who you go to for help. So don't be uncomfortable being yourself in public, continue to do you, whether or not you are covered in labels, that's not what I envisioned for myself, but you wind up in the darndest places in life, and that you just have to live with and make due with what has happened in your life, no matter how threatened or scared you feel, intimidated by others. If it's a problem within, that is not your responsibility to cure, love is not a cure all during moments of disagreement, that's usually winds up making things worse. So do what you need to do to be you again, have faith that things will turn around for you, never give up in the middle of a fight, best to walk away, rather than mention, and not give up on yourself just to communicate that youre hurt, there are better ways to cope I promise you, and hurting yourself is not the solution, only makes you look worse, only deepens whatever pain you are in, only leads to unhappiness, makes life more difficult and challenging to prove yourself in life, and only serves to build a side against you in life, which is not the solution, the antecedent to coming forward, as though you were meant to be a silent partner in life, without notice, that you forgive, not take credit for any inspirations in life, everyone is entitled to view life as they see it, not see it as in accordance to reality, and what makes sense solely based on what they know, life doesn't work that way, sometimes the Movie comes out, before the people come to be, and that's the beautiful progression of influence overtime, not to be dumbed down by a later personality.

"Happy, Joyous, and Free" ...

“Happy, Joyous, and Free” is a term I learned in early sobriety. Its made in reference to your “emotional sobriety,” “mean[ing] that if they work a good program, they will achieve physical sobriety (abstinence) and become happy in the process.” [1] When it comes to feelings, your “general ability to feel one's feelings,” is about “being in the present moment.” [2] Where in the past we would have used substances, or alcohol, to make us feel better, a coping mechanism for either enhancing feelings, or release ones inhibitions in life, or in the worst case, trying to block out feelings all together. While in the immediate that may have been your solution, if later you come to realize that you start to enjoy life less and less, and cannot maintain any good feelings, means you’ve taken things too far, and that’s when change becomes difficult, stopping an activity in life you thought would bring you happiness, but in the long run, actually inhibited you from achieving your best in life, and did not allow you to be your happy positive self. Sometimes its through love we feel good, sometimes we drink to feel good, and sometimes we may felt tempted to try substances to make us feel good, like all expensive habits, the wear and tear on your finances, due to excessive spending whether that be on alcohol, drugs, pills, or shopping can lead to a quick spiral downwards in life. Sometimes its not until you’ve lost everything, that you are forced to start over again in life, and this is what moderation is all about. So often we go out into the world, in search of a feeling to be had, when really that feeling lies within us, if you can achieve something on your own, then you will become less reliant on your surroundings or people, to enable you to achieve success in the department of feeling good, feeling rest assured, or being content with yourself, life wasn’t meant to be lived solely on a feedback system of support, most people are busy with their own lives. Be mindful.

Psychologytoday.com reminds us: “Sometimes emotional sobriety is about tolerating what you are feeling. It is about staying sober no matter what you are feeling. It means that you don't have to blame yourself or your program because life can be challenging. It means that you don't necessarily need to do something to make the feeling go away.” [3]

Theres a term called “FOMO (fear of missing out).” [4] That may be one feeling, or urge in life, you may have when it comes to feeling good or feeling loved, be apart of something, not be on your own, and that’s one of the biggest obstacles standing in the way between most people and their sobriety or cessation of an activity that no longer brings them happiness. Why change your life, and stop trying in life, whether that be dating, drinking, going out, being social online. Why? Because your health matters more, and the more you put your health first, the better off you’ll be and the easier all of those things will become. A break is a break, that’s to repair yourself, and sometimes those breaks in life become indefinite the longer you wait to fix yourself, the more difficult it becomes to have those things in life you wanted, which could not be achieved through drinking or drug use. You may think that's helping, when really that turns everyone away from you who loved and trusted you, in place of people who are around in your life, on the basis of your using of substances alone, relapses and alcohol, that includes messaging services. What happens when all your friends are online? That means don't forget about your friends offline, who are busy living their lives, I'm sure they would love to hear from you too. You may have had fun with those friends, and you may miss those friends, but in order to be a friend, you must first be yourself again. Minus the mind altering aspects of using substances and alcohol, where you are not you will not be in life. If things are not going well for you in life, then that is the necessary change that needs to be made, to reevaluate your dreams and your goals in life, which if they aren't happening, maybe means that the rest of life is causing that upset. When we simplify our lives, we are doing three things: (1) decreasing the stress inherent to failure, (2) reducing the risk of those feelings of shame and blame, and (3) creating a boundary between ourselves: (a) what we will allow to happen in our lives, and (b) what we refuse to allow happen to our lives, and that makes up your self-worth, how willing you are to settle down with your present and make things better, and not go off course in life, get lost, or be so far gone, that it's hard to repair yourself. You don't need to destroy anything that's not going right for you, that's not the way to move forward, so much of life is about forgiveness, and if we forgive those parts of ourselves we are having difficulty thinking about, the more change will embrace you, without needing to think too hard about the past, or whatever losses you have suffered, and be on your way back to peace. You owe it to yourself to get better, including to the ones who cared for you.

At some point you have to step away from all your problems and all your analysis, and say to yourself, you know what, maybe I can't do anything about what has been said right now, but can do a better job, of being a better writer, without raising the seriousness to it, winding down is not always a plus, especially if others enjoy, keeping things simple, not on a person to person basis, divulged, of course not, not describe or attract an entire gender to some made up gender neutral issue, that I encountered in life, I'm sure is not proper to discuss, my audience being primarily members to my age group, probably too intense for High School, and definitely not stuff you bring up around kids, the holder of faith, the only people in the world who see the beauty in others without passing judgment, that means they have not been harmed by you, but should your condition change, without notifying them something is wrong, they innately become quiet. It's you that put that dark cloud over them, and it's your job as an adult, to remove that dark cloud, no matter how many unwanted attentions they get, that airspace over their head, is not to get connected to anyone watching, and what controls how they feel should always be based on who loves them protected from harm, not thrown under a microscope in life for study no matter how beautiful and insightful they are, don't ruin childhoods, how we turned out okay. We do our best apart, and we may have struggled romantically, but that doesn't mean that the odds are against us, and this is what Parents are for, if we do our part, that creates less problems for them moving forward to make decisions for us, and that's what being an adult is about, not needing your Parents, not involving your Parents, and being of service to them work, follow your dreams but within reason, and if things are not working out for you on a spiritual level its okay to take a step back, and pick up new skills, that need not be divulged in public. Sharing my Masters Dissertation in public, was sharing my progress, that wasn't code for something else, or to allude to an issue not stated, I think we all have personal issues, that are not of public importance, not if they don't affect people from my life, and especially not with regards to studying people, I don't check any of my friends profiles, have not the entire time Ive been on Facebook, for some reason. I love them, and I would never put them under any unwanted spotlights in life. Its never too late, to own your condition, with empathy for theirs, subjected to pressures in life, that popularity cannot solve, and Im sorry if they were ever looked into for insights beyond me. When your options become limited, by whatever has happened to you.

Personal Update ...

Although writing helps Im sure, I dont think I said things in a helpful way for myself, saying "everyone except me" in my SCOTUS poster, and "#hateleslie" I think people literally thought that was the solution, remember I am human, and people are capable of misidentifying me as going or gone, or a goner. Im sorry for whatever its worth. Keep my distance from others, and be more in control of my mental health, not in private share and not in public share, usually I am good about making sense and being helpful, but I guess this year had a few rough months, getting back to normal. Im sure there will always be people trying to configure hardship for you, (dont assume the worst, less is more) assuming your some loose canon in life, flagrant with words, loose lipped, with no strategy in mind, thats keeping things calm, as you can see when Twitter stopped, and vlogging and photos, that changed everyones tone, not just mine, but the energy of a crowd that was in dire need of hope, Im an AAS Suicidology Conference Reviewer of Abstracts again this year, I would never shout stuff out, I was not capable of completing the work myself, sick slow or tired, if my hearts in it, the work will get done, no matter what meds Im on, thats how right I feel about doing the right thing, and not allowing my identity to get hurt, anymore than it already has been, worked in the street, worked online, losing jobs, I get it Im not tough, and theres something about me, they do not want to deal with, like when my mouth is moving and my face turns upside down, or if I sound jolly, I keep thats tuff to myself and fix it, I dont panic. So being the news a #stopsuicide Joaquin style message on paper was made, maybe something none of my viewers wanted to be challenged by, another hashtag, Im sorry, I put my Dads Durkheim "Suicide" Book on my nightstand in College I think home, I never read it, but I guess everyone saw it. Thats one example of everyone knowing something, that they remember about you, so if you do something crazy like put red hot chili pepper light leading up to a Christmas Tree with a white blanket over it, after writing a letter apologizing for war overseas, and my Dads condition after getting a hemangioma and almost died 2008, had a massive tumor removed form his liver. I stay calm, and never fail to communicate, wore a Beatles T-Shirt Help, my Ex took, and he left me the other T-Shirt "Come Together" and gave my sister a print and had one for myself, from Bloomingdales, I bought the T-Shirts in the mens section, maybe helpful to them, I hope so. The Gym T-Shirts thing was the first "grassroots" move I ever made, Damion Wayne worked out on ellipticals.

There is a slight chance without being told anything, that you could save a life, simply by informing someone who could be in harms way, and that's how I met Barack Obama (2008) sent him one message. Never blame others for your misunderstandings in life. Speak your mind, but with relevance, that's how to inform someone, not by stating a fear. When your timing in off, occurs when you allow yourself to fall behind in life, and that is why others may think you are not quick enough, and too slow to be of service to anyone, better off without your inputs in life. What is your worth then, as a has been, by chance, something privately discussed, not for the public to judge me by whys in life. You either do or do not have an instinct for awareness, and its only when one feels connected to anyone, that things stand out, sometimes relevant, and sometimes we don't know why, best to put your faith and condition in the hands of someone in charge of everyone, not allow those ideas to be thought of too much, that is bipolar, going backwards and investigating what as to whom and why, because of whom, and by whos advices, that was my bipolar episode. Which was narrowed down to someone overdosing on meds, after a bottle of adderrall was flushed down the toilet, that was because the direction I was going in was not understood, don't let anyone cue you into anything in life, online, or in real life, its bound to take its toll on your senses, if its something they are trying to figure out in life, its not your job to figure out what they want to know and why, that's how you inadvertently subject your own family, to appearing stronger than they are, this is way beyond an acceptable amount of pressure in life, to treat those who have done their best, but are not responsible for what happens to me in life, they can protect me, but they cannot ensure that everything goes right for me in life. -You cant get away with anything in life, not random thoughts, not random fears, not justified hardships, and certainly not with a negative mindset, I don't think I would be alive today if I was living in fear, worried about what everyone else was on in life, that's them, you do you. When you work for the government it's a privilege, and trust is granted so long as you deserve to be a member, but if you complain, is how things change, badges and IDs and Drivers Licenses requested for. If you ever feel unstable, it just means that the job is not a good fit, that doesn't mean that there is something wrong with you or them, if anyone is being hard on you, its because you are not performing to standard, or being too sensitive to the requests of others, that's normal office talk, its an important job, go by their direction, and learn to trust your superiors in life, not take anything too personally. Im sorry if by memory, my story presented itself to appear differently, whether by emails, or writings, at any point in time, quick decisions made, and that's how you become lost, when you no longer represent what you were, when you lose composure under stresses, its by your behavior that you either subject yourself to attack in life, or become apart of anyone equation for wellness, that's getting involved, there are always risks, in taking a stand, sometimes in order to stop a behavior from occurring, and becoming further disempowered by others, you need to connect and get help, but if you are on your own, and still get hurt, then that's on you, nothing to do with them, and so the cookie crumbles, survived it all, and still got hurt, before the nest stage in life. Take the pain with a grain of salt, if youre not street smart, youre not street smart, if you get aggravated easily, that just means you cant handle rejecting people who are nice to you, and that's not your fault, if you feel uncomfortable setting a boundary, I think I made myself sound much tougher than I was, when I get scared Im actually terrified and half gone, that's when something happens to you, that doesn't seem bad, but the damage has already been done, if talked about, that's hanging out with people you meet in West Hollywood. No one will believe how much work it took just to stay normal, and make progress year to year, an unrealized pressure to be avoided in life, why I hid my friends on Facebook 2008. I think along the way, I forgot, and it was not until two family friends passed away, that I thought more about it. If anyone feels under attack, that should be something investigated, and if you feel like your being watched that's not a "Fergie joke," that's a legit fear, with computers and profiles these days, you can never be too careful, I know no one believes in spiritual stuff but you are who you connect to in life, and it doesn't matter how faithful, or serious you take life, you can get hurt online to the same extent you can get hurt in real life, that's when a quick decision is made about you, that's when things get personal, thats when someone takes a shot at you, and sees what youre made of, and although an aggressive experiment, scared me nonetheless, tired. Thats the pain of opening up to people, they think youre invincible, asking for it, and its not until you give up, that everyone turns on you, just apologize and move on, don't fight at all.

When Things Start Clicking ...

When things start clicking when it comes to entertainment and music, value those moments, recognizing when we were at our best, and the moments we fell off key, that's the gift being evaluated and maintained by people in power who manage the gift and its continuance overtime, that's through preservation, when one who is gifted with a mic, has the power to lift an entire crowd of people, and makes them feel good, apart of. If it seems exciting, and if youre into it, that could mean its something we are working on, or figuring out for ourselves, maybe not something known, why there is so much room for growth and not a solid cohesive comprehension of how, if its something that needs work, trust that those who value all people, will continue to evaluate, and re-evaluate, whats working, and whats causing "cognitive dissonance." Which is, "the state of having inconsistent thoughts, beliefs, or attitudes, especially as relating to behavioral decisions and attitude change." [1] If you have time to think about life, always see things in the positive, and accept that things may not have always been this way, and accept that not everyone was connected in the past. You arrive to life, you arrive to connections in life, and you arrive to understanding in life, and if its stuff you never noticed about life, then that's a gift too, to not be bothered by things that may bother some, or seem relevant to their understandings in life, makes sense to them. I don't think bipolar will ever make sense, and that's the frustrating part, of getting to know someone who was well, and seeing them fall apart, or experience difficulties in life, we cant all powerhouse through our days, that's also a gift in life. So if it means anything to anyone, Im sorry, that I'm not perfect, I could be doing better, I could be more reassuring, and I could be more positive about myself, and not sound like I'm giving up, or lend insights to hate, or where hate is coming from and why. People are free to think what they want to think, and if they so choose to treat you as a character by choice, connecting whatever they want to your identity, the more you try to understand why, the less credible you become, it may be hurtful to not be believed, it may be hurtful for them to spell your middle name backwards, and make jokes, about your quotes, and they may think how your life is set up, is intended to communicate in a tasteless, and tactless way, that's looking at your life through the lens, of someone looking for associations or communications to those who are considered infamous, or known for failures in life, which is never a joke, nor is discussion of world leaders past or present, and compare someone who is struggling in life, to a country that struggles with its own people, that's comparing situations different, as similar, based upon an incident in which one turned on a family member, and later signed a peace treaty with The President, while he was overseas in Asia, that was a monumental moment in life, and that must mean that it was safe to communicate, and that times were conducive to speaking to each other. Later failures, are neither parties responsibility to cure confusion when it comes to why there are fires, why there is COVID, that simply means to be appreciative of when acceptances of people were granted, recognize on what basis people were accepted, and don't blame world politics on social politics, or entertainment politics, on the basis of who is here or who has past, sometimes it is those who suffer who cared most, always so your best to appreciate a system of trust built in a way, to support the wellness of others, a job well done. If a system of trust falls apart, that means whoever that system has been entrusted to, is not producing the same results, and probably means that whoever was of value then, has lost faith as to now, like the Cocoon writer, who burned all his scripts, didn't mean anything then, but could mean something now. Remember those moments when people gave up, and do your best not to give up too in life. Its not a failed system, of care, its by who is willing to care, who is able to care, and who is hired to care, show up, and be present that is what matters most, be thankful for everyone who has stepped up to the plate. Its never too late, to stop coding, and its never too late, to stop making derogatory jokes toward people and treat them like characters or villains, eventually the daily wear and tear of playful taunting, and uncertainty, can cause someone who supports an industry to lose their spirit in life. Sometimes a solution to alleviate pains, requires that those pains be addressed, and sometimes based upon who is addressing those pains, can cause pain to the person, who is trying to help, and that's how someone who is trying to help, gets made to look bad, or appear as the influence that dismantles what is going well, of course not. See people as people, be thankful for who has been well, and stayed well, and don't look at me, and misidentify me, as someone who ever saw any system as failed, I always have faith in who cares. It's a matter of respect, that trust is given to people, to share their insights. And that requires that one be respectful of those who have come before them, and with reservations share, that's being careful, sharing what you know, with hope that by what is shared, a better understanding will occur, with more appreciation and less criticism for anything that didn't completely fit together to solve anyones understandings of what went wrong, or why, and not blame entertainment. I think as someone enthusiastic about film and music, a fan my whole life, with breaks, its never a system of production I ever questioned, or ignored, and have always relied on them for wellness, when I had the time, if I had the time, and no matter what the times looked like, never thought for two seconds that my identity mattered, if connected or related, which is what I later came to understand in life, that by how things look, upon appearing in public, needs to be clarified, as not having been known in childhood, not all along, never known or thought about, fathomed. So when later information was shared, that was to seek confirmations as to whether I was ever thought about in the process or production, just to make sure, what I appeared to be a knowing party to, having been apart of any movement, please do not mix codes, or create codes, to build better understandings of those who have caused others harmed, that hurts me and everyone. That's making a joke, out of systems of trust, that prevent this type of pain, unnecessary misunderstanding, by immediate insults taken as to: nighties, and clothing bins, and photos. That's a dramatic assumption, that one who wears clothes or represents them in a certain way is connected or understands why a system is being attacked and for what reasons, please do not hurt me, expecting answers from me to prevent attack, when I get sick, I get attacked. Therefore that's an unnecessary use of force, just to get a confirmation, or perspective, for assurances. If I wasn't a Law Student, I would have had time to think about life in that way, had I not taken a Film course in college, I would not have met Michael Moore, and seen his two films, with a cocaine addiction, and not seat in the classroom for me. If youre ahead in the game, stay there. And don't feel sorry for anyone, who was misunderstood, to not be with it, or in support of all.

The One Catch ...

The one catch to being a public figure, is that you have to stay well, otherwise you run the risk of bringing the whole team down, including those who admired you from a far. That's when you have to step away from life, reassess what's important to you, and figure out what is best for you moving forward. If you have to think about it, that means you're not strong enough for it, if you have done your best, then this is as strong as you will be, and if more is expected, explains why more is not provided, not a fight in sight, no energy for it. For someone who doesn't say much, not too vocal about oneself, and not over-confident around others, it can be a huge load to carry, going to the hospital everytime I'm not well or being sent there if not well. It then becomes a matter of figuring out how I need to be in order to not go to the hospital. Which means stay home, work if I can, or stay home, and not go out, and not drink, and not date, that's best I can do in terms of variables or causes for me being hospitalized. I think if someone feels harmed by me, it's a pressure I'm used to in life, and something they don't have the time to figure out or the energy to get me out of my problems in life, and that's worth being alone for, until I get better. The only fears you hold, are the fears of what has happened or could happen, and those are not good thoughts to have in life, it seems to be the kind of thinking or memory of life, that leads others astray, or causes a loss of hope, if you can't accept things as they are now, then you haven't lived long enough to understand the consequences of sharing in public, a huge step, a lot of faith, not something you do, to put others at risk of harm, and not connections made, prior to passings, but if someone passes, I do my best to figure out what losses of faith occurred, and why, and what was believed then, that caused a condition then, and try to understand why those who have lives, and friends, lost faith in themselves. People are not responsible for your losses in faith, and it's when I am not strong, that I cannot represent or protect others from harm, in a weaker position in life, it's difficult to provide reassurances to others, considered someone who puts people at risk of harm, and that's a blind faith, too much trust, and not enough experience to know or understand what life is like outside of your neighborhood, or elsewhere, aware of what the social temperatures are there, wellness ratios, or struggles. I shared because I was tired of being hospitalized, [blogging makes me no more invincible to mental health issues, I still have to take good care of myself, I actually don't kick my shoes up on my desk ever as a blogger (ie something a supervising Attorney did once, that was when everyone was confident, not worried, I'm assuming they are still well, no matter what I go through on my own in life), it's always intense, no matter how easy it looks, sometimes at ease, and sometimes under pressure, but hopefully more often than not well and not give up in public (it would be assuming that what was thought of me, was thought to have occurred because of what award I applied for which is probably why the same scenario is thought to have happened, under the same context and variables present), lost in life. And that's not the type of life I want to lead, a private life, but with no trust, until proven otherwise reprimanded. That's the life you get left with if you don't listen, and don't abide by house rules, and that's why if you get hurt, it is viewed as being your own fault, and if you get scared it is viewed as something you have done wrong. What later becomes a waste of energy to others, is to know you, meet you, hear your story, then read about instances when you were not spectacular, and that's disappointing. If you knew everyone was watching how would you be in life, and if you could go back in time, and earn back respect in life, what would have done differently. Harms > Blog > Accusations = Conflict, over which came first, and what was the cause for other actions or inaction on your part. I think after having shared all the facts and memories from myself, without respect for timelines, things are better understood to everyone, to equate harms to others, and then search for causes in my timeline, to say my condition causes others to flip out, with needing to prove that I flip out, I don't, I'm on meds, because I think too fast and give up then share in a way, that does not accurately reflect my capacity to recover. When I'm being hard on myself, that's means I am not feeling up to par, or healthy enough for social interaction, it's that loss of confidence that makes it difficult for others to be around you, consider you gone, or having wasted your assets in life, gifts in life, or not going to make it in life, have a job persevere. That could be true, but I'm 35 now, so it's now or never, start working, and that's maybe why I became a blogger. That's without harming anyone, that's not understanding what there is to be grateful for, that's worrying about a past that was dealt with, and looking like someone trying to play hero in the stories of lives of others, unrelated to you. So don't follow your heart, your heart will lead you places, you will be nice to too many people, and you may hurt too many feelings, not being available long enough, not to the extent wanted, not connected forever, I'm online that's good enough, it requires a lot of energy to focus on one person and make one person happy. And I'm not available for experiment, to generate results in favor of a viewpoint of someone new to my life, who doesn't know me, only what he has been told, and decides to cut me out of the picture.

Common Themes Occurring to Someone Left Out:

1. Holds resentment, looks at the past with blame or animosity.
2. Tries to cure their present with highlighting the past.
3. Using the past, to make yourself appear normal, as you were then.
4. Unclear understanding of the causes for you bipolar disorder.
5. Whether your interests are headed in the right direction or subject others to harm.
6. After viewing all of ones personal records, tampered or not, passes judgement.
7. Sees self-harm as a manifestation of dislike for oneself, or hurting oneself well.
8. Whether one self-harms, because of voices, rejection, non-acceptance, or silence.
9. Not being in a reassuring condition, fit to lead others, inspire others, or amuse anyone.
10. Loses faith easily, and then doesn't feel apart of, only thinking about what hurts.
11. When one is finally trusted made apart of after 8 years, gets harmed.
12. That's to see how one responds upon losing everything again in life.
13. To see whether one becomes violent, or hostile, moody, test for outbursts.
14. Then see whether one who is not well, outbursts in public to others, goes AWOL.
15. There is a condition of patients on 5150, who get put on stronger holds.
16. That's when they act out of turn, or shout at guests, spit on them, the speakers.
17. And then there is Autism, having an Autistic neighbor.
18. Then all your conditions are reviewed, to see whether you meet, know, and imitate conditions of others to communicate, or whether you are you on your own.
19. I am me on my own, without any inappropriate influences be mentioned.
20. Some do not come back from mental health issues, and that's something that is not known about patients, they can recover, but it requires heavy monitoring and meds.
21. Its therefore only appropriate to share about your condition, if recovered.
22. And if that makes other people feel strong, and better than, so be it, good job.

When Someone Has a Bad Feeling About You ...

Your ability to fit in matters. And if you have a history of having your number changed, or being sent to rehab, that means the condition you were in was not tolerable, and that its not okay for you to drink or to party, not all are capable of being strong, and having fun. What is on the line? Is your mental health. Therefore, based on what is known about you, how you speak, and appear in public, is what is used to verify or confirm whether you have potential, or whether you go the extra mile, to fix yourself in life, or in response to your past. A protest in a protest, and idea for caring, is to deflect attentions away, and to continue to inspire others, that doesn't mean that all the issues have been covered, or the wrong issues misrepresented. You learn later in life, you can feel good about something, and once things do not go right for you in life, are judged to be someone who has blind faith, and takes things too far, neither resolving what has been done, nor provides helpful insights, as to what needs to be done, in avoidance of what pains in life. During my bipolar episode 2008, it was a blog and what was written online, that scared me, and actually believed that threat, an Attorney in the valley. So to better understand why, I went to Law School, what was wanted to be known, what I know, and how to reply to anyone who thinks that I know things that help me, and not helping others by providing information to help them figure out whatever it is they are trying to figure out in life. I found a pile of books at the Courthouse, and then took a picture, and bought one online, the same book, and found an important passage when it comes to "campaigning for a cause" or "posting flyers down sunset and hollywood boulevard" what that looked like, a long shot. And if what you believ in looks like a long shot, not the right way, not the right focus, never gonna happen, its by that bad feeling about you, that people make decisions in life, including what you say online. Therefore if you do not have faith in a cause, and do not think it important to support the wellness of others, then don't do anything that appears to not "understand the difference between "wishing for constructive interaction [that] end[s] up in destructive conflict -in daily life and on a larger global scale as well." (page 128). [1] Which is why people labeled drug addicts, or alcoholics are not trusted, and not easy to have faith in, its because of their decisions in life, lose faith in them, and the setbacks faced by others, whether or not you knew ever relied upon you to stay well, and say the right things, well that faith gets lost too. By the time you figure out what life's about, what makes people feel well, you'll recognize your lost sense of faith in yourself, and its not until you lose a quality you have had your whole life, that it becomes evident that the condition you're in was feared by others, because they have a better understanding of addictions, and causes for lost senses of faith, heartache and let downs, and connections. Identify the "assumptions" with regard to "what components are necessary ... to be constructive and reasonably conflict free." (page 128) [2] And if it means staying sober, then accept those parts of you, and if it was a straw found in a pouch, from when a friend from Boulder visited, then it was that straw that saved that made you look like it was a regular activity you partook in, and if you went on a date and blew a line, its that moment that ruined your momentum, that's taking chances in life, that's living a fast life. And if it's a moment in time shared, its because it was a moment that changed me, that I'm not sure bettered me, or hurt the faith of others in trusting me, or hurt my ability to be respected. That's how a few moments in life, can ruin your life, and the rest of your life, gets judged as being like that the entire duration of your entire life, not limited to just those moments of cutting loose. Therefore you have to do more than just state when you made mistakes in life, you also have to prove that you've not damaged yourself nor others, by those experiences in life, and be a better person, no matter how painful life gets, continue working everyday, rain or shine. And that's how positive momentum is built, not based on feelings, not based on worries, not based on love, but by acceptances, and the less you fear, the better you are, the more you complain the more it hurts, the more you talk about the past, the fewer friends you have, that's hurt, something broken that cannot be fixed, that's a loss, time you cannot recover getting back to normal, its your life live it. And if you decide to care for others, and demonstrate that you care for others, make sure to do the following: Components "necessary for positive interaction are caring and effort. ... though important are only part of the picture. ... The indispensable element so often overlooked is skill. In order to relate harmoniously to others while working for world peace, those in the movement need to know the skills of peacemaking and how to use them. They need to be competent." (page 128) [3] Finish your education. And always in advance let others know, where you are coming from, that you cannot change, what your about, and what life you have lived. Therefore, stating your purpose serves "to differentiate [your] purpose from method [with assurances not to interfere with the good faith of others, or choices]: [and] purpose refers to the goal or outcome, method refers to the steps for getting there (people are more willing to discuss methods when they see that they share common purpose. To limit conflict by limiting the conversation to the stated purposes and issues of the discussion." (page 131). [4] Meaning you cannot change the past, only through acceptance, and forgiveness, can the past be forgotten. And once you've shared your story, be mindful that: "Two things become clear: (1) When you try to punctuate a conflict you discover it is impossible to find an agreed-upon beginning: and (2) How each party punctuates the conflict makes a tremendous difference in their attitude toward the solution. If you feel the other party started it, then you probably think they are the ones who should have to back down." (page 126) [5] Allow people to think whatever they want to think, and thank those who did care, those who no longer care, those who feel hurt or left out of your life, and do your best to return back to a normal life, just as everyone else has made for themselves.

The Brighter Your Future ...

The brighter your future, the more important your time becomes, that's being in the here and now, and although sometimes we may lose focus, that just means that our potential is not limitless, but within reason, and requires one to be in total acceptance of others, happy for others, without reservations, some dots were not meant to be connected, even if back to you. Well, or not. A solid hand in life, always deserves a solid explanation. And if its not on the top of your head, think harder, about what lifes about, and work until you understand the value of hard work, and the importance of acceptance in life, and that when you leave, that door remains shut. Accept what time has been lost, accept forgiveness, and kindness, without expectation, and not if they will be harmed if put under the same pressures as you in life. If you cant save your relationship, and have too many issues, not talked about, then that is why one ends up alone, until they talk. You will never leave a good life, for a better life, that's the hand you lose in life, to who you gave love to, who moves on in life, no one waits or begs, that's on you to be wanted in life. That's leaving one life, for a hard life, the path you choose in life, should add up to something in life, worth living for, otherwise its best not to say anything. Even if you are convinced you are seeing things clearly, there may be a fact or two about life youre forgetting to talk. In order for your story to make sense to everyone, who may have accepted you differently, unimpressed. Always see in the positive in rejection in life, its not until you are acceptable by most, that it makes sense why you were rejected in the first place. A big head, a know it all, a "dream," a poor investment, a bad idea, without good faith, and that's why "guilt" is proven, to then argue that if this was in bad faith, then this was in bad faith, then this person has bad faith, and is not coming from a good place in life, with resentments, and that is someone who is not trusted business wise, anyone with an edge to prove themselves, appears to be someone trying to prove others wrong, or prove themselves to what standards in life, and its that unnecessary waste of energy, that is waited to be expended to see what you look like and sound like when you have done something wrong, and how long it takes for you to get back to normal, or not at all. You either give up in life and let whats not said to your face win, or you accept your reality, as not composed of the same feelings you get, upon doing well in life, or at peace. On a scale of 1-10, how hard have you worked? This is my best? How defensive was I, not at all. How many complaints did I file about others, none at all. How many times did I fail? And why? And is love or companionship necessary to feeling good, no its not necessary, it's a feeling had and shared out of the goodness of my heart. That's what happens when you present yourself as alcoholic, that's the quickest way to being rejected in life, your mental health is king, and if you lose that to alcohol and bad decision making, why youre having a hard time being you, without people seeing you as something else in life. Listen, live, and learn. When people get turned off, its because they think you have done something wrong, or are doing something wrong, have done something wrong, or because of your choices in life, fell on your own merits, with nothing to do with what others thought of you, being well is a goal for everyone, so is doing well in life, and although we don't always get choose who to love, or who loves us, that doesn't mean that we should be judged by them either, or judged less for those losses. If a better life can be lived apart, then that's a choice to allow others to grow, absent minded your problems and questions in life. Easier said than done. Don't ask for forgiveness don't apologize, just improve without being a burden to others, and if its worth it to you, to try for a career in life then do so, that's having blind faith. Without specific purpose, doing something that you love, being social, and writing, allowing others to get to know you, with or without public speaking skills. See next post book review.*

Count on Who? ...

We would leave your New Years party too, a go to the NY Meditation Coach (Record Label's) house too, by the time we got there, everyone was dancing on tables, with my first public boyfriend. Growing up he played the movie: Cube, we were the only two people with mini disc players, my BFF bought me one for $500. A device that never took off, I was a tape cassette radio recorder, and would make my mixtapes off the radio, start, stop, rewind, cue, record, someone even asked me to make them one too. There are so many role models in life, why waste time in worry, why not to stick your head into matters unless they directly involve you, and if not, assume nothing is about you, that's sickness. When you look back, and see negatives, or review your past for anything negative that's ever occurred or anytime your feelings have been hurt, that's what AA is for, to figure out why you were drinking, or why you did drugs, and what happened in your life, that caused you to cut loose and stop performing, what void was filled by doing so. Usually nothing positive, and everything negatives comes out of you, that's just standard procedure, Im sure its to weed out people, who don't feel good, and also have difficulty speaking. I was lucky enough to be a younger sister growing up, no one ever tried to fight me, I had no boyfriends, so never threatened by women, never competitive with, always had friends, whether in a group or one on one, but once you mention the past, you become responsible for representing yourself well, and avoid the risk of misrepresenting those who you mutually admired in life, and never had a problem with. We used to hang out in a little room, covered with glow in the dark stars, under his staircase, I grew up one of the guys, even after my Brother screamed at me for going on AOL on his computer, deleted my account screen name, so didn't get to chat with anyone, or their fancy screen names they made up. That's when the times were innocent, without the pressure of being watched, the positive referencing only goes well for as long as those vaguely referenced are well, and Im doing my best, not to bring others down in life, and to appreciate where I came from, those were the best years of my life, High School, when I had tons of friends, that was before smoking weed, and going away to college, and quit smoking weed, and played club soccer instead, and didn't drink for three years, and excelled in school instead. There are so many positive examples of people from my life who are doing well now, and Im sure they have been careful about their exposures in life, not allow themselves to be directly affected, or mismanaged by anyone. Whats a compliment? A compliment can be something you see, or you know, that not everyone knows, and that's to let you know that you a special, without proof. There is being appreciative and grateful for having known people with connections or successful parents and industry professionals, had it not been for your upbringing, you would not be so sure of yourself, or so overprotective, and let more things slide, and that's a matter of satisfaction and personal happiness, not their issue with you, unless you mention others, youre not connected to, by contact, phone, or by friendship, just known in passing, and that's how someone who is not in the in crowd, runs the risk, of being treated like an outsider to any in crowd, with no friends. -When things aren't working out for you in life, think? Am I being proper, do I sound more confident than I am, am I bringing unwanted attentions to people I know? How would others feel, knowing I was blogging online? Im sure they would not want to be mentioned, even at this point in time, if Im not helping everyone does that mean Im hurting anyone? If Im not well, does that mean that someone else will not feel well because of me? Exactly how do connections work online, if the givers in pain, or bipolar, what occurs on the receiving end to a reader? If a good feeling is not had, then people leave, or my Alexa does not go up, and I am immediately notified, to keep it positive, if I ever give up, or talk about the moments when I was most ill, then I go through it again, except, not with the same dramatic results or actions such as self-harm, the more accepting you are of your condition, the better able you are at coming to terms with the fact that you will always be this way, and not to push yourself to your limits in life, not to worry what others think, and continue to make simple and smart choices in life, and not affect the lives of those who are doing well, and also don't want to be blamed or made apart of any controversies. If you leave friends for drugs, they always come back, if you leave friends for the internet, you may be hard to talk to, and if you leave a boyfriend you were going to marry after three years of dating, don't complain if your 35 and single, and no one is sure about you, no one knows what to do with you, and no one knows your true worth and value, why? Because if you don't have a job, and have a life of your own, then it looks like you are expecting to date and be provided with a new life and make friends through them, and that's a big imposition to someone, to love you, and introduce you to everyone they know. Big steps, don't take personally, eventually once you are proud of yourself, and after having revisited all your most embarrassing moments, you will overcome whatever it is you are going through, with a kind heart, with positive purpose, and with maybe a little less humor.

Personal Update ...

10/28/2020

Not feeling well, couldn't sleep last night, finished reading: "Working for Peace" by Neil Wollman, started around page 59 and read all the way to the end. Sleep is important. Especially with Bipolar, you really cant be doing anything wrong, otherwise you don't feel well. -Keep it positive = Wellness.

Forgiveness, Overthinking, and Offense Taken ...

Some go by the Bible, and some go by Stories, Characters, or known Celebrity downfalls. If by what you reference, you are later identified as having thought about or trying to communicate about. -When in a rush, to publish my first manuscript, figured out how, I was given a few stock images to choose from, instead of being blue like Facebook, chose the next simple cover, the graph. I got an A in Advanced Legal Writing, with the same professor, I got a C in Civil Procedure with. Each day, what was discussed in class, was stuff I wrote about in my paper, which was already submitted, and I kept getting As anyways, only later, recalled but never though she was purposefully trying to irk me, I was quiet that semester, and didn't share my grades out loud, and didn't work in groups, I worked alone that semester, every night on Westlaw, while taking two other course, finals I wanted to skip, but was made to take one. This was Spring 2011, that semester I got dumped during finals, and was hospitalized and then sent to rehab for two months, with a job in DC working for DC Law Students in Court, and a Witken Award. I was only prescribed two adderralls at the time, and 5 didn't make a difference 2017, prescribed by my then Psychiatrist. It shouldn't matter what others are up to, so long as you are not up to the same questions or line of understandings in life, then that's how you stay normal, away from issues, not directly affecting you, not until you think about it, speak to it, and that's how you get looked at, see what else you see, or have seen, and at what point did you become led by others, mislead by others, and when alone, by your exposures do you cause yourself harm. Ponder the fact that maybe some systems of wellness, are not based upon you doing well, but with a frame of mind, of being better than you, looking better than you, and being nothing like you, and its not until you bring up issues, or appear sensitive, to things people like to do, that you don't do yourself, is when you get looked at to see whether you are part of, or saying things hurtful to those who can describe themselves in that way, ie modeling. Its not for everyone. Ponder the fact that people who become successful may take a look around, and then go for it in life, that's if they think they have what it takes to succeed a rock solid idea, they know will take off, and on what bases they think that it will attract whether or not it has done a disservice to the image, esteem, or wellness of someone thoughts about with respect to it, an app. Ponder the fact, that if you are someone no one cares about, its not until you think about it, that it happens, and that's not how to treat me or etc., and its not until stated, it hurts and maybe to all. Sometimes people take it too far, meaning exclude you on the basis of who you are, or based upon what has been done to the rest of your identity in life. No one is strong enough for hits to be put out on them in life, or for others to rally together in knowing someone or something about look down upon another, as not being apart of, that's when everything done with love, looks like with hate. -Sorry for the misunderstanding. cc: UWLA, she was a NY DA.

Don't Lose Your Audience ...

With respect for the times, YES its required that you maintain internal harmony, that's key. And no we don't care what you name your kids, the scooters, were made because I told a story about OJ letting us ride electric bikes as adolescents in our neighborhood in the 90s. So a covered party by "Leslie's Laws," and I think that's why they are stealing Christmas Trees.

“Leslie’s Law: If in the process of committing a good deed, something wrong occurs, not on ones end, but on the end of others, hence the “green lines” on Ocean Ave. and on Montana where I used to live on Harvard alone 2016, that means, so long as what is being said, and what is being done, does not relate to what has been done, you cannot revoke the rights of anyone new to share, with good faith, that they are not sharing to make points in reference to any other parties with a stake in the turn around of factors employing insights to others, without them being aware of how and why, should evidence be retained of knowledge of use of a theme, related to a “poster” purchased in Boulder of a girl snapping, means a later finding, overrode an apps. That’s a persons right to express themselves in fashion or nighties, without others assuming that fashion in nighties was done so in reference to a shooting in Aurora, not to view someone as an unwanted admission, when one was not a knowing party, by taking down a poster on Wilshire. The photo of the poster taken down by me of Barack Obama, was on a Box on Wilshire. Then I drove in circles for a few years at night, and two BMWs died, and one on Westwood. If actions are relevant to a prior harm done, not created by someone, one is not responsible for the initial harm to reputation done, defacement of a President, or for harms occurring in others States to connect to other systems of reacting, created in representation of the loss of a loved one due to the LAPD’s decision making procedures, just like I was punished for not hooking up with the Ex-Boyfriend of a Woman who was killed by a copy car in a silent running drill, a Sponsor to an underclassman who I carpooled, in High School. I reserve the right to remain separate from other expressions, and name changes, or created work products, that reflect differing views whether or not I am identified as not being a member to a current solution, or whether I'm included as apart of. That's not connecting the luck and functioning of others, to myself, check me to check them. That is trying to create a connection, by affecting my health, to see if anyone else is affected. That's not guilt, that's manipulation of someones condition, to change the tone, to match what is wanted from them, without them knowing or understanding why, or how they could be harmed by the expressions of others, if done in relation to me, done for themselves, or connected to me. If my success is dependent upon my wellness, then please allow my website to speak for itself. If I was not well, I would not be ranked where I am today, and wasting time, energy, and resources, or intelligence, on fighting mini personal issues, detracts attentions away from more important things to talk about, that's to make me an unhelpful contributor, not be viewed as someone at peace. If someone at peace becomes disturbed by the actions of another, that should not be tolerated, treat me as though I've been inactive, I've been active for many years now at peace. My happiness is affected just as others unhappiness affects those close to them, I understand that. Why would I cause unhappiness or instability to anyone, if suffered by me, hurts the same. If someone retaliates on me, in honor of someone, they connect everything to me by, and then treat me as the unwanted influence to others, that's them thinking I control, or have privileges in life. I don't have a job, I don't have money, this is my job, and book was for money. Don't retaliate." Always End Things on a Positive Note ...

That's just how people are always alluding to things, to feel better about themselves, to them that's being smart with you, and to offend you is what makes them feel good, to see what you sound like with your defenses up being so resolute about things. What irks you, what bothers you, what you find offensive and why, what you read into and why, whether what you know or see is readily applicable to yourself, your identity, or your personal history for that matter relevant to their understanding of characters past, whether your character or identity was known past, or acted for and on behalf of those who committed crimes against others, and that's how you are judged in life, whether you had knowledge or knowingly presented self, knowing that others knew you, on what basis were you known to others, and whether you presented yourself and became known, to counter any negative inferences made as to your identity, when where and why and for what end result. Is the bases for your success now, relevant to a changed opinion of you, having presented yourself to the world, and were you ever formerly offended by any presentations pasts, thinking any song or movie was about you, were you underground then, at what time did you become underground, and on what bases have others found success, in spite of knowing you, in spite of comparing you, in spite of hearing your story, what is your personal worth in life, and how has your personal worth improved, by being known to all. How does that make you feel, reassured, relevant, and why? What are your standards of living, and how was that made possible, was what you compared your life to, intended to insult who cares about you no, and was it a problem that you were affected by as a Law Student getting your JD, yes, and by whos Father were you affected by my Best Friends father, who relayed a message to me through his daughter while he was in jail 2008, which overwhelmed me and compelled me to do research, after Google searching my name, and found a deposition, which I read and was not fond of at the time, and noticed that later paranoia experienced by the Attorney in a hotel room across the street from a Courthouse, as described, who is now a Corporate Defense Attorney. To me registering as a Corporation made sense, not to be imitated, not to be copied, not to be an identity further distributed in an underground way, to me that was not a proper form of influence, not readily identifiable to all, and to me that system, presented a professional issue of me, not to be included, in the artistic representations of reality, as the times were understood by me. I think that's an unnecessary pressure to put oneself under, as though one sense of being is supposed to inspire change in others, or represents accurately what any positive changes need occur as related to the time. When I posted flyers down Sunset and Hollywood Boulevard, the police smiled at me, and no that was not in response to Aurora, and no that was not in response to High School, or with the intent to mimic a scene from the Movie: Mean Girls, and that was not with the intent to draw attentions to a former case: Columbine, and the reasons for which that crime occurred. And that was not in distaste for a Party attended in Las Vegas (August 2008) in which the ex-girlfriend of Marilyn Manson performed in a martini glass, at the Planet Hollywood hotel in Las Vegas, where we stayed, with my Ex, whos great grandfather Dr. Debakey passed away while we were dating, my Ex crying to me in a casino, as I handed him a wad of cash to gamble with, crying because his great grandfather donated all of his money, and he inherited none. I spent $1000 on my outfit for the Party in Las Vegas, shoes from Sakes, dress from Neimans. The flyers were made in confidence, not with guilt, with energy, I tapped each one myself, the entire day, posting, parking and posting, parking and posting, until the evening. That was when I was well. There are emotional responses, that are done so in the positive with faith, and there are emotional responses done so, with a loss of faith, that was not one of them, that was with faith. Self-harm is an emotional response with a loss of faith, as aggravated, or bothered, when things hurt, or don't make sense, when what you think people are thinking is in the negative, because of whom and why, and a condition you choose not to think through, and react poorly too, taking handfuls of meds, or hitting your head, which does you a disservice, and does not help others to make better sense of the times, or the past, or come to better understand your relationships with the past. I have no relationship with the past, and its not through story-telling that relationships occur, to the past, and with risk, or a new relationship being made, to a future incident, as related to me, is what was done to me, to hear my history, for another to develop their own theorem of the past, to say that I was never apart of well, that people who were not well knew me, or did things in life, as to me, or my well being, as though my mental health condition threatens the odds, or chances for violence to occur, or with comrades as to my personal history, and that's an unwanted connection drawn to you, to see for how long you understood life, and for how long after looking back did you assemble your life, to understand anything as having occurred in the negative. Its not until you share, that your life gest assimilated to the past, for others to come to know the past differently, and that's how an identity is used, to understand life differently, as through their lens in life, or upon being viewed, come to see happenings in life, whether or not related to them, how they lived their life, what they were like then or now, to determine whether anyone fights for or on behalf of them, and that's why one is being judged in the negative to see whether if apart, how they make others feel smart or not, and to see what they are like not apart of, whether that translates to negative happenings in the lives of others, to determine whether my life is a cause for action, toward others, or whether my life, is a cause for reaction in disfavor of my identity, or done as a result of my identity being known, like a school shooting, or Monica Lewinsky, or Jim Carreys movie career path (Bauer's Dad was his agent), or Clueless, or Mean Girls (book): collaged my Latin textbook with my friend in Middle School with magazine pictures, or the Movie: Green Book, in which "OJ relayed a message to me "he was eating a bucket of fried chicken," before I attempted suicide, after making binders, calling all my friends and leaving voicemails, put my red hot chili pepper lights on the ground of my balcony up to my mini Christmas tree after watching CNN on ceremonial killings, and cut my wrists, and swallowed a bottle of kolonopin and woke up in the hospital at UCLA, in the first wing. No I am not famous, I have never been famous or well known in my entire life, and I just started social climbing on Twitter (2013) one and off until 2020, fully launching my website now for 2 solid years writing everyday or everytime I had something nice to write about. You will never understand what the times were like then before Law School, but the times were quiet. And it doesn't matter how self-assured others are in life, you will not feel good, until you feel the same way confident.

You can only live life through once through, and even if you never make it back, from any bipolar delusions, never lose faith in yourself. So long as you are at peace, you owe nothing to anyone in life, in order for them to have their peace with you, some just don't know how to respond to someone who is giving it their all and doing their best, expects more. Its not proper to think about things until you become aggravated, and snap, become unsettled, and its also not okay to share things in a way, that makes others feel shorthanded in life, like they weren't in the know, or shouldn't've been privied to what creates success for others in the workforce, what is comprehended and believed by them to be occurring, that is making them on time in life. We cant all be on the same page in life, you are either willing to take risks in life, and carve a new career path for yourself, and create opportunities for yourself, or allow yourself to be limited, by what people think or say to you, as though confirmations from others, are needed to cause a disbelief in yourself, and change the current opinions of you held, which is indifference. There is reliability, there is over-dependence, there is trust, and there is value, there is temperament, and there are causes, there is understanding, and there is misunderstanding and entitlement. The only one entitled to your wellness, and fullness of thought is you. No one on this planet is being shortchanged in life, or kept from the inner workings of the successes of others, this is why I have: (1) personal updates (2) progress photos (3) continue my education (4) apply for jobs (5) maintain friendships (6) close to ex-boyfriends (7) was interested in politics when and why (8) share my medical history timeline online (9) am easy to know, I give plenty of information about myself in advance always, for others to have the power of choice to know me or not know me.

What creates success? Sometimes it involves working together, working in public, sharing, being consistent, studying what you know, learning from new knowledge, expanding your understandings of life, experiencing losses, understanding losses and the effect of having suffered a loss in life, to take your life seriously, to care about everyone, and to not waste time in life, with anyone who does not accept you as you are, who thinks your power is in privilege, not in your work ethic, who thinks you are strong, not capable of being broken and suicidal again. That's a condition caused, once recovered from, does not occur again, unless one feels equally lost, powerless, without knowing what to do, thinking they are being watched, or not able to meet expectations in life for love and comradere, that's others on a serious note, without you. And suicide has everything to do with what you are doing in life, why you are doing what you are doing in life, what is causing you to do what you are doing in life, and why you are or are not happy with your life.

I would never give up on my blogging career, I've worked too hard for it. I have not failed, because of something I have done, I failed emotionally because of what was done to me, weighing all the jokes in a disfavorable way toward me, treated me as imitation, I'm not imitation of the successes of others, from the ground up I established myself online, alone. And it's not by the stories I tell that builds trust, it's the sacrifices I have made, that made me stable in life, that's not taking chances with my health or the health of others, improving. Whether or not I get hurt, whether or not I inspire, and whether or not I lose focus, potential.

If you don't feel good about yourself, you'll have problems feeling good about yourself. And if your goals in life are not achievable, then set goals for yourself you can manage achieving. My medical history was something about me, not known or shared publicly until 2013, when I sent my medical records to the US Supreme Court, and then started blogging. I don't think that was even a story shared with friends, other than having been hospitalized. You have to be coherent, without bipolar in order to go to Law School and finish Law School, and it's unfortunate, the times I was not able to stay well after finishing Law School, and why I stopped performing in Law School. In order to read case books front to back, and make outlines, and take exams, it's a very time consuming process to learn the language of the law, to memorize the definitions you have written for yourself, and to work from memory on exam day, that was something I later experienced trouble with, not my fault. It's not necessary to know the personal details of someone's life story, rise and fall, or previous suicide attempt, to better understand how and why they are where they are now, those are handicaps to my story, those are not empowering moments of survival to be shared to everyone the causes for my suicide attempt are not known, and it is not my fault, when I get voices, or why I get voices (2017).

Obviously, I was having difficulty comprehending my life in relationship to the lives of others, and probably took personally, the behaviors of others, as having to do with me, and more to do with them. That later disbelief of you, is not them not seeing your potential, it's you not able to undo their lack of faith in you, you are capable of achieving anything you put your mind to, whether or not you are apart of the happiness of others, whether or not you can relate to others, whether or not others do or do not make sense to you, always be yourself, and understand that if you are dramatic, or if you complain, that's when people attack your credibility in life, and that's how you get harmed sharing your story, it not being good enough to make sense to another, means they aren't hearing what they want to hear, means they are not getting the results they wanted, meaning they are not hearing anything that makes them feel understood, and doesn't help them to make sense of things, without generating a negative reaction from you. It's not that someone doesn't care about others when someone doesn't get into details about their life in private or public, it's because it causes re-traumatization of issues, and causes others to attack me as though they are entitled to know something about me, a medical condition, I do not completely understand the causes for myself.

Privilege and Risk ...

We live in a society that bases admiration, upon what someone has that another does not, and so does it follow that conformity occurs, to whatever standards are set by whom and why. That's when you start to think about others on a molecular level, what is it about them, that makes it easy for them to be themselves, forcing some to question themselves in life, which is not helpful. You don't need to be a rocket scientist in order to have all the components of likeability. In fact sometimes it's by what you are not in life, that you wind up finding more comfort in being yourself, rather than forcing yourself to compete in competitions for acceptances in life. It's wrong to size other people up, based upon how intelligent they are, based on what they look like, sound like, or appear in front of us, we all have potential, and some of us don't rise to the occasion, until it becomes evident to us, that what we look like matters in terms of acceptances.

Here are some examples of my experiences in life, what made me eventually special online:

What is Appropriate (Normal):

1. Working toward achieving goals in life.
2. Exercising regularly, in order to feel good.
3. Having compassion from others, whether they are similar or dissimilar to ourselves.
4. Resolving our problems on our own, having some self-agency in life.
5. Feeling able, and doing things in life that make you feel able.
6. Not feeling good about yourself when you're not at your best.
7. Not feeling as pretty as, as successful as, and wanting to live a better life.
8. Not realizing opportunities, until they arise for you in life.
9. Not being able to visualize your future self, while you are working on yourself.
10. Arriving to places in life, you never saw yourself arriving to in life.
11. Having experience in life, and then living a different life, being challenged.
12. Buckling down, to work, and focusing on your schedule to live up to standards.
13. Not being able to stop thinking about something that's bothering you.
14. Worrying about your future, then suddenly living life with ease again.
15. Complaining, and getting upset, then realize there are more important things in life to think about, outgrowing your problems, not reliving the same problems again.
16. Cutting back on things in life, in order to do other things in life better.
17. Not being able to focus on too many things at once, and feeling torn.
18. Thinking about things in a simple way, in case things get more complicated, can revisit where you were, and what helped you get started, and get back to your roots.

What is Inappropriate (Not Normal):

1. To pick up drinking in your late 20s, when you experience your first failure in life.
2. Leave boyfriends, because you think they can live a better life without you, not fit in.
3. Being too uptight and not loosening up from time to time, forgetting to be yourself.
4. Ignoring people, not making eye-contact, and being uncomfortable around people.
5. When there is something noticeably wrong with you, that no one can help you with.
6. Liking people, but being too shy to like people, then not doing well, and needing people.
7. Not realizing what you have, until your progress has been delayed, or ruined for you.
8. Not realizing your self-worth, until everything is perfect, and going well for you in life.
9. Making poor decisions, when it comes to talking to people, just to be loved, spoken to.
10. Making yourself look bad, without realizing how that makes others look too.
11. Not being put together, and by the time you become put together, you're 35.
12. Losing 50 lbs again, because last time you lost 50 lbs, nude photos were asked of you, so that in 2020, when nude photos are asked of you at 192 lbs, you feel paranoid.
13. Thinking that people are going through your computer, and accounts having fun.
14. Thinking that other people are having fun without you, so going out to have fun.
15. Being out and about, and then feeling uncomfortable, sad, or feeling out of place.
16. Not feeling able to date, so when people court you, you don't date, to be alone.
17. When being alone, does not fix your life, and only makes things worse.
18. Talking to yourself through your problems, instead of talking to an actual person.

What does it mean when we just want to be ourselves again? It means you got hurt, why you are in your shell and don't feel like talking to anyone, and don't make eye-contact. You can't hide your soul from people, that only leads to feeling aggravated in life, upon opening up. That's the point, if more is wanted from you that's a good sign, it means that someone is interested in getting to know you, or wants to be close to you, means that you make others feel good to be around you, and that's why they want to know you on an intimate level, to see what you look like, that's Men, they see you they like you, they want to feel you, know you, that means your attractive to them, and then there are Men who see you, like you, adore you, on a friendship level, but prefer to date Women who are more equipped in life for sexual relations, not someone who is sensitive, or not ready for intimacy, that's when they turn on you, if you become immature, lose focus, start to not do well, and become a teeny person on the inside, that means you have childhood trauma, means you need more love than what is given, and that's okay too, some like to be small in love, and some like to be mature in love.

What does it mean when we are hiding our true selves from the ones we love? That means you do not feel comfortable being yourself, or the way you are in life, is not acceptable to others, to hear from you, or to see you being yourself in life, the opposite of love, scolding. What is inhibition? "Inhibition is a core feature of self-regulation, which refers to the process by which people initiate, adjust, interrupt, stop, or otherwise change thoughts, feelings, or actions in order to effect realization of personal goals or plans or to maintain current standards (Baumeister et al. 1994a, Baumeister & Heatherton 1996, Carver & Scheier 1998). [1] Your behaviors, thoughts, [and] emotions make up how you come to identify yourself, it includes, how you learn, your physiology, and determines what cultural predispos[tions] control your thinking. [2] All of which can be controlled via "self-regulation." Why is self-regulation important? Because it is what "allows people to change or overcome" [3] problems associated with being well liked, or proper. And how is this important to being well-liked? "Having a "self" serves the basic social skills necessary for maintaining effective relations," [4] and that includes how you interact with your audience online, and affects who they feel about you, whether you can help, or rub poorly off upon others, its all about the traits we pick up, whats working, and whats not working for us.

What makes up our "self"? There are "cognitive and neurological bases of the material aspects of self," an area of research, that researches have made "Considerable progress," in identifying the "neuro-cognitive bases of self-knowledge" which if "objectified" can lead to "amenable ... scientific analysis." [5] So how to blogs help? Blogging is the breaking down of ones thoughts, through an analysis of what is understood presently by someone. There is an inherent care in writing online, to care what others think, its not the best place, to speak loosely, just to sound different, and run the risk of not making sense to others, or sounding too judgmental, and abrasive about subjects in life, the more it sits well, the better your blog will be. We don't all have the personality to be so openly opinionated in life, as you become a better blogger, you become less experimental, and more politically correct when it comes to the use of your terminology, as you have come to identify yourself in life, been defensive too, and do a better job at not being controlled by the thoughts of others about you, sensitive to, and without anticipation for something you've said misunderstood by others, which is what editing and clarification is for. Somethings you will remember, but as blogger, rarely does one have the time to read through what they've written more than once, and if it can more readily be remembered by the reader, then that's how they think, how they make sense of your work, and that's your value determined by them, that's not something you should worry about, the thought processes of others. Remember your "identity," is "The sense of self, providing sameness and continuity in personality over time; the condition of being oneself and not another." [6] And your "privilege" also known as your power is "Unearned access to resources only readily available to some people as a result of their advantaged social group membership." [7]

Why is it important to know this difference? Because that's one inherent bases for determining your worth to a reader, and your likeability. If they cant see you, if they don't know you, if there is information about you do dissuade others from paying attention to you, its what being treated as a human being is all about, and not to be treated as someone who is confused (gay) bicurious (not sure if gay) to further elaborate on your ability to feel good (as for gay reasons, or for straight reasons) known. That's treating someone as a visual receptor of feelings, I do not feel good looking at people, and that's not the basis for my sexuality to look at others in order to feel good, or be looked at in order to feel good, that's the basis for Mens love, who are more visual than Women, Women base love on how they feel, how another makes them feel, feeling safe, not by being exposed online. And that is the basis for which Im being attacked. Whether I masturbate or not. I think some self-identify as asexual, and some stop putting out, and that's why Im being attacked, because I stopped having sex 2014, and stopped putting out, that means Im not easy, smart. If that's the only basis for you to understand or love a human being by what they look like, whether they are fuckable or not, that's a sorry way for determining a persons worth online, Im sorry. Self-love is not about masturbation, its not having dirty thoughts when youre around people, and that's thinking normally, please don't accuse me of having dirty thoughts or being dirty minded, Im not a sex addict, I love people, and am either able to love people, or choose to be alone, now. Im not obligated to be in a sexual relationship with anyone, in order to be accepted in life trusted. And I don't think its proper, to know or understand the sex habits of someone to build trust.

And that's how I was offended online. Treated like a gross sex object online, not in the mood to be loving, pictures demanded, an ugly presentation of self. That's after having worked so hard online, to be presentable, that a dirty representation of me was used to describe me as someone who is aggressively sexual or into themselves in a sexual way, if you're not getting me off, that means I don't need help getting off, including Men & Women for that matter, that means I can get off on my own, and called the Courthouse myself.

Personal Update ...

11/4/2020

Need to take a break from blogging, going through a lot right now, and don't want to make things worse, before they get better, need to slow down, and think about what I want to do in life, how I am going to make my life better, and not through discussion of my issues out loud, expect to live a better life, and while I am able to speak, not lose privileges in speaking, and focus on writing and learning more about how to help others. I've maxed out in terms of my solutions, if my solutions no longer work to help myself, that means I have problems beyond my ability to fix or correct on my own.

Thank you for your readership, I appreciate everyone caring. I'm sorry I do not think that my condition is strong enough to be a source of support online, and need time to recover from bipolar, adjust.

Sincerely,

Leslie Fischman

Law Schools Not Hard Until ...

11/4/2020

Law Schools not hard until you start applying the law to your own life, pointers you could have used in the past, and had you known, “no intent to communicate” you might have not worn your Mr. Winter sweatshirt from Kitson almost every week on rotation to Law School, or your favorite Orange or Grey Sweater with a Metal Heart (you bought both at Front Runners), and one thin Gray sweatshirt. Whatever you do, don’t panic about how things looked, or worry too much about the causes for your bipolar episode (first) 2009, whatever has passed, accept that that is your condition, what meds are for, to prevent the type of thinking that causes you to get upset, panic, or feel frustrated, lifes not over when you cant figure out what to do, or how to make things better, that’s when you need to focus on what it is you are doing with your life, and make a better life for yourself, and stay out of trouble, not take risks, and remember to respect your own privacy in life, no matter how forced or compelled you feel to share everything, you don’t have to, it will likely come back to haunt you and make you feel worse about yourself for having shared every little detail of your life as remembered, that cannot cure a later condition, and sometimes things gets worse the more personal information you share about yourself. The point at which things no longer become fun, is when you are criticized, sure having a sense of humor is key to your survival, but leaving important people out of the equation in life, doesn’t protect them it winds up hurting their feelings in the long run, its reassurances from you, that is required, a listening, such as knowing when its time to stop blogging. That occurs when something that was going well for you, that no one had a problem with, becomes a problem, and when there is a loss of faith in you, that affects the good faith of others, who aren’t reliant on you, but you also do not want to direct negative attentions to you or your family, who were never gamey, mostly professional our whole lives, and this is a kind of energy, that they would never know what it feels like, and Im sure they have lived good lives, to protect me from being exposed to these types of unnecessary stresses in life, when people recognize you as something you are not, or recognize you as something, that hurts the feelings of those who love and respect me, and believed in me, and never worried about me, always proud of me. If it was wrong 2016 for those photos to be taken of me, and if it was wrong to take photos like that in Westwood, then at no later point is it right to be shared online, by me or anyone, and that’s how things get shared, whether you like it or not, and whether or not it hurts you or others, that’s your wishes not respected, and the wishes of your family not respected, and that type of force and exposure is not necessary, when its me that gave up 2009, and because of my mental health, was not a source of stability to them, and because I had too many questions in life studied too hard and got nowhere in life, and because I did not know the case, did not interpret things well, and got sick, and embarrassed, and that’s information, that later became relevant after having gone to law school what was important to disclose what would make things better, and if its not information known, and not information previously created, then it was the way I told my story that caused me pain, or caused people close to me disbelief in me, because I was the disappointment, because I was not sure of myself, because I was not confident, because I did not make sense to others, and that’s how you wind up sick in life, focusing more on yourself than others, how you end up sick and alone in life, and had it not been for my Parents, I would not be alive today, and taken care of, and had it not been for them I would not have gone to Law School, and had it not been for them I would not have recovered from Bipolar, and had it not been for them I would not have been well enough to share my story in a way, that benefited those who were not believed, and its by default, that people are set free, not because of my circumstances, and just because I was hospitalized for 60 days, when OJ was freed, does not mean that I was not apart of that decision to free him, or did not argue the facts of the case well enough, to get people to leave things alone. Its if people think you have guilt or are guilty, they attack you as though you are made up of something stronger than you are, and if you allow all of those intimidations in life to get to your heart, eventually they break your heart, eventually you lose faith, and eventually you lose hope.

When It Takes Convincing ...

When it takes convincing, it then becomes a matter of your own faith put to the test, that's when on your own, you have to be in a condition, that matters to someone with interest in you, to believe in you. I was reminded in a way that "its not all about me" meaning that people have problems of their own they need to get through in life, and that's when I remembered. When things are going well around you, that means stay, if things are not working out for you, that means go. Some basic life decisions you need to make for yourself in life, sometimes we don't get cued into better lives in life, and the exact opposite occurs, feeling cued out. When you wind up in a space to yourself, and having difficulty connecting with others, that could mean, either there is something wrong with you, or in observance of another's condition, that you are the weller of the two, this happens when you need to cheer someone up, a trait gifted to women, to give back, and to give back in a loving way, to someone who demonstrates a need for love, or with acceptance of you, gives you an opening to be loving back to them. Upon return, you are either hurt, meaning in need of love, or giving, with realization that there is love, and then given a choice, to resume that loving companionship, and prove your worth to someone, or bring up the past with apologies or excuses, no amount of time can make up for lost time in life. Why its so important to stay well, and if youre sure of it, its okay to take chances in life, sometimes we are steered in the wrong directions in life, by who we choose to love, and if youre good, you will always manage to find yourself again, even if your position in life, is not as perfect as it could be, when it comes to speaking to all. No matter what happens to you privately, keep your private life private, and even if your private life is discussed in public, its never too late to remind yourself, that its by what you share that gets repeated, just like how you are, your loving personality, and positive spirit, gets inherited by someone trying to help you, be yourself, whether or not you leave in a worse condition. You will always find better. Never forget your friend in a blue suit, in the midst of chaos, speaking where Jay Carney used to speak, yeah him, you're responsible for him, and if you can help, then maybe its time to buckle down in life, not make things worse, for yourself or for others, and that's when change becomes a spilt decision maker, either when your plate is full, making one choice, and things get worse, or making another choice for things to get better, you can't please them all. What then becomes most important is how you are doing in life, as all after effects of your decisions in life, will be reviewed compared to how everyone else is doing, remember again its not all about you. No one can be you in life, and although people may come to know you and feel good anyways, with or without your help, that doesn't mean that you need to be on your own, isolate, or stop trying all together, sometimes that means, taking fewer chances in life, with your health, focusing on everyone, and not make any one person the center of your world and cares in life, forget about all your other connections, and trusts earned overtime, and not get sick, and disappoint everyone who has finally come to know you in life. That's being known, with the responsibility, of doing well, and if you become a dark cloud of disappointment, over anyones head in life, then all the feelings later read from them, will either serve as a reminder of the last time they were hurt, or if they have never been let down in life, remind you of a time when you were hurt, and that's how it goes from one body to the next, disappointment, looming disillusionment, reading into feelings, then blaming one others feelings on the other, as though its each persons responsibility to rise or fall based upon the feelings of others, and so it happens, some step up to the plate and make things better, or some step up to the plate and make things worse, its usually after having done something wrong on your end, that results in a cause for your own disillusionment, which others upon hearing, remain unaffected, not unless you mention others, a trigger someone who is well to hurt someone who is sick or not feeling well, and that usually makes nothing better, from a speakers standpoint. You can always protect others from harm, and sometimes the best way to help others is not to remain silent, specifically when it comes to how you have been harmed, not that you can advise others of how to not be harmed if you have been harmed, without running the risk of scaring others, or speaking from a condition, that you have not readily become able to removed yourself from feeling all together. It's a no win situation, whenever illness is caused, that's the pressure of making decisions taking its toll on your physically and mentally, and its then you cannot separate yourself, nor observe what to do, not if you are too busy concentrating on your feelings, instead of focusing on what to do, to make yourself feel better, or to leave a situation of discomfort. There is always a way to get help, and although you may try to change people, some people don't change, no matter how beautiful your life was or is, that will not make a person stop hurting you, to keep them from not taking their illness out on you, that's based upon everyone elses condition, whether or not they were affected by my choices or changed mental health, its is never the job of someone who is not that person President Trump, to punish me like he is him.

Some people dont know when to stop, please dont wait until something bad happens to me, in order to get your way, or the reaction wanted in order to feel like you have done the right thing, publicly punish me or shame me in public, as though I dont have a life to live, and not helping others online.

Hearing from Others ...

There is an inherent wellness factor that occurs upon hearing from others, maybe it just has to do with hearing from someone else other than ourselves, which seems to do the trick. That's an innate human quality characteristic of most, to step outside of ourselves to help others, and maybe the same goes for reading, that trait occurring. Its not easy to think for yourself. I never said that that part of understanding life was easy, and may not come easy to most. Not when it comes to thinking about others, and especially not for most when it comes to predicting, adjusting, and managing what is foreseeable in the future, we don't all have that capacity to protect ourselves in the event of something happening, whether that be our thoughts or the thoughts of others, for that matter. Then there is the energy occurring within, as you are reading and thinking for yourself, that's the power of thoughts coming to mind, which is the goal of every writer, not to block those capabilities in life. Is it even possible to stop thinking all together? And what gets us going again in life? Is it our thoughts that help us? And if our thoughts are hurting us? Why? This inner battle between your thoughts and thoughts of others, has been described by inc.com as: "a competitive sport ... [in which] the person who speaks least benefits most and the person who speaks most benefits least." [1] This may be one difficulty faced by the blogger, everyone improving except him or her, it's a thankless profession, I make no money in writing, with the goodness of my heart I write online, not for monetary benefit or defense of opinion. I think everyone is entitled to their own opinions in life, and as the writer, one subjects themselves to being attacked for the opinions they hold, as though there are no other sound starting points from which to think. When what is written is not accepted as is, and when one thinks beyond what is written, that demonstrates a positive quality to any written work, writing that encourages you to think, not discourage you from thinking all together, nor intimidates you when it comes to a finer understanding of thinking, beyond your reasonable means, education and training. We are not all taught the same, we don't all come from the same or similar backgrounds, and we don't all have the same exposures in life. Im sure there are qualities about writers, that make them more appealing than others, and Im pretty sure it has to do with making sense, both to the writer and hopefully to the reader, who either appreciates having understood what has been written, and with respect for the writer, not intrude upon their own thought processes. The downside to being a blogger, is that its an incredibly draining process of sharing without feedback, or critique, without encouragement that's at the start, then eventually you get to a place in your career online writing, when you get comments, that's with firm acceptance of the work that you are doing, and feedback provided when anyone feels like something can be said with regard to a specific piece of writing, has something to say. Ive been working at a very grueling pace for over a year now, writing once a day, that requires thinking of a concept to write about, and in a day assemble something to be published to some 170,000 people daily in traffic, or whatever those Alexa Stats mean anyways, it says 14,000 on Weebly. When you speak in public, that's putting your brain online, it's not an easy process of exposing your vulnerabilities online, and sharing your mind, most don't really engage in sharing their schoolwork online, notes, thinking, journal entries, progress, or recovery stages online, as I have. Its actually not recommended that you share private information in public, and that's probably how I wound up getting hurt eventually, I never really anticipated for there to be an eventual stage of non-acceptance of me, just like any job, its something you cant stop thinking about your work online, what you want to do with your work online, where you are headed in terms of your work online, what you want to do with the rest of your life, what your plans where, what things look like now, what you used to think of yourself, what you think of yourself now, how you used to look, versus how you look now, whether you have aged, whether you were trendy then, and no longer trendy now, whether you have potential to be a business, whether you are not able to run a business yourself one day, whether your work creates opportunities future for others, whether you are capable of providing jobs for others, or whether you have been so damaged, that you have to rethink all your goals in life, and reconsider whether writing is your best bet in life. And so Ive decided to backtrack, and get back to my roots, in research writing, something I wanted to do as a Law Student, and even contacted my old IRB on campus to a school I graduated from. Thankfully there is a private IRB Review Board, that I submitted work to for review, and awaiting approval by them, and in the meantime taking CITI Program Courses again, I took a few in college as an Undergrad, that's standard for any research writing, to go through a system of review and care, and notification of what you are doing, what you want to study, and then created a completed work, as submitted to FEMA Ideascale, and complete the writing process.

A Moment of Peace ...

A moment of peace occurs on occasion, either everyone is tired, or no one has anything to say. Its doesn't matter what your feeling at that point in time, unless what you have to say describes accurately the peace of any given day, then if you are not well, will not be viewed as a person who is in peace, or be viewed as anyone who has helped, preserve those moments of peace. One should generally be well when everyone else is doing well in life that's a given. If you are not feeling well, that may have nothing to do with anything else going on around you, and everything to do with your ability to be at peace too, no matter who is sharing that moment of peace with you, and this is where tolerance for pain becomes an issue, whether you feel as though you were made to not feel good, to not likewise recognize and appreciate those moments of peace, and not bring up something you've been struggling with privately. That is when things are going well for you, do you allow someone to injure your ability to be at peace and get sick worried sick about, or do you do your best to move forward in life. This is what makes living difficult, when you are not apart of. When you are not apart of and on your own, you have few barometers for keeping you well, others may protect you from harm, but ultimately it is your choice, to give up, stop blogging, and choose a new career, the only issue, is wellness. If I am not made to feel well while blogging, then how will work be any different. If it's a condition that has to do with what people think having heard my story, then it is in my best interests to make sure that I am not understood. And this is how a relationship that couldve worked out doesn't work out, if I am made sick, then I cannot be with anyone, and this is how you end up sick and alone in life, and that's not where I want to be in life, and I do not think that I deserve to not feel well. That's a painful fact of life I have come to accept, that when I was not well, I could not date, and because I could not date, did other things with my life, and by the time I improved and achieved a happy state of mind, and was no longer in bed all day in pain, I had overcome hurdles in life, that were not necessary to speak about, that's living life in spite of that's not trying to make sense of a physical condition of illness, make public, not to worry anyone, that's keeping to yourself. Im not sure what the causes were for it, but have been on meds since 2013, as prescribed. Don't waste too much time wondering about life. Youre surely cause yourself more pain in the process of figuring out whats going wrong before ever achieving a condition of wellness to appreciate everything that is going right for everyone. That's life, sometimes you feel good, and sometimes you don't, that doesn't mean that your condition is permanent. Fighting is never the solution, to achieving peace within, that's how one gets sick, trying to argue in public, as though there are sides to life, sides to people, sides to equations, or sides to feelings, that represent the well from the sick, which people are included or excluded on the basis of feeling.

When the Going Gets Tough the Tough Gets Going ...

There's an old saying "when the going gets tough the tough get going." Sometimes things only make sense until you experience things for yourself. Living is tough. And while you may have encountered difficult moments in life, that doesn't mean that the rest of your life needs to be dedicated to figuring out why in life. Why you went through a difficult time. Take a moment to pause, and to appreciate where you are in life, and be thankful to be alive. Some of us don't make it through those hurdles in life, some die with addictions, some die with alcoholism, and some die suicidal, always be thankful to not have been one of them, that's what it all comes down to. Don't gamble with your freedoms in life, and don't gamble with your blessings in life, take everything with a grain of salt. You are your own worst enemy, and your inner critic tends to be hardest on you, when no one else is criticizing you, think positively of yourself. No matter what you're going through have faith you will overcome it. Things can be going right for us in life, and we may still have a bad day, or find it difficult to overcome specific feelings or emotions, that doesn't mean that you are defective, remember that you are human. No matter what amount of pressures you get put under in life, continue to do your best, in spite of any unwanted pressures in life, and that's how you come out in the long run, no matter how many people irk you along the way, never question yourself, or allow yourself to be made to feel guilty about any moments in life, no matter how questionable your condition may ever be, it's not your fault, especially if you have a disability, and if someone cannot accept you the way you are, then you don't need those types of people in your life, and I promise you you will find better, more loving, more supportive people in life, who protect you from harm, not subject you to harm and unwanted stress in life. You don't have to do anything you don't want to do in life, and sometimes it's when we feel torn or confused, we get stuck doing things in life, that do not serve us well in the long run, and wind up getting hurt, people pleasing, or pleasing those we put before our own best interests in life, and sometimes that's exactly how you get hurt, made to worry. You must at all times be able to adjust, and when your ability to adjust gets weakened too busy adjusting to another's needs in life, that's when you lose touch with reality, and doing what is best for you. It's never fun being thrown into survival mode for no reason, there's no reason to be put into emergency mode, pushed when you need to stay calm, or be thrown into competition in life, that you're not strong enough to be a contender in. Sometimes we make good decisions for ourselves, when our options become limited, and feel scared, and more often than not we make poor decisions for ourselves, when our defenses are up, when we are in a state of fear, and we feel we are at odds with others, no one makes good decisions for themselves when they are scared, it always seems to get worse and worse no matter which direction we go in life, and that's no way to live life scared, accommodating one another's fears in life, accommodating one another's interests in life, that's bound to leave no one pleased. Therefore it's best not to be complacent in life, and just let things happen, in order to live a good life, you have to make things happen for yourself in life, no one is going to hold your hand through the process of finding yourself, it's by your choices in life, you come to be, and with those choices, find later acceptances in life, that's knowing the difference between right and wrong, and that doesn't happen by meditating on people, thinking about people, worrying about people, being paranoid about your past or your future, that's a recipe for disaster, a negative spiral downward in life, leaving you more and more powerless, without progress, don't do that to yourself. Some people won't change, and that's just how people are, always feeling entitled to do as they please, that's not your responsibility to cure, and it's certainly not your responsibility to give love to anyone who no longer loves you, and only seeks to harm you, means letting go.

I Was 4 Days Away From ...

Although I have now recovered from a condition (bipolar: voices), in which I felt harmed and was suffering, it has now become more clear to me that more work needs to be done on my part, in order to continue to manage my standards of care, for my readers, and minimize exposing them to sources of hardship I have suffered, not wrongfully empower anyone to cause harm to me or others, in order to cast me in a disfavorable light. Nothing to protest about. Something perhaps to just accept, that where there is fear, fear will be induced, and when any fear has been induced by someone in a caretaking position, such as a blogger, I have to do my part, to step away, and figure out what needs to be done on my behalf in order not to be fearful of what others have to say about me, after having observed me over the course of 8 years improve. That being said, along with registering for two four week courses on Coursera, I have also enrolled in 10 courses on CITI Program, a Collaborative Institutional Training Initiative, training that is required of all who conduct research on their own, such as the proposed studies submitted to Ideascale as a FEMA Student:

1. Social Media and Mental Health: <https://fema.ideascale.com/a/dtd/Social-Media-and-Mental-Health/551783-14692>
2. Aftercare Books/Blogs: <https://fema.ideascale.com/a/dtd/Aftercare-Books-Blogs-by-mymollydoll-com/547910-14692>
3. #dontdodrugs: <https://fema.ideascale.com/a/dtd/dontdodrugs/551784-14692>

I was approximately 4 days away from being a top blogger in personal development and self-improvement in the US. Mark Manson was currently ranked in the 13,000s yesterday, and today is ranked #6 in the US. After many years of hard work, I seem to be up in the ranks on Alexa with the best of them, which only means that I have to be more careful, the less risk imposed to me the better, the work product, the tougher the issue or more difficulty I face speaking to issues off hand, directly affecting me, the more important that what I have to say, becomes when it comes to others letting go, loosen up, when it comes to attacking my credibility to suit their needs in life. That's the difference between speaking without inner turmoil, versus speaking with turmoil. In avoidance of speaking to what can cause one fear, or made to convince someone that what they are doing is wrong, or to think in terms of guilt when it comes to homicide or gun violence, that's what if this is done, what will she think and what will others think, it always hurts the person that is thought about not the thinker, made to think of me in terms of everything going on in the world as related.

Courses I am Taking on CITI Program:

1. Disaster Planning for the Research Enterprise (DPRE)
2. Public Health Research
3. Conflict Management
4. FERPA: A Quick Review of the Law for Researchers and IRBs
5. IRB Basic - Biomedical and Social-Behavioral-Educational Combined
6. Preparing for Single IRB (sIRB) under the Common Rule
7. Artificial Intelligence (AI) and Human Subject Protections
8. Social Media and Research Recruiting
9. COVID-19: Supporting Ethical Care and Responding to Workforce Concerns in a Public Health Emergency.
10. Health Privacy (HIPAA)

Personal Update ...

11/1/2020

Ive made a decision to return to my Ex, after much needed time to myself to figure out life for myself, and experience life as a single woman, I think I function better with a companion in life. Someone who loves me, respects me, supports me, and knows me, and can tolerate my mental health issues, and understanding that I am on meds. Who encourages me to work, and to set my standards higher in life, and try going back to a career in law as a paralegal if possible. It would be nice to work somewhere. We finally spoke last night after many years apart, we would check on eachother occasionally over the years, and lived life separately for 8 years. I honestly don't think anyone would have sat with me through all the years trying to figure out what to say, and how to say things, in order to help make things better, I don't think anyone really worries as much as I ever have about life, most people don't action plan, I guess thats the free spirit in me. So, that being said, although Ive had many crushes true, that doesn't mean that Im action planning in those directions in life, I cant even visualize how meeting anyone famous would ever be possible for me in life. I guess they go through the same things in life that I maybe went through alone for 8 years, people knowing you, but you only knowing a few people in life. Its an odd experience to adjust to nonetheless, and even more difficult saying the right things in cover letters and interviews to get a good job in life, it takes practice, work and career is all about momentum, you either keep working going from one job to the next until you find a full time job, learn all the skills you need, or you take lesser jobs in life, but don't stop working all together, unless you go back to school and try to finish Law School, that's okay. Whatever you feel is the right thing to do, in order for you to feel complete and able, that's on you, your satisfaction in life, pride, and confidence, some of us don't function well half empty in life, that is not on all cylinders, up and adam everyday, doing things keeping busy, meds can be a very painful transition from being able to keep busy, to not doing much at all, getting tired easily. That's a consequence of self-harming. Im just happy I am where Im at now in life, maybe things are not always going perfectly for me, but who has a perfect life anyways. In it for the hugs! #lovelife #lessons #companionship

There is an inherent wellness factor that occurs upon hearing from others, maybe it just has to do with hearing from someone else other than ourselves, which seems to do the trick. That's an innate human quality characteristic of most, to step outside of ourselves to help others, and maybe the same goes for reading, that trait occurring. Its not easy to think for yourself. I never said that that part of understanding life was easy, and may not come easy to most. Not when it comes to thinking about others, and especially not for most when it comes to predicting, adjusting, and managing what is foreseeable in the future, we don't all have that capacity to protect ourselves in the event of something happening, whether that be our thoughts or the thoughts of others, for that matter. Then there is the energy occurring within, as you are reading and thinking for yourself, that's the power of thoughts coming to mind, which is the goal of every writer, not to block those capabilities in life. Is it even possible to stop thinking all together? And what gets us going again in life? Is it our thoughts that help us? And if our thoughts are hurting us? Why? This inner battle between your thoughts and thoughts of others, has been described by inc.com as: "a competitive sport ... [in which] the person who speaks least benefits most and the person who speaks most benefits least." [1] This may be one difficulty faced by the blogger, everyone improving except him or her, it's a thankless profession, I make no money in writing, with the goodness of my heart I write online, not for monetary benefit or defense of opinion. I think everyone is entitled to their own opinions in life, and as the writer, one subjects themselves to being attacked for the opinions they hold, as though there are no other sound starting points from which to think. When what is written is not accepted as is, and when one thinks beyond what is written, that demonstrates a positive quality to any written work, writing that encourages you to think, not discourage you from thinking all together, nor intimidates you when it comes to a finer understanding of thinking, beyond your reasonable means, education and training. We are not all taught the same, we don't all come from the same or similar backgrounds, and we don't all have the same exposures in life. Im sure there are qualities about writers, that make them more appealing than others, and Im pretty sure it has to do with making sense, both to the writer and hopefully to the reader, who either appreciates having understood what has been written, and with respect for the writer, not intrude upon their own thought processes. The downside to being a blogger, is that its an incredibly draining process of sharing without feedback, or critique, without encouragement that's at the start, then eventually you get to a place in your career online writing, when you get comments, that's with firm acceptance of the work that you are doing, and feedback provided when anyone feels like something can be said with regard to a specific piece of writing, has something to say. Ive been working at a very grueling pace for over a year now, writing once a day, that requires thinking of a concept to write about, and in a day assemble something to be published to some 170,000 people daily in traffic, or whatever those Alexa Stats mean anyways, it says 14,000 on Weebly. When you speak in public, that's putting your brain online, it's not an easy process of exposing your vulnerabilities online, and sharing your mind, most don't really engage in sharing their schoolwork online, notes, thinking, journal entries, progress, or recovery stages online, as I have. Its actually not recommended that you share private information in public, and that's probably how I wound up getting hurt eventually, I never really anticipated for there to be an eventual stage of non-acceptance of me, just like any job, its something you cant stop thinking about your work online, what you want to do with your work online, where you are headed in terms of your work online, what you want to do with the rest of your life, what your plans where, what things look like now, what you used to think of yourself, what you think of yourself now, how you used to look, versus how you look now, whether you have aged, whether you were trendy then, and no longer trendy now, whether you have potential to be a business, whether you are not able to run a business yourself one day, whether your work creates opportunities future for others, whether you are capable of providing jobs for others, or whether you have been so damaged, that you have to rethink all your goals in life, and reconsider whether writing is your best bet in life. And so Ive decided to backtrack, and get back to my roots, in research writing, something I wanted to do as a Law Student, and even contacted my old IRB on campus to a school I graduated from. Thankfully there is a private IRB Review Board, that I submitted work to for review, and awaiting approval by them, and in the meantime taking CITI Program Courses again, I took a few in college as an Undergrad, that's standard for any research writing, to go through a system of review and care, and notification of what you are doing, what you want to study, and then created a completed work, as submitted to FEMA Ideascare, and complete the writing process.

When It Takes Convincing ...

When it takes convincing, it then becomes a matter of your own faith put to the test, that's when on your own, you have to be in a condition, that matters to someone with interest in you, to believe in you. I was reminded in a way that "its not all about me" meaning that people have problems of their own they need to get through in life, and that's when I remembered. When things are going well around you, that means stay, if things are not working out for you, that means go. Some basic life decisions you need to make for yourself in life, sometimes we don't get cued into better lives in life, and the exact opposite occurs, feeling cued out. When you wind up in a space to yourself, and having difficulty connecting with others, that could mean, either there is something wrong with you, or in observance of anothers condition, that you are the weller of the two, this happens when you need to cheer someone up, a trait gifted to women, to give back, and to give back in a loving way, to someone who demonstrates a need for love, or with acceptance of you, gives you an opening to be loving back to them. Upon return, you are either hurt, meaning in need of love, or giving, with realization that there is love, and then given a choice, to resume that loving companionship, and prove your worth to someone, or bring up the past with apologies or excuses, no amount of time can make up for lost time in life. Why its so important to stay well, and if youre sure of it, its okay to take chances in life, sometimes we are steered in the wrong directions in life, by who we choose to love, and if youre good, you will always manage to find yourself again, even if your position in life, is not as perfect as it could be, when it comes to speaking to all. No matter what happens to you privately, keep your private life private, and even if your private life is discussed in public, its never too late to remind yourself, that its by what you share that gets repeated, just like how you are, your loving personality, and positive spirit, gets inherited by someone trying to help you, be yourself, whether or not you leave in a worse condition. You will always find better. Never forget your friend in a blue suit, in the midst of chaos, speaking where Jay Carney used to speak, yeah him, you're responsible for him, and if you can help, then maybe its time to buckle down in life, not make things worse, for yourself or for others, and that's when change becomes a spilt decision maker, either when your plate is full, making one choice, and things get worse, or making another choice for things to get better, you can't please them all. What then becomes most important is how you are doing in life, as all after effects of your decisions in life, will be reviewed compared to how everyone else is doing, remember again its not all about you. No one can be you in life, and although people may come to know you and feel good anyways, with or without your help, that doesn't mean that you need to be on your own, isolate, or stop trying all together, sometimes that means, taking fewer chances in life, with your health, focusing on everyone, and not make any one person the center of your world and cares in life, forget about all your other connections, and trusts earned overtime, and not get sick, and disappoint everyone who has finally come to know you in life. That's being known, with the responsibility, of doing well, and if you become a dark cloud of disappointment, over anyones head in life, then all the feelings later read from them, will either serve as a reminder of the last time they were hurt, or if they have never been let down in life, remind you of a time when you were hurt, and that's how it goes from one body to the next, disappointment, looming disillusionment, reading into feelings, then blaming one on others feelings on the other, as though its each persons responsibility to rise or fall based upon the feelings of others, and so it happens, some step up to the plate and make things better, or some step up to the plate and make things worse, its usually after having done something wrong on your end, that results in a cause for your own disillusionment, which others upon hearing, remain unaffected, not unless you mention others, a trigger someone who is well to hurt someone who is sick or not feeling well, and that usually makes nothing better, from a speakers standpoint. You can always protect others from harm, and sometimes the best way to help others is not to remain silent, specifically when it comes to how you have been harmed, not that you can advise others of how to not be harmed if you have been harmed, without running the risk of scaring others, or speaking from a condition, that you have not readily become able to removed yourself from feeling all together. It's a no win situation, whenever illness is caused, that's the pressure of making decisions taking its toll on your physically and mentally, and its then you cannot separate yourself, nor observe what to do, not if you are too busy concentrating on your feelings, instead of focusing on what to do, to make yourself feel better, or to leave a situation of discomfort. There is always a way to get help, and although you may try to change people, some people don't change, no matter how beautiful your life was or is, that will not make a person stop hurting you, to keep them from not taking their illness out on you, that's based upon everyone elses condition, whether or not they were affected by my choices or changed mental health, its is never the job of someone who is not that person President Trump, to punish me like he is him.

Some people dont know when to stop, please dont wait until something bad happens to me, in order to get your way, or the reaction wanted in order to feel like you have done the right thing, publicly punish me or shame me in public, as though I dont have a life to live, and not helping others online.

Personal Update ...

Need to take a break from blogging, going through a lot right now, and dont want to make things worse, before they get better, need to slow down, and think about what I want to do in life, how I am going to make my life better, and not through discussion of my issues out loud, expect to live a better life, and while I am able to speak, not lose privileges in speaking, and focus on writing and learning more about how to help others. Ive maxed out in in terms of my solutions, if my solutions no longer work to help myself, that means I have problems beyond my ability to fix or correct on my own.

Thank you for your readership, I appreciate everyone caring. Im sorry I do not think that my condition is strong enough to be a source of support online, and need time to recover from bipolar, adjust.

Sincerely,

Leslie Fischman

There's No Otherside

Sometimes the harder they try to get a person to crack or fall of center, the worse result, meaning something expected bipolar, something heard about voices, and something past, suicidal ideation, which to prove reinforces, conditions present 2017, to then bring up a whole host of issues, unrelated to now, which was an improved condition then made worse. It takes awhile to digest. As sensitive as others may be to mentions, I would not mention it, if not saying so, would produce a worse result, then its better to be honest, and state my reservations, maybe not be so vocal about non-existent concerns. I think the stopping of the blog, in addition to dating again, seemed to send a mixed message, as though a better life awaits me, this is my best life writing, and starting over work wise, is not easy, everything takes time, including buttoning up, setting one thing down and picking up another. Its become clear to me that the more well studied what I have to write is, the more who is reading becomes a vocalized echo to the hearing of others, which need not be influenced by things stated here in a derogatory way. That's an unexpected consequence of leading discussions online, powerful, not in a subtle way, but powerful in terms, of the wellness factor, something I go into, and others seemed to be into, but like most things only lasts for as long as I stay well, the maker of the product, or books. Its really challenging to come to terms with the fact that you can be good at something, however based on what someone else sees through your writing, thinks differently of you, sees you as guilty, or for far worse offenses, such as lying or making things up. I would never. I am always honest speaking from the heart, maybe sometimes I blurt things out from time to time, but have never lost faith in myself or for a new beginning for everyone, else to blurt out their emotions, sad or dramatic or what not, whatever came to mind speak it, that's your body your temple, not my doing. The times change, so if you are unhappy with the representative sample of content now, then maybe you should have a little more faith, their words are but a reflection of what they see, think, or know, not always having to do with being in the know, or by overhearing what a cast of characters is up to in life, and where they are headed, learn to let things go. If every story serves as reminder of my past, then that is how I will be viewed, everything pertaining to a specific example past, or hesitancy or fear. Even if never anticipated or felt previously in my life, just as a turning about the issues occurred, seemed to be something worst revisiting, when it comes to the politics of understanding those who made it, without being too hard on one another, eventually people take a turn for the best, and some of us get left behind, whether because we couldn't stay strong enough, or got sick telling our own story in life, it happens. So long as you are honest and have done no harm, then its best to live a good life while you can, not turn into a bad memory or experience online, if you are suffering from mental health issues, which has become a moral and ethical issue for my how much to disclose, regarding the negative twists and turns taken while observing, and wondering if Im someone who just switches teams on the fly, that's not how that occurs, its by wellness people switch teams, and by confidence, and you cant rationalize the changes a country is going through by sexual preferences of any characters, as though the basis for their trusts are based upon sex, maybe its based upon blames, not advances. So let the well lead, that's when its okay to settle down, and listen, no one is going to tell you that what you are thinking is wrong, and no one is going to tell you that what other people are doing is wrong, everyone has a voice, a rhyme, and a reason to their choices in life. Its all a matter of what you are willing to put up with, Im very generous with my time, maybe too generous with my time, and if you get stuck with a non-believer, then that's what will happen to them once they stop believing in you, see if you change or stop believing in yourself. Hopefully we don't wait until its too late, and hopefully what people think doesn't become an incessant thought in our heads, manipulated or be viewed as some head case example, of someone disabled being convinced not to trust others, or to see some shining brim of hope to achieve fame, I don't think that was ever in the cards for me, I come from a very private but solid team in life. There are other people to represent and lead others away from the trauma induced paranoia, listen evil cant win unless you allow it to win, and if you think sex is evil, then maybe that's a side of you that youd like to avoid in life, as it brings up all the trauma, induced the last time you were loving to people you just met. Theres a system for acceptances in life, that is based on what you look like, that's occurs online and in real life, I guess I was just trying to play along, with all the hoopla for acceptances, and shine in my own way on Instagram and through writing. It wasn't intended to be a number one blog online, I think that happened, in a non customary way, because if I was trying to help everyone, then taking a lead position, would not serve my best interests, to then disempower someone who empowered me, to keep trying and not give up and work. How I got my first job and left home, stuck at home, not knowing what to do with my life, takes time. I see what it looks like, and I see that 2020, didn't add any faith in the factor, that I do work hard, graduated, and was trying to get a job, but now things are way too intense, uncomfortably intense, for that matter, to even discuss my past when suffering, or to talk about now, if everything hits me the wrong way, and I begin to feel sick, that's allowing the negatives to take hold. So don't do that to yourselves. Everyones was just playing the Jewish card to not believe in Leslie and see if she believes in herself, and at some point in time, I got lost, and lost momentum. That happens, as you get older, if theyre around youre well, if not means work on yourself, that's being a woman in your 30s 101, ready for the call, but never trying that hard for it, just letting them know your available, while trying to stay out of trouble. Just be strong please.

When Illness Happens ...

Its hard for anyone to understand how someone who was doing well could suddenly not be doing well. We don't all have a fair share at life, and given ample opportunities, it seems the more you complain, the more it seems as though you were a problem, then which doesn't allow for acceptances of you now. You are either well and not a problem in life, or you become not well and then become a problem. Life isn't a science experiment, not with your health nor the health of others. The benefit of having heard about someones experience, is so that you don't go through the same in life, and recognize sooner along the way, when to stop doing something that is actually causing you harm, what good can become of that? I may have suffered from addictions past, but never stupidity, and its probably because one of my paper, used the R word, so as a condescending slap to my face was humiliated in public as though deserved, so that upon showing me in that way, everyone would remember or think of things from my blog, to say that that was a justified treatment of me. Im not sure what the temperature is like, about me, but I have not been my usual self, if Im not doing anything, actually don't feel well to be honest. Things are only okay for so long as you are able to contribute positively. If things are troublesome for you, I don't think anyone wants to hear from someone, who has been publicly shamed as though one has made mistakes on those particular merits when it comes to speaking to people of importance, and that was a grose overstatement of the terms or conditions, which only later happened as the sharing continued, from what was companionship, or updates, to then conforming to a look, whether that be something I have looked liked, or now, suddenly saying things as though Im giving up, and statements like that are not helpful at a time like this, if that condition can be changed by you, why its no use talking about how you are feeling, if its you that needs to change, then it looks like your saying things, and then conforming to things you have said, and then that means that what you say will not match how you feel, either not well talking to, then okay alone, then professional online, but hard to talk to or hear from, painful, means that there is something wrong with my condition, if I got manipulated to do and say things to make me look like Im controllable, or laughable, and I take my life seriously, and take blogging seriously somewhat with cited to humor, not in my writing trying to be sly or sound smart amongst. At this point to say Im not doing well is just gonna fuel up arguments trying to prove that Im offensive or an offender, and that's really not a good direction to be placed in in life, that no one will forgive you for, if you appear one way in public or online, or behave differently in private, I think being girly is someone I am in private not someone I am anywhere else in the universe, and that much maybe was not understood about me, there is a risk you taken upon opening up to someone, that it someone learning your temperament, or understanding your pattens, or studying you, and ultimately if you become sick they all lose faith, its just something they wanted to know, what is hidden deep within, and then when they don't get what they want, its like everything else is said, that makes them not like you, I guess that was to prove I think in a dark way about life, or have dark secrets. Im pretty openly ashamed about self-harming, and it was not something I ever saw myself going through again, especially not with such short amount of time left to spend with family, did not anticipate that the arena was still that aggressive looking for a fight, it seems I am always the one people choose to fight in life, or the character that makes everyone feel better about themselves, or someone who everyone cannot empathize with, as I have said, easier to understand whoever becomes disinterested in me, and the more you think that way about yourself, to more it happens, and the more they become convinced that that is how your entire life has been, worse hurts more than anything I have ever experienced before in life, and its not a condition that my family is young enough to tolerate, and that's taking things too far, to turn on me and they make my family subject to whatever I am being attacked for, as though I was not a good companion online, or as though this person, had a right to treat me like he was someone who I had already once contacted, and watched on TV, make it a real connection of affect to treat me as though I insult the presence of those who are famous, as though Im so far beneath others, that to be mentioned in conjunction with my name, hurts their image, its this condition that is caused, when everyone eventually comes to accept you, then has to accept you not doing well, being hurt by the terms or conditions of acceptances from someone else, who they may or may not know, but who seems innocent compared to how you look.

Fame is earned its condition you arrive to not by association, by the way. It actually hurts more the more people who know you, its a very heavy downward turn onto your psyche, all the negatives hitting, then the responsibility of attachments, then detachment, because its painful being a disappointment to those who recognized you and cared about you, having been known themselves, and then there is the wavering around of uncertainty, and illness, that follows having reacted or responded (for me: self-harm), thats me being me, thats not me feeling insulted, thats me not feeling safe or uncomfortable, because I am not strong enough to handle negative attention, I already get voices at home, so its more about me feeling safe, not beaten up, and its important that I stay normal, not be a source of disappointment or fear to others, who have a divested interests in maintaining their faith in whatever restores their faith. Why not to hurt people who are well or who are in positions of trust, it throws the whole equilibrium of trust off. Sometimes people dont know what real until they get results, and usually the results being sought by trying to get a reaction from someone are not positive. I think thats a popular experiment on me, to hurt me, without proof, then to see me talk about how Im feeling, with no one caring, as though I have done something to myself, as though I am someone who exaggerates, or is not allowed to dream or be happy for others and be at a peace too. For some people their sense of peace, is removing people from equations in life. Although I see myself overcoming this condition, I am sad about the trust that was built, that no longer is a source of wellness to those who trusted me, but presents a type of difficulty, in that a bad feeling occurs, when everyone thought that everything would be okay. I guess it is then my responsibility to do my best not to contribute to a bad feeling, not make any one person the source of inspiration, continue to allow people to express themselves within reason, and continue to set a good example of how to see the positive no matter what happens, with faith that our resources will not be exhausted in life, due to who is connected and gets hurt, if you cant save lives, then dont even pretend to act like you know how, thats a ridiculous feat or promise in life, the best way to help preserve the wellness and faith of others, is to have faith in yourself, to see the good in others, to not worry about competitions or money, and let life happen to you, there is always time to think, nothings impossible until its done. Stay well!

Since 2013 Courteous to All ...

Its when things take a turn for the worst, you say to yourself, should I try to help, or is it not my place, then assess your condition, am I able, what can I do to help get things going in the right direction, and what later guilts were placed on me, to not recognize an enlightening experience as something different. What your motivations are in life, will always be questioned, whether motivated for good or bad reasons, and based upon what you share in your phone, or online, or by email, you get judged and assessed by the Government, who you entrusted your cars or information with, that seriousness, is that something you were not sure about was shared, and then a later interpretation by the public was made, to see what was shared as having been the condition for getting help, I don't think there were any dire conditions on a fundamental level professionally with anyone, and I think to say that anyone felt overburdened at a later point to do something to help everyone, was seen as being cajoled into serving a purpose that was not their own to provide assistance with. I think the problem in whether someone is lead by someone who is not liked by society, whether that is the source of secrecy from which a person finds strength, its not through secrets that strength is revealed, but it is only through positive purpose that growth and change can occur, not by the mistakes or misgivings of others, can society ever bear the responsibility of correcting the choices, freedoms, liberties, or evaluations made public for inspection, that's the risk of living life like an open book, unscripted, with your past in dialogue recorded, and your present to be lived irrespective of what occurred for you in the past. If I know that I was not well, and if I know that sharing my condition of not being well was troublesome, then at no later point does it become appropriate to share my feelings, fears, or sudden mood change or face changes in private to anyone, to shed light on the past as though I was that way then. I have never been that determined in life, to think that anything or anyone stood in the way between me and achieving a goal, as evidenced by graduating overtime, building a website overtime, and keeping to myself, as painful and boring as that sounds, I kept busy, and maybe when others where not doing well struggling during COVID I was made to feel the same, maybe that was coming from someone, who did not see me as having overcome my own struggles in life separate from others. I have always done my best to get help when help was needed, I don't think that now should be treated any differently. I know now to be careful of what I say, when I am not feeling well, as though someone is burdened to explain something that I am baffled by COVID, how and why it occurred, and why that was made possible, when everyone was doing well, and when the economy was booming, and people were starting families. I think caring, is not being a problem, therefore now my condition is troubling, because even if everyone accepts me, its painful to know that no matter how hard I try, no matter how far Ive come, no matter what difference Ive made, no matter whos life has bettered having known me, that I am still capable of getting sick, losing my smarts, or not being strong enough to persuade anyone not to hurt me, no matter how convinced they are its deserved, and that's the price you pay, for presenting what you know, and then what you know being misused to paint you as something you are not, and I think whatever look was being sought, occurred, and as a result I am not doing well. Most things that hurt aren't put into words, I do not think its my fault, for letting people into my life, I think that people will take things to extremes if they think they can get away with hurting you without anyone knowing or caring, to see what hits you on your way out, as though you were blindsighted, in life, and hurt worse, than you could feel, so by the time it hits you, you are already saying all the wrong things, sound like your giving up, or even worse saying things to allow for people to put you out, like that's what you deserve in life. And that's what being punished does do your reputation, it justifies all the times it looked that way, and then eventually it happens that way in real life, which was to be avoided by not making a big deal about the past.

Why I need time to rest, I love blogging, and I enjoyed blogging, and it has always been a positive experience for me, I think not feeling well has more to do with allowing thoughts to occur, to cause me to not feel stable, and when that is occurring means, that what was done to me, was intended to put me out in life, to cause me difficulty, and force me to rehabilitate from bipolar on my own again, which is a lot of voices, not enough progress, and your scared every minute back to wellness, as though you cant do anything right, as though your progress doesnt matter, and that hurts a lot to know. I think if in the past my condition caused things to not go right for me in life, when it comes to love and companionship, I think recovering makes no difference, that the same can occur, depending upon who you are, or what influence you have had, be made to be someone no one feels sorry for, as though you put The President under a spell to care for you or your family, then blame you for being half Asian, or the reason for "too many Asian deals," then blame your standard of character and conduct privately professionally and in public to be sub par, a reason for anyones loss of light. I think the circumstances are exceptional, and I dont think anyone has everything figured out I think everyone is doing their best and the last thing we need, are stupid mistakes, or comments with regards to the present seriousness of everyones health to be spoken about, to remind someone of what they are doing, to think about others things to be happy about, instead of attacking someones credibility as not having been someone worth initiating peace over as though those deals were for me or my family, as though a formal peace accord is not to be honored, or to be treated with disrespect from someone who thinks just because Im half Asian, that I am responsible for the failed health of a Country, like Ive ever made race a factor to be used a barometer for respect in this Country. I think if I am not strong, and if I seem like an addict, underperforming, then thats what happens when you get bipolar, and think too much about life, headed in the wrong direction, as many do facing mental health issues, they keep going and get sick, its not the sick's fault that they are sick, its whoever is reinforcing causes for sickness that should question their own undertakings in life, to put someone on the spot, to determine, whether by one's actions, that caused a misunderstanding or responsibility, and to whoever it was known, not to have contributed in ways to escalate hate toward any specific person, as not be worth living life, or living a private life, or sharing online in a positive way, in whatever capacity they were so able, to be light hearted, writing. I dont think its necessary to intensify what the content of my writing is to be about, but whenever people get scared, or dont reply, and have nothing to say once I get sick, thats not me telling them they took it too far, thats me not having fun, and thats me scaling back in terms of how hard I have to try to appear well, you can only do so much acting in life, sometimes by the observations of others, they wish to capitalize on feelings of pain, until you become a source of pain to yourself or others, and thats wrong to do. Accept that life in it of itself is painful, without questioning when people were well who did business, who made money, who invented things, where people were happy. Its wrong to hurt someone who is doing well on their own, like my improvements threaten the wellness of others, as though anyone is in competition with me, everyone has their own lives to live, thats really asking too much of me, to place me into dog fights in life, over jobs, money, or men, I can be alone, then.

Personal Update ...

Like all communications, once it becomes your own problem a matter of staying well yourself, it really makes it hard to connect, share, cheer anyone up, date, marry, have a baby, live a new life, and I think that was why I got destroyed online, as though my Twitter was not made in positive spirits with foresight to not get into issues past, as relevant to me or my life, that would assuming that I should have known I was famous or a source of inspiration to people beyond those I knew, I therefore dont think that later presenting well really makes a difference to take back the lives lost, under a different set of ideals, information, communication systems, technology is not meant for sharing feelings, pain, bipolar, or to communicate when not well or struggling, that just means that one needs time to recover, to then speak, from their own shoes, not in response to what is done to them, justify it. Thats really painful to hurt me as though Im not understanding of everyone else deserving to be made to feel good and do well, and just like I wouldnt want things to be blamed on me, nor should anyone in power who works everyday, and is not connected on personal levels with too too many people, thats how someone with few connections suffers when alone, those connections cannot be made similar to the times when things were normal and you could be yourself, people around you and available, once you give up on your first life, its kind of proving yourself thereafter, a talent show, behaviorally.

Personally I think things will get back to normal. I think conversations like this are very painful on my end, however reassuring to others it may be, that their worries for me were real, and even if in jest, whatever it is Im going through has nothing to do, with whats going on for anyone else in life. It was by my personal mistake, to talk, then convinced to continue talking, then the real President called me, while someone was convincing me that he was him, and talking to me pretending like he was him, even during one of his speeches how I knew it wasnt him, but enough uhhums later, dont play along for too long, eventually kind replies entertaining advances may take a turn for the worst, when someone exerts their political prowess over your identity to see what you have to say from your own shoes in life, to see who you sound like, to see what sides your on, likes etc. Being open is one of those things you share everything, and if things dont work out for you, that means to not share too much about yourself, because its not by knowing you better that makes others feel good, if they know that you are now not doing well, and for what reasons you are not feeling well, and if you dont say anything then you look like youre to blame. I understand the MLK jokes are very serious, and I have not stood up on a perch about life and human focus or direction ever, not my job, I only speak to what I know well, and just so happens others found what I had to say interesting no strategy about it, no competitions about it. I was always going to be a writer, just not with everyones blessings. And unfortunately I blogged, and people lost respect for me, and as a result I was not taken seriously. I think when you are missing things in life, like friends, a boyfriend, a job, you can wind up becoming fascinated with things that may make you feel good but that dont earn you a paycheck, my mistake. Doing a job you love, means youre good at it, and lesson: even if you work from home you can get sick and burnt out just the same if you dont manage your records well, stay professional in correspondence, pick the right jobs, the less sharp you look, the harder others are on you, for how things look, based on what they think youre drawn to, see how you feel being made fun of, if your interests or job prospects make you appear small, no a "Pageant Director" was thought a position I was good enough to apply for, but not in my condition now, and not after the years spent in recovery. Sometimes you have to talk to someone, to make a decision, then they can decide for you, and thats having few options, then sticking to what is going well for you, your writing career online, no doubts about it. And like all jobs, if I talk in a way, that is sad, or weird, then yes people may complain, then why are we reading, if you picked pen pals, over pursuing your Ex again, thats bc I waited for him.

Letter to President Trump Sent 10:13am ...

Re: My Website and Messenger

I think when good decisions were made that was with little need for advisement, or reporting to police, and overtime I got stronger, realizing what was within me, or what was going on around me, relevant, and eventually I was able to run the entire length of San Vicente. Not that there werent blarring reminders at every intersection, of how things could be, and to value where I am, and to not think too much about what couldve been done, and thats what then became of me, it was me scolding myself, in light of others who were thought lost to schizophrenia unmedicated, or a failed relationship with her Father she was very positive on Wellbutrin, but as the story unfolds, your choices in life, are what you later become defensive to in life, and I have always made it a point to never be threatened by others, or be afraid of sharing even my deepest and darkest secrets or questions in life, always taking responsibility for my own health, and deem any changes all a manifestation of how well I have been able to care for myself. It was a short journey to wellness, that didnt last, as luck will have it, made a spontaneous effort to reach back out to whatever pen pal past existed, and wound up with someone completely different. My story has never been said, and its when starting a job, things did not work out for me, at work, and also outside of work for others, and so I made it my focus to focus on my health, that if I get better and work and try again in life. I think if I am well, then yes I capable of making people feel good, but if Im not well, then I get avalanched by the craziest things I never saw coming, that seem to fall right into my lap, as though I ever had full awareness of everyone elses pitfalls when it came to accepting me, and found it easier to accept me on a smaller scale, without any hope in the possibilities for me, that must mean I left a poor impression past, is what it looks like, later redeeming myself.

Trust the recovery process, and don't rebel to fit in, that's not how to accept yourself as already having problems associated with drinking or trying drugs. I think its per relapse you get treated, and that's how you are to micro manage all issues coming up for you, if in recovery as sober, why talking is a plus, so that later in life, those small issues do not become a problem for you later in life talked about, which at 35, is far too old to discuss anything past. That's when you have to be forgiving understanding, and this is the time gap that occurs between the moment you admit you have a problem, to realization of how that problem has affected all your relationships, whether that's paranoia, trust issues, loss of faith, too social, not consistent, available, for every relationship or friendship that doesn't work out know your part, is what your told, and accept that it was because of something you have said or done that caused that distance not only between you and people in life, but between you and years to your life, that's waking up, from focusing on the wrong things in life, and that's why for an addict, no later showing of wellness or recovery really matters to anyone you have let down in the past who could not rely on you or who found it difficult to connect with you, or even think about you, that's the consequence of being put on meds, for having relapsed and become unstable, that is why you lose privileges in life, if someone does not trust that you are using your time wisely, your time is chosen for you, spent, under controlled substances and shots for psychosis, so that you don't take a turn for the worst, slow down in life, that's if your thinking is not taking you anywhere smart in life, and if people are leaving your life, means its better to be put on meds, and let them move on, and recoup, without being to hyper worrying, no one can fix you or answer your questions in life, and reporting everything you know see think or feel doesn't help unless it can protect otherwise its just your observations as paranoid, best to talk to the police about, not worry yourself in public. What causes that paranoia? If you have ever been an addict, that's how you feel when you are not doing well and others are, that feeling is you not being well, and means they are better off without you, so don't worry too much about the time elapsed between recovering and spending quality time again with family and friends, sometimes it never happens and that's okay, but don't go to extremes psychoanalyzing stuff you managed to save, that's you thinking about life as it appears in pictures, it was a good life, and if its something about yourself you can fix, then maybe that was that signal to others that you were not well, it takes a long time before you come to understand that you can control what you look like, and what wellness looks like, otherwise it's a scary thing to understand by anyone, you should love yourself, no matter who loves you, not ever have to worry about what you look like, that you learn by going out dating, how one gets lost, and when lost, you become hard to get through to, means to stay home, and means you need meds not social time out, there you will get no answers about life, and end up the only person not well in a room full of lively people, that's good time you spent away in school, and if you felt like you were missing out, your old life will not reappear for you in another form, the same problems will occur for you no matter what combination of people come into your life, that's instability and bipolar, cool one minute, then sick the next, why not to drink, know that about yourself, and don't ever allow yourself to fall off center, and then need other people to let you know that there is something wrong with you, that's a harsh reality to face in life, that while trying to figure yourself out, things can get worse, being out in life, instead of figuring out how to live a professional life, which is what you were there for image, had you known it then, Im sorry. Think for yourself, and simplify your life from there, if your okay with you, then you will make it easier for others to understand you, but if you keep quiet busy, that just makes people think that you are not okay, or notifies them that there is something wrong with you, and at that point the police are not your friends, they can taxi you home, but that looks shady outside your favorite bar, and they will pull you over and test you in a whole foods parking lot and let you sit in the front seat, that's your first time in trouble, why if youre not feeling well stay home, don't hit your head, don't argue, its okay for people to get mad at you text you non stop, and if youre not doing anything bad, then start behaving like someone to be trusted, not running to century city and back, its you doing things in life unlike your usual pattern that bothers others, that's a tough lesson to learn, if you ever feel insulted, something said that's not true, don't let those comments eat away at you in life, until it becomes true and then feel bad about yourself for moving forward in life, you cannot face your fears in life, being fearless, that's just recipe for your bike getting stolen everything that could click off easy dismantle to put in a car, stupid. Im sorry that I ever got police involved in my story for help, that's something to do with me not being stable, and its probably to do with mental health bipolar, not guilt, but if youre not careful you can wind up talking about things that don't help you only make you more scared, which is worse than a relapse, to suffer bipolar, why not to absue your gifts in life of speaking and writing, because its really hard to stop thinking, especially if your sober, and its not something you can just stop like drinking or drugs and go back to normal, its then your image, something you cant control in life, how others feel about you, and how you look to others, so be careful. Called my Attorney today, I wish I called him more than just those moments I was totally gone, its okay to call people even if they get mad at you, that means they should know if you are not doing okay, its okay to not be able to handle insults, just don't let things get out of control.

The Calm Voice ...

I'm only 35, and already have the calm voice. The voice that lets you know that it's time to calm down, that naturally tired, just left a moment of mania, overwhelmed, and reassessing your life. There are many phases to becoming a mature adult, and one of them being when to slow down. Don't completely stop what you're doing, but always be thankful for where you are, things could be worse, and depending on what your goals in life are, the risk of loss looming overhead, can be a daunting task of protecting yourself against, that headed in the wrong direction sense of surmounting pressure, to take a step back, and get going again, in a calmer stance. No one enjoys feeling sick, nothing gets done, and the more you think about it the worse you feel. No that's not life, that's just your processing of events, whatever you do, the less you play doctor on yourself, the better you'll feel, we tend to overcomplicate things in our heads, and make things out to be worse than they actually are. Which is why its important to talk to others, whenever you are going through a difficult time, we cant always do things on our own, and that's okay. Just know that you're not alone, and whether it's a headache, a stomachache, nausea, depression, or just plain feeling the blues, have faith, that things will get better. That's when it becomes a matter of focus, whether you allow a feeling to get worse, or whether you choose to focus on something that takes you away from a feeling of illness, its more than positive thinking, its simply not thinking about anything that doesn't make you feel good, worries you, or causes you unnecessary stress, I promise you you have more allies than enemies in life, its all a matter of wellness. Continue to take proactive steps early on in your recovery, from whatever ails you, the past, the present, a relationship, a memory, a feeling, a worry, a fear, what shall be overcome will be whatever you spend the time and the effort overcoming, so continue to take steps forward no matter how painful it may be, we wont always get that immediate feel good reassurance that lets us know that we are back on track, sometimes too many reminders past, can leave us feeling sick to our stomachs. What will be will be. That being said, finally broke 100,000s on Alexa worldwide. I guess that means that what I was doing with my life was going well for me, sometimes it sucks when you cant recognize that yourself, just like being told what to do in life, and then struggling to get something done that needs to get done, you keep putting off, it happens. Whatever your purpose may be in life, never lose sight of the importance of staying well, no matter how bad you feel, its not your fault if you get sick, it could just be something you've overlooked, or put off dealing with in life, like therapy or more AA meetings, there is always time to make amends, just don't beat yourself up in public over anything, that's what meetings are for, to constantly remind ourselves of what has gone wrong, while continuing to live life knowing what has gone wrong, and not allow it to happen again to us or others in life.

Two Ways of Looking at the Public ...

One your either sacred of the public, or two with faith, you believe in good things to come. Don't we all try to be on everyones good side, eventually you may face obstacles along the way, but that doesn't mean that you have to stop what youre doing, just because one person threatens your sense of stability and wellness in life, I think that's the point, to call attentions to themselves, using you as an object to shine light upon how they see the world. Although your perspectives in life, image, and reputation, may eventually take a turn for the worst (depending on how much negativity you can handle), such as the equivalent of being defamed in front of 17 Million people online, is what happened to me, the total number of people who know me online, by website, that was upon distribution. Who probably don't have the time to think too hard about anyone private life for that matter. But yes it hurts just as it would hurt anyone for things to not go right, or to be made fun of, I think that much you can eventually get over in life, if it stops, and if it continues, it may very well be because others have convinced themselves that you deserve to be tortured in life, by their commentaries about you, not seeing you as equally giving and contributing positively in life. Everyones always looking for a villain, to justify their anger, resentments, discord, or misunderstandings in life, and just how some rely on positives to think and see well, the opposite occurring for anyone who does not believe in you, value you, or see you as special. Why an audience gets divided, an opinion split, a perspective corrupted, a viewpoint exaggerated, its to any extent they can get away with making things look, to make themselves feel better about themselves, as found, and out of the ashes of negativity, that's how someone who is positive, is made to look negative, so that someone negative can be viewed as positive.

All it Takes ...

Being a little cookie cutter never hurt. We don't all turn into princesses overnight. But like all people, faced with doubt, pressure, and fear of what others think, eventually have to present ourselves to the world, in a like it or leave it fashion, just like dating, they either see your potential from the get go, or their attentions wander away. And that's the beauty of love, sometimes it hurts, especially when we don't recognize it when it happens, don't appreciate it when its present, and don't feel confident about ourselves enough in knowing that someone loves you. We can miss all the signals and confirmations, focused on the wrong things in life sometimes, and that's what makes life painful, not knowing when you have it good. I think I'm like most women, that when surrounded by friends or a boyfriend, we instantly turn into our loveable selves, excited about life, with things to talk about, comfortable just being ourselves. You definitely miss those moments, during times when your aloof, life passing you by quickly, doing what you think you need to do in life in order to get where you want to be in life, whether that's through studying or working, you don't really have time to stop and smell the roses, you may barely have time to even watch TV or keep up with the news, on a tight schedule. Whatever makes you happy, don't stop doing what you're doing, no matter how challenging life gets, stay on top of it, and that has been the key to my success online. Earn your stripes with pride, not by making promises, or stating opinions alone, where's the strength and reliability in that, it's whether overtime you have proved yourself worthy of the attentions of others, that others follow so willingly, without regret, or undo hardship in the comprehension department. Just like love or friendship, those things should come easy to you in life when the time is right to branch out and spread your wings. Then there is blogging, marked by day to day progress, that's the good feeling that comes out of your work online, something everyone else gets to witness, that you don't have the time yourself to go back, and study every step of the way, living for the moment. Don't be afraid to share your progress, remind yourself that the only way you can be sabotaged in life, is by what you allow to take hold, of your mind, or your body be affected, and that includes who you interact with, what you're thinking about, what worries you, plagues you, baffles you, confuses you, upsets you, irritates you, or makes you uncomfortable, let the best shine. Everyone is human, it's through wellness, by example, in a demonstrated format, that a better viewpoint can be made, not one contingent upon imitation, which has in the past been a failed system of influencing others for the better, trying to be like, sometimes the more you try, the worse you wind up feeling about yourself, inadequate in comparison, life's not a competition for praise, that's not how you stand out in life, by being like others, or trying to fit in in that way, everyone will always be about their own subjects in life, there is no textbook of general understanding when it comes to popularity and preferred interests in life, that's all in your head.

For 8 Years I Struggled ...

For 8 years I struggled with my mental health, trying to stay calm, enjoy life, and at whatever capacity I was able, make due with whatever was left of me, that's without having anyone in my life. Those are moments in life, you never picture yourself coming back from, you just become a different person, without even realizing it, and not understanding how to be yourself again. That's just taking meds as prescribed, working at a different speed in life. That's no one's fault really, probably just from drinking and getting in trouble. Usually when something bad happens to you and you get in trouble, people don't really try to understand, they just kind of accept that you have not been doing well, are lost, or struggling, I don't think anyone worries that much, and eventually the worry stops, that's if you begin to do better, work, and are able to talk to people. I think those moments in life, have passed, as painful as it is to admit, that my condition now, is not as well as I should be doing, after having done my best, you can't expect everyone to accept you, or understand what you've been through in life, and with a bipolar diagnosis think that everything is made up in your mind about life, none of it real, and that's really no one's job to tell others how it is in life, what's real, not real, we all have our own fears and limits in life, and it's never appropriate to make light of the struggles of others, no matter how deserved you think it is that they struggle. Back in the day you could be a nice person, without worry, today, if you come across as too nice, or loving, then that's how you get treated as stupid, and either look like a problem, as a result of your own making, or by the making of others, come to see you differently, whether by something you have said, or based upon who you are now, try to tell you how it is, you were thought of as this way, it was accepted that you were this or that, and this is why no one is made to feel good or better, upon you doing better in life, because no one believes you when you are well, think it's deserved, and that's how you go from someone who is not talking about their life, to be made to talk about life, as though everyone should expect or be faced with the same inner turmoils or question their surroundings or anyone for that matter. You are what you put out into the world, live with it, and whether you never intended to harm anyone, know that in your struggle it's no one's fault specifically, and although you may be struggling, it's not important to point fingers out loud, which goes from a bad condition to a worse condition, why make any more of you than there already are, meaning if you have had a difficult time being yourself, why would you want to talk about anyone else, and so you get left out in life. Everyone made apart of on a level by talking about, with no one to specifically help you in the event that you're faced with questions or uncertainty and that's the painful part of being lost in life or giving up, or struggling, or not being yourself, losing weight, gaining weight, having photos of you taken, be misinterpreted as having sent photos, or things now looking worse than they ever were as connected, I just know that when I'm not feeling well I keep to myself, and now it's become worrisome to me, that if I am being watched by someone who is bad in private, and made to feel scared without being able to do anything about it, then those who are good, or who were good to me, will not want attentions from me either, and pick up on any of that energy directed toward me. That's being public, and then being made fun of, deserved, and without remorse, struggling in life, I think it's to notify me, that I am not strong enough, or not good enough, or not invincible, like I don't already know that myself having lived life, mishandled by strangers. I get nervous too, I feel bad too, I get paranoid too, why I don't hang out with anyone don't go out. So...what is too late? I think if I start not feeling well, then it becomes a we told you so situation, if I start getting sick upon doing well, then it becomes a you are no different situation, and if it's a mention past thrown in your face, it's a we won't let you get away with speaking like that, and because you said that we scared you so you would know what it feels like to be scared, as though I ever intended to scare anyone, like I was not made sick myself given carcinoma cancer. I learned the hard way, that you don't get cancer by a woman giving it to a man, you get it by a man giving it to a woman, and if there is one incident where you weren't sure, then that is why you get let go, and everyone else gets off the hook, for being responsible for your condition, out. So it's nothing to get worried about, you just get tested and move forward in life, and if that was someone's intent to just let me struggle get labeled, punished, or hospitalized, then that was maybe someone's way of letting me know that I don't matter, and that's why I matter to me, that's why I blog, and that's why I move forward, and what's scary about seeing me well, is thinking that I am going to blame those who are well, scare them like I was made scared alone. Of course not, everyone deserves a chance to move forward, and filing court papers is not the proper way of addressing fears, it only makes you look like the crazy one, the best way to keep moving forward is to report, there's nothing street smart about reporting, it's just not allowing yourself to be blamed, as needing to take responsibility for your own mental health issues, whether or not you were declared as a sell out of cheater, or for however you were made fun of in life side not taken, allow everything to fall into place, without taking anything too personally in life, everything's done for a reason I believe in that, but scared is no way to live life, if better decisions can just be made. There will always be bullying that's usually to put people down in life they see themselves as above, to see them turn into something they are not, see whether they are controlled by voices, which was advice given to me once "so long as the voices are not controlling you," and to always let them know if I am hearing voices, that's the best I can do.

Being Understanding vs. Bringing the House Down ...

There's a difference between being understanding, and knowing when to stop, particularly when things get painful, yes it's important to understand the experiences of others, but not to the extent that we convince ourselves of pain, that were not present, or for different reasons present, when it comes to understandings in life. No all will be on the same pages in life, and that's okay, and that's an example of a painful fact of life, that we are not always made to feel apart of, or if we were once cool, easy to know, a later putting together of everything, can cause conflicting emotions, either not happy with how things are, or made to feel pain, as though more work needs to be done, or work completed not good enough to sustain the happiness of others. Another example of things being painful is when things look a certain way they are not (no matter who is being made fun of and why or for what reasons) some things are more apparent to others for obvious reasons than it may seem to others, who think deserved a fair shot, at commenting on controversy, before anyone has even seen the light of day. Don't read into things too much, that's how you end up taking offense to stuff which if you didn't even mention, would even be looked at, when looking at you, to see if about you, and why. Another pain is things looking sadder than they are, even if everyone knows something I do not. How can someone who is related to someone accepted by "the game" decide to open up on Twitter, for whatever reasons, that was later frowned upon, and looked at skeptically, as though I was reporting non-existent unhappinesses, with a boyfriend, or paranoias, as though I was not made apart of, sometimes in being apart of (pile of pens just like me), you try to keep your cool, and not make a big deal of things, you notice a lot when you are focusing on yourself, none of which bothers you, not until you lose stability (in the form of not performing to high standards), and it's that moment when you lose your footing, or focus, that you get tested in life to see what your made out of, baffled, befuddled, incoherent, quiet, frustrated, or scary, and do you question others go looking for answers in life, expecting answers to be provided to you in life, it's your mood after all, not the business of others to discern, but always know that the higher up you are deemed to be in life, the more is expected of you energy discipline and maturity wise, less is more, either keep things light, or say nothing at all, would be the point of controversy when it comes to sharing my identity online, it doesn't matter what your expressions are then, if made to look codey in reference to things entertainment connection wise, then that's how that part of history eventually gets led to believe as having existed at the time, if it appears that way to have been then, because of anticipation for now, being found out, or everyone knowing something that you don't know.

I get how things looks, when you speak, are you trying to figure life out, or have you already lived life and in reflection, how does that happen, does that mean that someone is coming to terms with something, or trying to be in acceptance of something found out, I don't think so. Everyone kind of goes by their own system of acceptances in life, if you change, then they change, if you become weird, then they become cocky toward you, and so it happens, everyone one upping eachother, until the bigger person rises above, or until what was said no longer becomes of issue, or relevant to right now, or feelings toward or about the issues that now seems relevant, whos more like who, whats more like what, whos easier to look at, what is illness about, what are mental health issues about, well its not about women, and that also doesn't mean that it must be about men, then maybe it has something to do, with my own happiness, meaning not doing well in school, not fixing my image, which was reminded to us our reputation starts in law school, you don't really think about what you look like, until it really matters or brought to your attention, that's also another sad fact about life. Maybe there is excitement in people observing you and thinking they have you all figured out, and that may very well be something loveable about you, just don't freak out, if its for a bunch of other reasons, you get sick later on in life, the stuff that people thought things were about, will surely not matter by then, and you will have no one to blame but yourself, expecting things to be cool, when you were not cool, or expecting people to still be here, to witness all the changes and misinterpretations, and that's what controversy feels like, you do your best, and your best is still not good enough.

So at this time, I think its important to mourn those losses prior to COVID, and had we taken early warning signs more seriously, then we would have allowed all the jokes and jabs to get the best of anyone, that's really no way of living life, by trying to figure out who is above who. Which brings me to another point, if someones panic, is your version of a threat, then also consider what should happen in the event that there is not one specific to blame, then what can explain that type of panic and fear, why I am on bipolar meds, that's when life gets so big, and you become so small in terms of what issues are pressing, and what issues have already been dealt with, that to bring up anothers suffering, makes no one better understand your own suffering, just looks like excuse for not having lived a better life, or a life one is proud of. I think I have always done my best, but without fail there will always be someone that will make you not to feel proud of yourself, lose your sense of confidence, and freak out, that's called getting laid, you don't realize what you look like socially, until how you date or who you dated matters.

Things could be worse, but nothing is more painful for a sitting President, to see everyone turn on eachother, over ideas, credits, and game, that may be painful for any one of them. The goal is always to have fun, not that our time is limited, allow people to live for the moment. That's responding to things as it comes to you, and when things don't work out, the obvious one to be blamed would be whoever or whatever cued anyone into having a little more faith than necessary to keep us afloat, financially, and spiritually, that's one thing he never allowed us to do, give up. You can have everything handed to you in life, connections, know people, have experiences in life working with people, knowing about people, but sometimes what makes you feel good, confident about your sense of direction in life, can be the very quality about you, that gets challenged in life, as being too high above the times, or not in touch with what has transpired or going on in the world, sometimes the most aware people are the most light hearted, not telling people how it is, not correcting people, not making a big deal out of little things, and never directing anyones focus to feelings that are hard to rid oneself off: pain, heartache, disappointment, respect, loss, insult, embarrassment, and over reaction, its not that one is being dramatic, its that that hurts, and sometimes it's the type of commentary that hurts, that then becomes unnecessary commentary for reaction, thought deserved, there is always a point in time, when people are given an opportunity to be forgiven, in recovery, and just like all lapses in judgement, so it happens, the same pain, shame and embarrassment occurring upon a relapse, that's making decisions based on how you feel, becoming over-consumed with feeling good or making someone else feel good, and what happens when you don't feel good? Whos fault is that then? The goal is always to stay well, to give back in life, without expectation for reward, love, acceptance, or accolade, that's not being defensive minded, that's going with the flow. When you've been through a lot, its easy to either be on point, on top of everything, rest, work hard, rest, and that becomes your sense of peace, being in control of your life, that's a sacrifice you make, in sobriety, missing out on life, because when you enjoyed life, things went to extremes, and you didn't reach your potentials in life. In my mind, do my best, but if my best is not good enough, that means take a step back, especially if the President is calling you. Its not that everyone met eachother too late, that's not the painful aspect of life, its everyones limits in life, not trust eachother, seems to be the painful part, and its not worth risking your life speaking, and being too late to say something, or having said something in jest, been misinterpreted as having a poor sense of humor, cocky. That's everything peaceful going right for you in life, and engagement, that's everything well, and suddenly everything turning into a nightmare for you, that's back into bipolar, physical and mental illness, not stable, and no one to help you but yourself, and the harder people try to get through to you, and the sicker you get the madder they get, whether or not you are purposefully a disappointment in life. Life is short, so don't take too many naps, and we understand your body is your temple, don't forget love and try hard. And work as hard professionally as you do physically, if you can do one thing well you can do all things well, it's all a matter of time, until you find balance and happiness, and self-satisfaction, but so long as the ones you love get hurt in the process of being attached to you knowing you, the worse you'll feel in life, the more convinced others will be that you were sick all along. Its so painful when everyone is hard on you. That no one deserves, just do your best on whatever meds youre on, be even tempered, don't be too dramatic. It's a painful lesson in connecting with others, the energy is pleasant, its only you struggling, and it only takes one person to get sick, to cause everyone to become distant communication wise, and that's not the purpose of communicating, to exhaust resources in life, get tired opening up, its not for saying the wrong things, its not for emergencies, and its not for helping past the point of harms suffered, to try to make up for lost time, that's being in the wrong place at the wrong time, with divided attentions. I face a lot of pressure to stay well, like most people I don't have time to complain, talk about my childhood, talk about my moments of failure, as fascinating as my downfalls in life may be to others, that's not a source of empowerment to me now, to have outgrown all those paranoid phases in life, never once questioning the energy of those around me, or their happiness. The reason why I would write online, was because I felt better writing online, right now since I have not been feeling well, I hesitate to write, because Im not sure if writing when not well, will cause others to not feel well, and that's a feeling I don't feel like describing then feeling it myself. Something to watch out for ... be respectful of peoples limits in life, sometimes it could very well be a matter of life or death, and pushing someone into illness, is not the solution to see how anyone would respond if I get sick, physically or mentally, as though I have chances in life to recover, Im a human being, not everyone is strong enough to handle a down in life. For whatever its worth Im pushing myself now, but Im not sure if its too serious for the time being, Im sorry. Tomorrow is a new day, no intent to guilt trip, or make anyone feel bad if I ever get sick, but I need to do a better job of making sure, that those who accepted me as I was, don't get sick. Be smarter about how I choose to spend my time on earth, I don't really think sex is that important.

Internal Harmony ...

Speaking your mind doesn't come easy to most, you would think that if it were possible for all of us to speak freely, that we wouldn't wind up feeling hurt from time to time, but like with all speaking, a careful balance must be maintained, between what you think and what others think hearing from you. Ive always been attached to things, mementos, jewelry, letters, notes, always keeping a meticulous inventory of all my things saved, ziplocked, in containers, in plastic bins, I even used to make photo albums and keep track of pictures before they were all lost. In my younger years I used to keep a diary, it seemed to be the trendy thing to do, I used to go to Kumon next door to the hello kitty store, and when I was five bought my first diary, it was pink, with a plastic lock and key. I journaled through elementary school, and then in college, and a few times in law school but eventually stopped, it then ended up on paper pads, and when I started lose track of my writings, I once made a plastic sheet covered album of all my poems, it was the same prebound plastic coverings book that I used for my moms recipes I wrote down in college, I cooked by phone, and put those papers in a folder, I don't think I was ever able to find again. So like all things you are attached to, or feel personally connected to, something you don't think about until it happens, when things go missing, if we always knew were everything was, wouldn't life be perfect, but its not that way, sometimes we get overwhelmed and forgetful, and sometimes that skill of knowing where everything is, gets weakened overtime, sidetracked, with other things to think about, but that's no reason to fall off balance in life. There are scarier things in life to be faced with other than losing things, money, or breakups, what do you technically own really, if its not people that are apart of you, what is? And that's when you start to think about your own self-worth, what can I do to make things better, what can I do to feel better about what I have left of me, without worrying too much about what has been lost or destroyed in a haste of disbelief. Isn't that how most feel, when things become unstable, what do I have, what is wrong, and what can I do to feel whole again, no matter what has passed, don't allow yourself to feel gone in life, not over things, and especially not over people, and although it may be tough to feel that sense of instability, I promise you are not the only one who falls off center from time to time, or feels like a piece of themselves is missing in life, just stay steady. As it turns out, what is of value to you, can sometimes be the very thing that you feel hurt by, and that may very well be how people choose to affect you in life, mentally, what happens upon losing notes, what happens once she becomes ill, what happens if she gets scared, what does she look like if she becomes exposed, and that's how people get hurt in life, when valuable moments in life, at peace, get disturbed, by someone all knowing, or thinking they know better than the one speaking. Some have that much about life figured out, how they see things, what they understand, we don't all have time, to think about life, not while in school or busy working, that's something that you maybe think about later in life, if you have the time, to understand whats motivating competitions in life, which is mostly about protecting a system of thinking, which isn't always in existence is the problem. I think when ideas bounce around in your head about things, that's thinking creatively, sometimes it keeps one going, and sometimes it can cause fear, well if it looks like this then people will think this, and sometimes people just stop caring all together, would rather reinforce an assumption, than leave room for someone to blossom or show their true colors. I think if your nowhere near acceptable and have not said anything to impress a mind that is certain that you are at fault, or that its your identity, or by your actions, demonstrate that you're not a team player, or being used to direct attentions to, that's not always meant or intended to be interpreted in the negative about someone, who everyone may come to know or understand in life. There's no such thing as someone being responsible for things that other people do, and some mass acceptance of understanding faults to be true that are not true, and if that's were the fun lies in thinking about life, then that presents a problem, a very painful one at that, to treat regular people as guilty, or to perceive their wellness, as getting away with being happy people, or watching them with expectation for them to have had awareness at any point in time, like it was ever a situation that nothing could be done about, so that's what people thought, that's not the ideology that control, thinking people get away with things, or thinking that a system of understanding already exists, about people, based upon who has been sued or died of Cancer. That's when one has every right to say, you know what, maybe that was okay for everyone to white elephant those issues in the past, but not this generation, am I willing to allow the same to occur to us, its not deserved to be hurt by things not said, and even worse its not okay to hurt someone who is speaking with prevention in mind, as though one is coming from a bad place, or without understanding or awareness, for the harms that have been suffered, be treated a just another bad luck issue, that's not okay too. So learn to trust people when they come forward, upon being hospitalized 9x, at least try to talk to the courts and the police, to figure out why this is happening, whats making it okay for people to continue to put people at odds, and how putting people at odds, because you think they are being bad and getting away with it, is not okay to punish people like you are the Government, or all knowing, if you are not a party which has been affected personally, by the misinterpretation of pop culture, or popular media, which is always doing its best not to let evil win, not to let people get hurt by bad thinking, and not to let people get sick, believing in the wrong things in life, ie making it more important to understand wrongs in life, than the time spent being at peace, and being of value to others, not be on their way out.

Mano Y Mano ...

If you're ever fearful about standing up for yourself, this is why, the quiet following a loss of motivation, or the feeling of being dumbfounded when things are not what you think they are, or the system of privilege which allows for others to feel good regardless what others are going through and no matter what is said not be affected. Call it refinement, that serious look, sometimes mistaken for guilt, whatever's looming overhead, don't allow the pressures to say something positive, keep you from saying anything at all. Its that moment of defense, when you either say things that make sense to others, or say things that sound like you know more than you do know, or saying things in the offensive, which is sounding you you think people should know, or be aware of the same pitfalls you've encountered upon looking back in life. We don't all live similarly, and some lifestyles are less respected than others, wellness comes with a territory. Fighting illness is tricky, and sometimes I think that others make it more about themselves, with less compassions for those who go through it, thinking it deserved based upon their living conditions, who they hang out with, who has bedded them, how successful they are, how well they speak, some days I feel like illness takes hold, just when Im beginning to feel better. You know those little reminders along the way, to keep going, to not hold back, suddenly becomes the same feeling that makes you question whether youre headed anywhere well to begin with, the difference between a dream and a nightmare, everything seeming to be okay, with nothing daunting ahead, then losing that whole feeling all together, for whatever the causes are, never give up, no matter how tired you become, no matter what happens to your thinking, continue to maintain a positive attitude, its what you ultimately respond to in life, that then becomes a matter of whether you are able to ever feel alone again, unbothered by any energies in life, that's life, youre either scared to live it, or you're a soldier about it, not letting anything affect you. I think that's too extreme to demand of any one person, to ever have to act like things are okay, who is able these days to act like everythings okay if something is wrong, and that's mental health issues, no matter how youre feeling, stable or not, you really have to do your best, not to allow the energies of others to stifle you, or cause you to second guess yourself, or think poorly of yourself, that's a ideal worth living up to, liking yourself. When people want more from you, that just means that they have more energy than you, our instincts wont always be strong enough, to give us the burst of faith we need to keep going during any amount of difficulty in life, that's when digging deeper doesn't really seem to do the trick, the difficulty in explaining how you feel, versus how things look, versus how you look, versus how other people feel in the face of you in life, either convinced there is something wrong with you, and without wanting to take responsibility for your unsteadiness in life, force you to face your fears in life, and represent yourself, that's how you know whether to work for someone, or to be an entrepreneur, that's if you are okay with you, but while trying to help make other people feel okay, you get drained means eventually you run out of feelings to keep adjusting to everyone elses insecurities or discomforts in life, that's deciding whether to push yourself for someone specific or to work hard for a greater benefit to arise eventually, that frees anyone from the assumed blame of misassociation between you or others, that's a popularity contest you cant win in life, not feeling good, and not being able to make others feel good by you, or by what youre doing in life, whatever amount of success, accolade, or paycheck you are able to earn in life. So don't make up excuses, and don't be the problem, and don't lend insights to cause those you love to think that you have ever been a bad person, or had bad experinces in life, that are causing you to struggle now, it all kind of hits at once, and the more you think about things not going right for you, the more life happens to you, instead of the opposite feeling, living life, as you are not scared. When the expectations of you are high, don't be selfish and trust God, sometimes its while quitting while youre ahead in life, you get challenged, thinking there is more to it, and before you know it maxed out, that's someone not understanding your limits in life, or what keepings you going in life, if they think its them, then you get treated as in need, if it was you, then a test of your feelings being hurt, lets them know whether you are someone who can work through pain, without anyone knowing how much pain you are in, or whether when you have a bad feeling or experience pain blame others or think its coming from a source outside of your immediate control, that's faith, not worrying and allowing worrying to cause things to happens for you, but without worry, without fear, so that you can enjoy living life, not hold back to feelings expressed by others toward you or about you, that's no way to live life, being treated as though its your mind, body that's causing illness to others in sight of you, that's a definite struggle of opinion. You know as a writer, by my experience its by what you expend in life that either motivates others to keep going, or attack you, as though youre holding back, and not doing a better job of speaking in a way that feels good, that's the beauty of writing, that although we may not feel good, our writing still sounds well, call is my voice, Im sure everyone was expecting differently, something evil, something mean, or something shady, as though I inherited some inner drive or "me against the world" attitude in life, with selfish purposes in life, concerning my own interests in self-defense, appearance, notoriety, or on an imaginary uplift of emotion made all to myself. There is being independent, but it means being strong for others, it doesn't mean being strong, and not thinking about others, which is the misconception of someone who is strong or independent of others, like they are not living well and as though them living well doesn't benefit others, I don't think that getting sick, or suffering should be done to allow others to see that their health is not interdependent upon my own set of circumstances in life, they too can lose faith in whatever was keeping them going as to making decisions based upon how youre feeling. When no one can free you of your worry or pain, that's the selflessness of blogging, the opposite occurs from hearing from you, that's when you can flounder, but you are not allowed to let others flounder without hearing from you, that's when hearing from people makes us feel better, a simple gesture, to make things better not worse, and if you don't hear from people, that's maybe becausr they do not empathize with you, or have misjudged the situation to mean that youre problems are not in need of reassurances in life, that's desperation, is people thinking that you had a bad intent, or choice words were intended to mean "mafia" when I titled my photo "most likely to go feesching” which meant smoke weed, and the opposite occurred, a caption over my head to say “voted most shady” which was hit to my esteem with a negative interpretation taken of something I said in humor which was not taken lightly, and which made everyone else look good except for me, that’s turning in your yearbook page early, my mistake. When you feel judged as you go in life, that’s what it feels like being watched in life, that’s what it feels like to not be trusted, that’s to see what your split decision making is like, that’s to see your capacity for pain, and that’s to determine whether you ever change or become something you are not, or present yourself differently in private than in public, something worse or evil, in mind, in words, by look, and that’s how you get treated as someone whos soul leave them, to explain your difficulty of finding any souls that match your own sense of being in life, that’s sickness, not yourself, it takes awhile to get back to being you. The lull between deciding whether you are aware of a need to be defensive before being treated as vouching for the wrong ideals in life with assumed wrong values with assumed wrong sides that’s when your ideas basic thinking gest put into question, not the behaviors or actions of others, who seem innocent by comparison to your misunderstandings about life or questions concerning reality good or bad. So don’t panic, speak well, don’t exaggerate, speak from the heart, be honest, don’t get upset. The worst is actually when you appear to have the wrong values in life (“nude”) that that behavior then opens up to assumption that more likely than not you think like the wrong teams in life.

That’s the lesson by stating every memory from your life, how easy it is for someone to size you up and pick on you, like everyone is innocent and make you feel like you have ever done anyone wrong in life, that quiet sadness others go through, thinking it has something to do with you, and that’s how you get treated, as though you are the person who takes happiness away from others, if you are continuing to try hard in life without those people in your life, that’s dating, whoever is more put together, mature, seems to have the better head on their shoulders, and the one who is lost, is assumed to have done themselves wrong in life, or not be a prime pick for the taking. That’s trying to be marriage material, its hard work, and if youre not careful, you can easily be put into a bad life, before you have even been given the opportunity to live a good life. It’s the stuff that scares you, that becomes the basis for attack upon your character, and the jokes that take hold by comparison, that juices up the anticipations of others hurting you, feeding into a source of humor, that no one feels affected by that’s putting society together, by keeping them separate from people in life, famous people, who have done wrong, and try to make you one of them. You cant compare someone with no social life, who has not been paid, who works hard, who just graduated from law school, as being well enough to put up with taunting as to my 4th step, that’s not deserved, to treat me as some type of gangster person, it was me that was well, that enables those who live a different type of life to feel well around me, that’s not engaging in the problem, drug use, or drinking, that’s being a normal friend, that doesn’t mean one is like.

Personal Update ...

11/13/2020

Good News: Talking to Aaron, and one reply, "maybe a backyard wedding." Its never too late to go back and live the life you should have lived, if its not too late, not get caught up end up some place else in life, so do your best to forgive the ramifications of being schooled by others in life, its always by the quality of your character, work ethic, and look, that makes others feel better, who knows what anyone else is thinking these days, and that too strong feeling others got from you at one point in time, was that you were being too much, so now is probably not a condition ever expected to come to be, wellness, or success, I think when things are tough we push ourselves to not make things worse, and thats the point of not hitting home to the heart of an individuals issues, make it a tough pill to swallow for everyone else, on and off meds, trying. Theres no risk in caring, but there is a ton of risk, if you get sick, then you cant be relied upon.

There's No Secret to Success ...

Theres a false impression I feel in the knowing of people with expectation of feeling good and seeing just like them made to feel better, if that were an equation to wellness, like calling anyone out, or being talked about, the whole experience of being in charge of anything important to you, can be a stressful learning experience, we aren't all put together at once, not everyone gets helped in that department, not unless you ask for help, or given money to sustain your wellness, what money is for, money when well, no money when not well, that's basic to trust, you cannot be given money when you are not well, because no amount of money can fix you except yourself, so its best to stay home and fix yourself, not run the risk of buying things expecting to feel better, what happens if you get sick, then none of that really matters then anyways. I have always been a simple person, same clothes through college and law school that much didn't change until 2019, when I decided to try harder, live to a better standard, my old way of living was either business professional or in the same clothes I never really shopped everything too expensive.

So when you do achieve success, that isn't because of a sad factor, a special factor, a famous factor, a lot of people know famous people, and its not special information, then it must be the human being that feels good to others, easy to know, or understand, that doesn't mean I speak in a different language, maybe just not made to feel good by the inner workings of what keeps a dialogue going for others with regards to what makes them feel special, protect those interests to keep others out from understanding or hurt by it. That's something I just noticed as of 2020, you may listen but you will not listen with focus, not unless you are prompted to read within, and that's when writing doesn't really do the trick, in fact is capable of doing the exact opposite for you, instead of making everyone feel well, make a few feel bad, lighten up, that's not the point, that's not a teddy bear others turn into, that's weakness, made to feel in the wrong, or reasons for having been a certain way, having anything to do specifically with a person or fame.

When you get left out to dry in life and no one helps you hold center, that means that you there forward, are not to allow the same loss of power to occur for you or others, that discomfort, is a good impression turned bad, so everything you stood for or stuck up for in the past, then gets made to turn into an example of you being someone who deemed someone good to be the problem, and that's self harm looking like its about others, by voices, or by choices or sides, protected, and that's fame, youre either with it or not with it. Youre either presentable and put together, or others shy away, hoping to return and see some improvement, that's being in a workable condition, and then there are things you say in that space of calm having done a good job, and that's when opening up changes to a calm tone of insights about what was feared, and too late to have been said in a way, when a bunch of negative deductions were made without you upon observing what you were made out of, at what point you wanted others to stop being hard on you, and that's when to forgive let go and move on, allow their later stage of strength, to serve as information notifying you of their struggle to accept you and whatever has gone on around them, be strong. The less you moan and complain when things are good, the stronger you'll be in moments of doubt, or in fear of being blamed, and hope that the best comes out of others, not the reverse, illness, free. Free of thinking based upon current thinking alone, with respect for the past, not allow the present to hold anyone asunder, that I think was the method to the madness of the 4th of July, Laker song at the beginning of every game, it was serious, and it was quiet, because that's how they felt, its dim, when its time for you to light up, and that's why the police were there, and the only people that stood out were them and Lebron.

When Life's Not Fair ...

Whatever is done you will always be the one who has to put yourself back together again. No matter what harms you have suffered, its also your job to protect others from harm in avoidance of issues you have personally faced as a result of your own conduct whether or not talked about or known, allow others to have fun telling your story for you, what do you expect, everything matters in life, and just like people want to identify themselves as well, so is their right to protect themselves and their image, which is the risk you take in being social, how you look, sound, or made to feel, or appear to others, a "wheeler and dealer" in life a "whore" a "wannabe" you know you either have social skills or you don't and that's okay its actually more painful to be quiet, timid, and shy, and never have the courage to shine, its also not fun when emotions get brought out of you, like you need opening up more than you already have, and that's a manifestation of someone else wanting to be the one to change you for the better, as though your best was not good enough needs to be to a better standard, or so it seems if you are unclear of what the issues are when it comes to love and comfort, the more mature you later come to be the better you will understand that exchange in demeanor, between who becomes the sweet one versus who becomes the tough one, and sometimes you are changed because others may think that is what will bring out the best in others, if you are identified to have been both the source of inspiration at any point in time, or then be blamed as a source of pain, not with it, happy for others aware of what's going on, so what can be said about reporting. There are rare moments in life when you are able to be on top of things on time, and then the minute you have lost control of knowing when to get help and when you forgo opportunities to get help, is when you are tested, in spirit, what speaks to you, what you say, whether you even question after harm has been caused others or the past, by then it doesn't matter, when you're not on time in life, left behind, and that's a lesson you only learn later when it's too late, for you, not necessarily others, too late to spend time with, too much time wasted not focused on right now, too tired to think or perform, and when more of you is expected to perform, sometimes that can stifle you, and inhibit your ability to perform with a clear head on your shoulders, that's pressure and expectation. Know that what you photo kept, sent, or posted, will always be wondered about what ever compelled you to speak so freely, or be so fearless, and by the time you get sick, you will have understood the importance of image, discipline, perseverance, and staying conservative whether that was your version of not being extroverted, presumed to be shy, without animation a follower so be it, if you can't light yourself up, be proud of others who are able to light up, that's being too late. Crying is the phase when you needed everything to go right, and feel like your losing your battle with being loved not making it in life because of who you are or what you've been through wanting to be treated the same, and when that doesn't happen for you it breaks you, why people can't just be normal with you and normal with others, what is all the fuss about or reservations.

Getting Psyched Out ...

Sometimes it's best not to think too hard about anything in life, that's how you eventually get tested or treated like a sponge for reactions, that they can witness to their face to decide for themselves whether you're an "empath" or out of touch with reality, as though you only read from within, not with consideration for the wellness of all, that you can never credit yourself for, the reasons why people may or may not be well, everyone's on to something in life, and while you may be the world's best PI that doesn't mean you're invincible in life, what another puts together, another can easily pick up and point all fingers at you, like you were intended to be a joke introvert in life gay, by name or body type, not something that would eventually outgrow dispositions in life and become something beautiful, who are you at the end of the day, who you know, what's around you, from within, it seems everyone's trying to channel their inner beauty these days at whatever cost it is to you, to not be situated or recognized among them, not a beautiful soul collected among the best, is what is trying to be made to make things look like, like I have not admired modeling my whole life, collaged my wall in high school and college with magazine photos, as gay as that looked, to me that's respect for others that's their version of a wannabe idolizing others but not representing those facets of life that enable spiritually enable for beauty to take hold, and that becomes a painful basis for comparisons in life, who shines when where and why, and will someone who is capable of lighting up a room, be the same after punishment, that's the sad fact of life, a gift never shown lost upon happening, what punishment does, allows the reverse to occur upon guilt, sensitive to everything, until you become a sponge absorbing illness from others, and feeling like you were made to be ugly, which then gets blamed on your words or feelings as having nothing to do with anyone but yourself. And that's the exciting part of seeing whos awake or still aloof, the smarter they get the quicker you fall the minute you go to anyone for advice in life, the sooner you crumble the more put together others are, the reverse of walking into a room and people starting to take life seriously, a type of mixed reaction that's not awe inspiring. -I'm sorry I was not smarter than compared to where I am now, not as intimidated, more understanding, more focused on myself, than take anything personally, why describing the past looks like concentrated on wondered about, if spoken to at a later point in time, how others are made to feel special except for you.

Issue: When the causes for one instance of mental illness, are tested over and over again with different variables until another is proven right or made to feel good about their understanding of you, if what was far fetched then, to be concerned about, means that your head was in the wrong place in life, meaning that the less you think about lend insight to, the less provoked others will feel to attack you on those bases, as though you have knowledge of whys in life, or to what effect those things happen in life, name changes, to allude to what misrepresentations of you and by what means was that reasonable for others to express their concerns concerning whether to read further into what you were seeing and why, who was to blame for that, if not then looked up, why now is there expectation to look up, to know more about and be compelled to talk about things not studied by me but studied by others, so they are made to feel better about their understanding of me, and that's a no win situation, when no one is made to feel better, that's when you have to think for yourself which isn't always easy to do, a simple way of looking at life is putting things together to see whether you are insulted and what you look like upon being insulted, how you are made to feel, to cause others to feel sorry for whoever was not tolerable or drawn to you then and especially not now, even if improved, why I'm single. So whatever is done with love an Instagram, a Thesis, Law School Notes, Photo Albums, gets destroyed, so that the keeper of that information, as kept, becomes a recorded vouch to say that you ever had illness or ill feelings toward anyone, sometimes what sticks out to you in life, was not done by me, and that's what tampering does and theft, to connect a record to someone who has my things, so that they can get a reading of me study me, for insights to see better.

Never Credit Yourself ...

Never credit yourself history comes with a territory, to be understood, looked at, but not to be repeated, and sometimes the best who move forward are able to comprehend both, not fall victim to any one understanding or misunderstanding for that matter. It always seems to be the case that when you're not doing well, that you are told what it is you are doing wrong, or corrected in a collective way, to inform you by surprise or by agreement upon others, that it is you that are gone, and because you are gone, means not headed in the right directions in life, for bad reasons the cause of your illness or appearing as sick, or mentally ill to others, sounding and looking. Those who are put together will always stand out, for whatever reasons never stare, you're likely to not be made to feel good or look good about it later, that moment of thinking occurs within you, should not occur upon looking at others. And that presents a source of misunderstanding, whether by looks one concentrates, or whether by gift or communications present is attempting to speak to a larger issue, one is very confident in themselves about upon looking at you, when you are found to be in the wrong, that's your job to become stable again, if after dating or connecting with anyone on an intimate level, that's no one's fault, it just happens to me as a woman, nothing to do with them, but something to do with me, apart of me must be missing, and that part of me that was longing for love and affection or a genuine interest in me, that's the type of love generally craved you have to work very hard for, for others to be comfortable with you and confident, and for you to feel the same way about yourself in their presence. That's an issue of whether artistic works are to be used to compare people in general, whether the same effects are accurate measures of defining the quality of work ethic demonstrated to denote value to any given person or artistic value, and that feeling that is felt overall, how many feelings like that does it take to understand a piece of work as representing wellness not in the reverse create illness through the looking at a person or piece of work, to say that if illness is felt looking at one, then the looking at their work similarly creates an illness to explain the illness of others, and that's something you later come to understand in life, look and the importance of looks, and the importance of if upon reacting, that the insights shared by another will be offended if you are not in alignment to those interests to speak about someone in that way, defined as a villain. So enough with the hair dye, boobie trap, traitor, spiritual leader, pop star, wannabe jokes, its once the confidence of others becomes a recipe for insult, that things have gone to far on a personal level. By how you are, whether that represents what is known, whether that's to code by conduct, in relevance to things known by others, or whether the thoughts in disagreement of you, were for the purposes of hearing what you have to say, and based upon a few quick decisions on their part, assumed you to be the guilty one or the cause for disarray or violence. I think you do your best to get help, and its by your own condition, you generally feel the need to get help, whether or not you are being teamed up against in life, that's being treated as gone as though you should know what you have done is wrong, or by expression appeared to be speaking to subjects you either do or do not know anything about, or trying to appear peaceful, in a useless or futile way, as though in place of whatever feelings you are feeling, deemed to be in correction of others or yourself, and that's when your voice becomes a weak representation of facts, seemed to be a selfish error on your part to question others, and explains why a later condition of mental health issues is caused, that speaks directly to whatever made you feel special once or helpful or smart, destroyed to make you appear to be the one saying things which by typo or made clear in a negative way, to cause others to be quick to judge you in the negative upon a closer inspection. And that's not being professional typing, and as a result of not being official enough, that's how you get treated, no one can help you, you seem too big, or energy too questionable, to be given any chances in life, and should anything go wrong, blamed as though you call attentions to the wrong things in life, as excuse for the strength exuded by others.

A Finer Understanding ...

When your world opens back up, after incessant worry or feelings as though things are not right, make sure to count your blessings twice, and not make life shorter than it needs to be, by later making things out to be different than they are or were, that's when no code of understanding can help you, and the more you reference the past or use examples for inference whether to communicate a positive or negative comprehension with acceptance and appreciation, all of it, at a later state will be viewed in the opposite, a later acceptance or insight having been seen only after punishment, as though punishment served for the purpose of illustrating your own misunderstandings in life, which usually only lead to worse comprehensions of all things existing, and that's a tough pill to swallow, to not be understood and at the same time made to feel as though one is not well out of their own misunderstandings, words, or actions in life, ever offensive, defensive, or purposefully not sure of themselves. Always think to yourself, after speaking, what is being reinforced, what is being bothered, what is being strengthened, what is shedding new light upon, what concepts, where is offense taken, who has been affected, who was on board, who is on board (no one), and who has yet to be on board to any interpretations concerning the rhyme and reason of any innerworkings or a good idea made. Always leave room to the imagination, that's as a general rule, it seems that the higher you climb the harder you fall, its just how people who are perceived to have it all, get treated, as well because they have been spoiled or sheltered, giving them a taste of their own medicine in life, that's how you get treated as the antecedent to anyone elses misery in life of things bring bound to not go right, wheres the purpose in keeping secret any of that, that's how misinformation starts becoming too powerful, strong enough to create misinformation within, that's when your thinking gets affected by what is thought which is usually something you are told not to worry about. Sometimes those losses in faith have more to do with another exerting their dominance over your demeanor, than it has anything to do with you, and that's what not to allow, the energy of someone who is not you telling you how to be, whats appropriate and whats not, or even worse deciding for you, to not be respected at all, once their faith in you has been lost, that's how people decide to punish you, when they feel affected by your condition, take personal, as though everyone has not done enough. There is a stopping point, when things are beginning to go well, that's not the time, to test the spirit of someone, who has improved, the only loss to feeling defeated in life is you. As a writer you are affected by two things, your own thoughts and the impressions held of you, which cause you to be led, misled, or end up places which in the immediate you may not recognize yourself when well, or even notice the exact point at which you begin to feel better, that much gets misunderstood, just like all people, you find your way out of feelings, its not a given, and that presumed togetherness, is not someone thinking they are above others or the law, that's someone minding their own business, and what happens when everyone collide, how to feel then? That's when there needs to be a break in comparisons, until made true to be of a consequence of the instability of one, not to shine light on bigger concepts in life not to do with me. Its those stories shared private that get made to be uninspirational, and instead get viewed as the cause for decisions made, which later can be blamed as having been too vocal in a negative way, where is the love in that, to always assume the negative, as though for a combined purpose of teaming up on someone, where is the positivity in trying to use good things made to further establish a negative take, and that is the argument trying to be made, that if one is not well, one assumes that things are about them, to say that because she thought that, these things were done. And that's really hurtful, painful, and somewhat unforgiveable, but something I live with daily. Everyone there forward presumes the negative until something negative happens and then rationalizes with those harming others, as having something to do with me, so where in the past it had nothing to do with me, Im not at the interception, of being used to explain bad people, and that's not what living life is for, speaking, and then being read into, as not providing sound insights or advice based upon my experiences not being used, and being a provider of wellness to others, that genuine stability around you, is someone not making your life difficult, its then you.

At Different Points ...

At different points in life, things will dawn on you, that you cant change or fix, like how long it takes for you to settle down, whatever that rush is, its not excitement, and whatever that pace in life you were going at, upon less than popular choices or decisions, can cause things to take a turn for the worst with your identity known but not yet in a favorable light to all. Let people step up to the plate, and be whoever they want to be, but not at your expense try to get in the middle of anything you felt immediately affected by as a fan, that's when you get misplaced and put on the wrong teams in life, affected as a traitor, not viewed as a mediator of issues, you cant really reason with anyone who is so sure of themselves in life, that's the kind of stuff you just leave alone. And if you are ever found in the wrong, then that's what the fight is about, keeping you away from people, making you the source of scolding, or poor temperament, and its not you that can fix, how others are made to feel about you, a let down, and whenever that was declared and for what purposes that was declared, that just means that others may have been watching you, and not pleased with your latest developments, that's being known, if you talk about how things were in the past, your bound to wind up feeling sick, as a latecomer to any situations in life, people felt compelled to speak about, represent, or run ideas counter to whatever was working for a few people, to have been in acceptance of one another, that can lead to a feeling of things not going right for you, and watching as things go right for others, who knows whos protecting who in life, and who knows by what standards others are made to feel safe or protected from the issues in life, why its important that when scared never to assume what things are about, you will always be later reminded of when you said, so that you cannot live life in a improved state of mind, that's when what you say, gets used to justify how you are feeling, and that's how you wind up making yourself feel worse than necessary, connecting to the wrong ideas or emotions, not necessarily people. You cant go by name, when it comes to who is aware or understand the issues, everyone takes everything personally these days, and no one really protects you from harm, you are mostly left to your own actions and choices that ultimately make you feel well, eventually you have to stop caring about what things look like, or for how long things were ever thought in the negative about you. Those are mistakes or choices you'll never live down in life.

Come On Lighten Up ...

When everything hurts, that's a good time to lighten up, no matter what makes you smile from within, youre bound to feel the warmth eventually, about being here now. Whatever that pressure is, that's about being you, learn to accept all parts of you, even the bad times, you wouldn't be who you are had you not lived life, we all make mistakes. If that was what Star Wars was about, split decision making, Im sure Im the most questionable in those respects, they used to sell signs at Kitson, to hold, to help manage road rage, that was funny, remember the days, and when it happens to you, everyone stronger than you, what was that anyways, forget, forgive, and move on, theres no telling what can happen when people decide to be strong for themselves and others, that would be the whole point of staying positive, not that its contagious or anything, letting go what hurts, forgetting any causes for pain, and finally remembering when to feel good no matter how it happens, timely or not, obnoxious as it may look, who cares, its when you start to care about all those bad feelings that you wind up late to everything everything painful, too far back to remember, and too painful to describe at this point in time. You are what you connect to, I learned this messaging, going going gone, I guess that's why they make gambling illegal in most states, most without permission to be rolling high, or making decisions, based upon feelings, that eventually may leave you feeling without, nothing, and whos to blame then, your feelings, that's not a safe way of living life, using up all your chances building off a good feeling, its always a good time to stop, take a look around, and by a majority opinion, check yourself, are you doing okay, how are others doing, are you better or worse, and if not up to par, its always okay to stay home, no matter how painful it may be, to not feel good, you cant feel good again, by pushing yourself when youre not feeling good, theres really no basic rhyme or reason to that, to risk what is left of you, out of fear for how things may look, that's the point when looking strong doesn't really get anyone to stop thinking what theyre thinking, and when everything you do keeps them thinking about you, except you retaining your ability to see clearly in whatever direction you're going in in life. My Lens Crafters exam, the one with the faint squiggles that pop up, told to push a button to identify, I couldn't see any for the first 20 minutes then tried harder, it kept going dark, meaning I couldn't see clear, I have to go back, that must just be stress, for things not to pop out to me, or for me not to be as observant as maybe I once was, with a clear picture of myself, without being scared of others, it's all about you at the end of the day, what you see, what you believe, and what becomes of you in the wake of anything scary, whether it hit you or not, that's life, you have to forget about a lot of things, to see clear again, whether that's overtime things passing or being less hurtful or bothersome, whether because of focus or outlook, if we could always think our way out of feelings and fears wouldn't life be a much happier place to be.

A Sad Fact About Life ...

No matter what has happened you still have you, whether or not it hurts to be you, irrespective of what has transpired or been thought of while thinking of you, do your best to move forward, whether not respects of you have been lost, to standards, or by the feelings of others, which occur whether or not you are up to bat, moving along in life, sedentary, lost, or struggling, that much you cannot control in life, how other people choose to live their lives. When you feel hurt, remind yourself of all the positives, whether or not it helps you in the immediate, and if you are made to feel badly about yourself, don't forget to move on, and do your best to improve, what you consider insult or threat, will likely be the same type of scenarios you will live through later in life, so you better learn to accept your disposition in life whatever that may be, a source of inspiration to yourself or others, you may not always be the determining factor of those consequences in life, of feeling apart of or made to be excluded, that tailwind you experience in life, has nothing to do with others and everything to do with you, that sense of faith and feeling good, can and will occur again for you, but not if you become affected by every little detail that comes with being a human being, sensitive to the needs of others, as well as your own needs, to feel safe, feel good, and feel like everything is going to be okay, that much is not promised to you in life, a down you may or may not experience in life, that eventually you outgrow or find yourself in worse circumstances in life, if you haven't learned your lessons in life, of who to love, who to trust, and how you are made to feel about yourself, let no one get the best of you. We can't all just turn around when things are not going well for us in life, sometimes we have no choice but to move forward, and always be cautious, of those moments when you are feeling well, and reminded of something past to make you not feel so good about yourself, it's the smaller they see you, the smaller you become, and that's just people, some forgiving some not, and some thinking they know you better than you know yourself, either having known you over the years online, held opinions about your recovery, or whether not even have given you a passing thought just met you recently online, that amount of time is not worth discussing, how long it takes to recover, the sooner you reply to question, the sooner you get sick again, by your own descriptions. That's just people, no one really wants to get involved when someone is not feeling well, and no one really wants to be responsible if someone does not feel good about themselves, no one really understands why people are made to not feel good about themselves, and based upon what you look like, some feel sorry for you and some don't. It's a difficult challenge in life to care, and not care that others don't care, it's just recently I have begun to realize, that no matter how well I do, or am, I will never be well enough for people to be completely at ease with me, and that's a sad fact about life, no amount of effort later, can really undo that pain if you allow it to take hold, reference it, or speak to it, it's what you speak to that eventually becomes what you walk through in life, a bunch of feelings or emotions, which were thought to be temporary, or due to some standard of upkeep they thought having to do with looks or insecurity, sometimes upkeep is about just plain staying well and feeling good, and some may not feel good by the fact that you eventually felt good about yourself again, it's the type of punishment that occurs socially, when who you were then was not good enough then, so who you are now is considered no better or improved, and that's how a long life, turns into a short life of whys, with justification to boot, of anything you have said when not well, losing faith in yourself, or having ever felt victimized, disregarded as being the cause of your own circumstances in life by the content of your blogs or twitter, as not having been in positive spirits or not professional enough to be trusted to whatever extremes were expected of you, to stay well. That's the one thing, you cannot expect people to care when you are not doing well, and that is something I just realized upon not feeling well, before your ever on board or in acceptance of others, you are made to not make sense or not look well, so that you were never apart of everything going well in life, and that no contributions on your behalf were ever noticed to the extent of you deserving your current place in life, that's the inside battle, whether to get sick, whether to have more compassion for yourself, or allow the putting together of negatives on you. It isn't math, stating negatives and putting together negatives, to see an decrease in work flow of someone who was well, to say that is how they speak so that is what was thought, and because of what is being thought of them is why they are not feeling good, to the argue their perspective that they cannot see the good in you, the positive nature to your work ethic, until nothing you do or say even feels good to you, the stuff that you used to pride yourself in, no longer does the trick. And when all those pet peeves of how you like things to be in life, orderly in order to feel put together no longer matter, especially with the commentary you assume to have ever been about you. There are no teams in life when it comes to wellness, and some things keep other people going, and if it was knowing of you, and not respecting you, and then blurting out commentaries to which others could understand that you were not made apart of and later tune into, means that it was spoken from them, and whether or not it was about you, as unwanted, there is nothing you can do about it now, having been judged as being a certain way you are not now, or ever then. I once described what was special about my blog and website was that it was made with care, and because it as made with care, made by me, that is what drew others to it, but now Im not even sure if how Im feeling or how I look even matters when it comes to determining my self-worth. Theres a lot of bad feelings when it comes to hostility feared, and that's what happens when you get marked as someone who expresses anger, upon being wronged, or told something not true, or whether true or not, bothers you, that's to keep some people down in life, so others may rise. I don't think I was ever a jealous person, and I don't think I ever saw myself as better than others, but now it kind of becomes relevant, what exactly is the threat of being well, and why things need to amount to a threat, in order or a better condition to take hold of someone not sure about me, that is what happens when something bad happens, and changes in you get looked for, to see what is in response in the positive, what is hidden deemed to be in the negative, and how that differs from a later state of wellness, put through the same ropes in life, Im not sure whos image is protected then, if its something that people cant just let go of, its because they are trying to prove you wrong, or not in the solution, not to anything you support, to say that nothing you do feels good, period, not to others, so that nothing you do for yourself even creates a well feeling for yourself, that's being misunderstood in life, to be worse than you are, its not until you become worse, that something is said, that rings true for someone, who never thought you were smart. What doesn't feel good, is an assessment of someone life overall, trying to pin point what a person is about, even after having heard from them, to minimize the potential for them ever having been made to feel badly about themselves, that is when who is well, stands out more, than anything you can say, which probably doesn't make sense of hurts anyone who was never about you in life or bothered by you, that's how you begin to bother someone, who doesn't even know you, or thinks that you are trying to introduce archaic concepts of life, death, war, and illness.

God Given Talent ...

Success is not a God given talent, and yes it does take some strength to make it through good and bad days, that you don't always anticipate along the way to following your heart in life. Its seems as though people are feeling good and going on feelings that much is assumed about someone who tries to make the right decisions in life, no matter what is going on elsewhere for others, not be seen as some invisible networking for understanding life, based upon composite sketches of those who have done others wrong in life, its not for the same reasons, that those who hurt others think they are doing the right thing, as someone who is doing good, or being well for the sake of doing the right thing, the origins of those lights do not come from the same places in life, making neither the supplier of that light, its just trying to look similar as excuse for whatever may be the reasons prompting others to harm people including myself, as misidentified as being a source of something other than wellness to others, that fear of where someone is headed in life, that leave others taken aback are the same reasons prompting those who are well to think that their feelings are based upon the condition of another they think are taking things too far, what is that feeling of loss, its not a side that is losing, its your sense of stability in feeling right about yourself that gets thrown off center, which one blames others for, especially those who keep going in life, as though all are responsible for explaining everything as they go, with agreements or understandings for permission to be well or to continue to do well. Life wasn't meant to be in agreement as to everything thought and said in life, that's asking too much of any one person, yes its important to say things that don't run counter to the wellness of others, but no its not the responsibility of anyone to describe what has caused them sickness past, in order to identify what is causing them sickness now, to say if the condition of bipolar existed then then its for the same reasons that one experiences bipolar now, understand that what does not get dealt with gets worse, and that includes the perceptions of others about you, which the more time that passes, the more difficult it becomes to correct the feelings of others about you, that you cannot change. That sense of overwhelm, yes, is doing your best, and still not feeling good, and yes that is also a quality about someone that makes them successful in life, able to work through good and bad feelings, without considering the potential for things to get worse on their end or for others, that undying sense of faith that things will work out, not based upon a composite of thoughts led by others, but based upon the security of thoughts led from within about life, that much sometimes is the only thing you can trust overtime, your understandings of life, based upon your own experiences, no matter who has it harder in life, not make a bad life out of a good life. What is instinct? To me its not allowing illness to take over, it has nothing to do with whos winning or not, or whos allowing who to win or hold a bigger hand in life, that much about me I think is overpsyhoanalyzed to think that what things look like is to make humor or analogy to a situation occurring for someone else, make possible for myself in life, as though I too would not suffer the same repercussions in life, if thought about in the wrong way or having done anyone wrong in life. For some that's the basis for their humor, comparisons, to say that one is just like and if this occurs one will behave just like as though ones success is equitable to the illness faced by anyone else who has found enormous fame, and then have been found to have caused harm to others, that not okay to make like, to hear from another from a different standpoint to see what they sound like with a different hand in life, that's someone experimenting with your image, fame, or how you are known, because its fun for them, to get reactions from others, and even to get a reaction from you, to see how you responded when faced with adversity, negative opinion, or personal insult. Never have I made my writing solely about those who have passed as being indicative of where I am coming from or the sole basis to justify the changes I have gone through that's a misunderstanding of what was known to me, which happened to me, to make me look like someone who chases death in order to understand it, there is mourning, and then there is discovering the beauty of life, which does not include drinking, drug use, modeling, or beauty.

Enlightened Expectations ...

Albeit the times, you cant really compare things as they are now, as a barometer for understanding people as they are now, lit, dim, energetic, enthused, down, or depressed, you sometimes just have to accept people the way they are, that's when comparisons past, are being used to judge someone as they are now, as though their condition now is somewhat telling of them in a way that maybe was easier to see in the past, differences. That big difference, is when people are made to feel well, and as it so happens, sometimes that can occur, by simply one person being hurt or punished, for not being well, judged as someone known who is not making people feel good about themselves, and that's a very painful concept to understand, how other people are made to feel about a person they don't even know, as though we are responsible for the feelings of people we don't even know, who may know us, that we should not be punished for, the overall effect of being known, however sided, or indifferent, the only controversy being, whether deserved, wellness. Upon introduction to the world, after leaving a school setting, beware that your light may just shine a bit brighter than most, that's your potential and while others may be set in their ways about life, don't get bogged down by the energies of others, that you are not responsible for, what comes to their mind upon looking at you. Its those types of feelings that brings into question the power of impressions upon one another, whether we are responsible for the traits or thoughts picked up by others upon a knowing of us, whether we are responsible by words, figure, or face, for the condition of others, or their faith about the times, what they rule in or rule out as possibilities for a continued sense of togetherness or feeling apart of, that basic stuff that makes people feel good about being themselves, not all are included a party to that condition for wellness, that's a feeling some keep to themselves with exclusion of people, things, or ideas, that do not serve them, counter to their beliefs of how they perceive things to be, and its those types of competing ideologies that cause the loss of momentum. Whos then responsible for that, when no thoughts thought again feel good, when nothing said, upon thinking about feels good, when anything thought or said, causes compassion for the side not to be made to feel good about us, cause us to not feel well, wheres the sake in that, keeping the ones in disagreement with our own condition well, who do not provide wellness back of opinion, wheres the entitlement in that for someone to feel well and not like you, and also make you responsible for doing or saying things, to reinforce their condition of being right about you. The past is lost, no matter what happened or prompted someone to conclude in the negative about you, its all about allow those who feel bigger better than you to continue feeling that way and by how they feel punish those who they do not get good feelings about, or think is that provider or creator of that bad feeling to them, which is only made to feel better, having disempowered someone who had light, who they did not think deserved to have light or feel good about themselves, that's the problem. That fresh energy of walking into a room, and standing out, if considered to be for bad reasons, is the very reason why some angels fall while others rise, the very condition of wonder in the negative about a person, that makes those who ever felt less deserving vindicated brighter, when another light dims, that's a sad fact about life, everyone wondering what makes others feel so gosh darn good about being themselves, and others feeling as though they do not stand out on the same merits, competitive with that potential in life for light, or comradere, wellness, attention, or thoughts. No thoughts congruent to reinforce a well minded outlook, sometimes the sharing of interpretations does not reinforce wellness, but causes a bad impression to be made, that's making people think like in order to better understand treatment of them, there is not such thing as a test for the past, you have to live life as you are, whether or not that condition is permanently changed by one bad impression. There will always be difficulty post embarrassment, or failure, that's a given a feeling no one can relate to, no one understands or feels sorry for, that's not being well and anyone made to feel well, by your change in demeanor, just means that they never thought highly of you never respected you, so that later feeling your feeling, was just them looking at you, meanwhile well around everyone else, the same does not occur for someone who is made to not feel well, its not well alone, not well around, and not well with in companionship, love, or for work for that matter, that's the difference between how we are made to feel by others in our control, versus being blamed for the conditions of others, being forced to change or take a lesser stance in life to the benefit of the wellness to others in disagreement, with your preserved sense of lightness in opinion or behavior.

Now's a Good Time to Be Careful ...

At the heart of it all lies a person, a feeling you cant remove yourself from, the innate sense and sensibility of being human, and with that comes responsibility, choices, and by how you describe your life judged, as the complainer, or to be written off as something else in life and send you on your way off in life, to the point of no return, the brink of mental illness, or remove you from all equations of wellness in life, left to your own devices, what are you left with then heart. That place you usually listen to which tells you what to do, if youre not feeling well or scared, what happens when you cant think, or lose your train of thought, don't panic, we don't all get going at once, why its important to pace yourself, as easily as one can be made well, have faith that we wont be so easily fooled, or led into sickness, by any equations for that matter. Everyone has different stopping points in life, and for some, the joke doesn't stop until everything makes sense in the reference, we may all have our reservations, but nothing feels sweeter to a hater, than to victoriously prove someone well in the wrong, that's something the past cant help you will, once wrong easily made to be in the wrong again, and that's what happens when you share you story, or upon viewing your story in private, without any explanation from you, that means decisions are being made based upon how everyone else is feeling, now what? I don't want to scare anyone, but its not easy speaking, and although things look organized, its very challenging and difficult to go from being everyone favorite joke, or a source of inspiration, maybe impressionable, easy to love, or easy to hate, and then back through all the different versions of a human being you could possibly be compared to, then when you get sick, to make matters worse, say its because you were not well then, that it doesn't matter if you are well now, and that's the painful part of returning back to smart, or having a nervous breakdown, what falls apart in your life, your health is not the loss of others, and especially not to someone who thought that losses were suffered because of you or something you have said, then ever the more pressing to not make you a source of inspiration, if at all never, then and especially not now. That sadness and quiet are things not having gone right, and that pain, is looking to be the one who negatively influenced another to think things were okay when things were not going well for me, I have never lied about my condition, maybe I look strong, but I'm just as fragile as anyone else, who is always too busy trying to accommodate everyone else's feelings at my own expense, allow others to feel right, not wrong about their treatment of me, I always accept that people have every right to be hard on someone, who they think could be doing a better job at living life, and that's the painful part, not mixing well, and now not having a good hand in life, by gene, body type, face, and condition (bipolar), and when the voices stop, good, that's because it was not okay for either me or NSA to become alarmed, as though prying into me was okay, for everyone else to be lead on board to a better life, except for me, made not apart of that inner comrades, lost as they come. So no it's not too late, it just means everyone's on different planes, energy levels, and it's really not necessary to share how hard it was to build this website, since anyone can be convinced that it's not deserved or that I was on to the wrong things in life for the wrong reasons.

Life's Not a Game ...

Life is not a game managed by one person, if anyone it would be The President who we hire every four years to make moves for us, to keep us afloat, our health their primary responsibility, to provide opportunities for wellness, improve any odds against, would be my understanding. Blogging is different, you can motivate, hashtag, share ideas, and some of those ideas heard by others, maybe some not, but for whatever reasons people decide to care, that is by choice, not by being told what to do, ever notice that when someone tells you to do something it doesn't get done, but on a good day, you can get everything done you wanted to get done, that's life, not always predictable when it comes to motivations, advice given before it's needed, and then afterward, realizing why told not to do certain things in life, to keep yourself and others away from "the game" that's common understanding, I don't think was ever intended to pose a threat to any one person's feeling or beliefs, that's not what expression of wellness in song, dance, or film is about, communicating illness, it's about well people representing well ideas, that get communicated through them by studying scripts, notes, music, the past, finding their own way through the times, and maybe a few times in the past, some of us may know less about by our own studies in life, that's life, trusting the experts, Im sure whatever this feeling one is teetering over in life, has something to do with expectation, and wanting to categorize a person in terms of their importance upon being known, not knowing what standards to consider them intelligent, if anything is said in the negative, I think that's what being known is about, sharing the spotlight, and not interfering with the spotlights of others, and those not a party to the spotlight be affected by any misunderstandings concerning how they are made to feel, when someone they know is in the spotlight, not be brought up as having something to do with it, by something they have said in the past, or by a previous experience in life, assuaged others that that would not be proper use of a person or character, for fame, that would be me, intended for something else in life, not to be front and center looked at for answers, that's the stuff leaders are made out of, like Tony Robbins, a life coach that motivates others to think about what they can do not what they cant. When does a sinking feeling occur: (1) Having done your best your best not good enough (2) When you are tired and others have more energy than you giving you a hard time (3) When you say something after it has already been dealt with privately in public which gets used to heckle you or attack the merits for you speaking in the first place top whom and why. It has been my experience that for everything serious, keep offline, and discuss in private, to actual law enforcement to brainstorm whats going well for me, whats not, not make my mental health issues a public matter, whatever those fears were about to begin with, and who was later made to feel sacred about what when and why, its not fair to be treated as someone who doesn't report, I always report after an incident that affects the majority, share my input or opinion which usually has nothing to do with anyone else, which is why everyone is okay expect for me on subjects later mentioned, you cannot convince someone that you do the right thing if they don't trust you, and because of where you have been in life, is why people give up on your so easily, mistake your condition for guilt, or needing someone to take control over your belongings, decide for you. Lets agree to not make things about me, then it gets interpreted too far back in time to matter at this point, what things are about, all I know is if I think about it, it shows up in my writing, whether or not directly pointed out, specific examples, but eventually I state facts, I guess that would be the readers job, to see where things are coming from, not something I do online, therapy. Therapy is talking about your problems like AA, versus blogging is providing solution for better thinking, so that no guilts are inherited as being responsible for not having tried to do ones best to care, how can you tell people to stop caring, only though disappointing them. Therefore once you make it on your own, be proud of who you were then, who you are now. And don't make anyone else feel bad for not coaching you along the way, youre someplace new.

Public Speaking and High Profile Cases ...

Theres nothing heartwarming about seeing a child of fame, fall victim to worry over what others think and become less motivated in life, dabbling in drugs or alcohol, that's not very becoming of anyone, for that matter. It's a struggle no one has compassion for, if you are someone who had everything, and then lost everything to drugs, alcohol, or poor decision making. When you first get sick, or want to help, and as you move forward in life, you help wherever you can, that's not in place of doing other standard forms of work, out of boredom that one becomes a writer, or practices singing or talking to themselves in public, maybe its just to see what its like, whether anyone responds in the negative, or even notices, what is writing online anyways, speaking without face to face reaction, its bound to lead back to you as a person, and that's the risk inherent in being known, or being famous, more people know you than you know them, however heartwarming that seems at the time for others to come to know you in real life, don't forgo those opportunities to just be yourself and blendin, you'll miss out on a lot in life, if you consistently think that everything about you is being judged from the way you look, to what you write, to your condition, meds, who you date, or what your sexuality is presently, and by sexuality I mean people wanting to know who you talk to or think about, and what causes you to feel love toward someone, and if its an infatuation that has occurred for you prior to dating, no. If they haven't seen you in real life I think maybe that makes me more susceptible to negativity from others online reading, and that's not something I ever anticipated not being liked, and I don't think applying for an award can change that, to which they would reply "for what?" Maybe for taking the initiative to contacting local law enforcement, the Academy, and NTSB, so that we don't continue to fall victim to some undying code of ethics, to get to the heart of issues, and in trying to do, make things about conspiracy theories, and mood disorders, and say that one is occurring because of the other, to me, that not reflecting in peace, that's reflecting to see who has it better or worse in life, and whoever is doing well and comfortable speaking, punish by words, or insults, to make someone seem sick, guilty, or to watch them change into something theyre not. It seems if youre on meds, that's what happens to you, thinking its to prevent a condition, not already caused, as though you are hostile toward others or aggressive, that doesn't really stop people from people aggressive toward you, without knowing you, going through your things. What does the CIA do anyways? Im sure its not micro-managing me or talent, or entertainment, and when I say I support a cause I mean it, its not to shed light on lesser known assumptions about things being about in reference to one another, or separate incidences occurring because of eachother, that would be assuming that whatever I remember has something to do with me, not then, not yet now, and that's where its wrong to assume that anything is about any one person. Im sure that everyone has had their fair share of humor about, as though Im the joke of the town, having gone to Law School, its not a bipolar dream, you get tested apply, get in, perform, at that point you can actually think, then later in life, you are forced to think under pressure, that is without time to remember recollect learn digest, you have to think in the moment, that's Law.

When Bringing Up the Past ...

I equally feel unenthused by discussions sharing about my own past, and with mention of the past as it relates to me, I can see the method to that madness then, who is put together, and who is not left out of an equation in life, I think it doesn't become a big deal until you bring it up. One of those things. So if you open the door to issues past, make sure not to revisit those same pitfalls, low self-esteem, mental health issues, self-harm, or ever having felt suicidal, if you have recovered from those conditions, I don't think now is for discussion in specifics as related. That's problem with sharing your life, or having your life be reviewed by another, what is said and digestible, and what is thought of or said about you not digestible, and that same feeling causes me to throw up foam on runs, this was before COVID, anyways. I think we all struggle from time to time, adjusting to life, taking on responsibilities, overcoming illness, its really not your fault, and if others in good fun expressed themselves, then that is what they thought and maybe because they were more centered than you, thought that that a positive way to share about how everyone was connected at one point in time, even if you later felt excluded. You'll face a lot of pressures in life, to perform, that's under stress, war, bad news, good news, stay steady and be yourself in spite of it all, you cant get tied down to any one issue or subject past or present, the more you let things get to you, the more it becomes a part of your thinking, the opposite of not letting something bother you, or get under your skin. That's why people separate themselves from people with issues, until they get better, and if not, it then becomes painful to talk to them. So that's a learning lesson in staying well, not be a source of discomfort, be well, and have compassion for yourself, and not be too hard on yourself about your past, and keep living life. The separation between my audience and me now, is that that shared space of exploring topics and being made to feel good, is not the same if Im not feeling well, Im no meditation expert, Im either focused and appear well, my face is sharp, or else I get tired for no reason, and feel sick. Im not sure what that is, if its not my thinking, and not by my presentation of self, what is causing my head to hurt when no one is being hard on me, and once the voices have stopped.

When the Odds Are Against You ...

11/17/2020

Can sometimes mean the difference between standing out in a room full of your peers, versus being the only one noticeably not well, that chipper state everyone else in, not apart of, or by reaction to your presence, suddenly unemotional, I think the times have changed. Whether its something known about you, that makes others distant toward you, eventually, that dissipates, that is if you get your act together, like being on Deans List in College, and getting into Two Law Schools, and working for the Government as a Law Student, that's trust, a far cry from being "voted most shady" in your last yearbook, finding out on your last day of school, that was heartbreaking, I was speechless, I got into college in December, so I moved my free period next to lunch and would go home mid-day, and sleep or take a nap, before soccer practice, I was one of the Team Captains, and of the Volleyball Team a setter or backrow, I served an entire game once, all floaters. Right now its about health, and image. The two most important things when it comes to feeling good, feeling good about yourself, feeling good about others, and being yourself, regardless of what anyone else thinks. That's wellness. And when image becomes the center of your concern, it should be by being mindful of your condition well or not, that should dictate the choices you make in the future when it comes to managing how you look and what people think of you, even if it was a joke then, its not that one cannot take a joke, its that is causes physical and mental changes within, to think if intended in a negative way, if you don't look well, then that can be a cause of embarrassment to others who knew you when you were well, when you were fun to be around, when you looked the part, not in a later condition torn.

In Doing You ...

In doing you, don't be afraid to deal with problems as you go, in fact that's my best advice for anyone with a lot on their plate and not knowing where to start, had I never tried, I probably would still be lost in thoughts, not speaking, still in bed sleeping all day, not moving, and still being rejected from paid jobs and working internships, but I changed my life for the better blogging. We can have a lot to say sometimes that doesn't mean that its right to speak our mind, not if its about things people don't want to hear about, or upon thinking about bothers them. That's respecting one anothers traumas in life, being respectful. There will be moments of detachment from trauma, when youre back in the moment working again and not thinking too much about life, history, mental health, sleep, all those tough subjects that you never really think about until it becomes a problem, remember to be human. How did I manage to get myself out of conspiracy threats, intimidation, and blame, I talked, sometimes the less you say on the subject the worse off things get for you, that's being professional, having an innate responsibility to respond, which is probably why so affected, a Children's Law Law Clerk to two Attorneys. That was helping to manage 400 cases, 200 case per Attorney, I was 1 of 40 selected from over 700 applicants who applied all over the Country from all the top tier Law Schools, that was the type of Law Student I was, and also had a job at DC Law Students in Court one summer before having to go to Rehab for addiction, Im sure was just a mismanagement of meds, while working part-time and going to Law School part-time, that was how I was work and school for awhile. So I think later drinking, was a big mistake, maybe that was just my need to have friends and be social, not necessarily date, that part of life I missed out on, the texting, and the plans, going out.

Life Can Feel Incredibly Short ...

Depending on how you look at things, if something can be seen in the positive or the negative, can literally make or break your day these days, don't fret youre not the only one. Seems as though if we can convince ourselves of one way of thinking, that the other way of thinking about things begins to spiral out of control, that is the negatives, and that's no way to think about life, forgetting to see the positives. In fact, its usually someone who insults you purposefully, who sees the positives in them doing so, before you are able to see what positive can become of such an insult. That's testing your spirit, whether you allow for interpretation to be about you then or now, and whether or not you are insulted whether you respond in the negative, to make you seem like someone who has always been tuning in in this way, I think the reality of opinions and where things are coming from hits you at a later point in time, the difficulty of responding, or trying to understand what it was that went wrong for you. So don't be too hard on yourself, usually people who are hard on you are hard on you because they care. The world isn't a nice place, although we would like to think that everyone is well, a nice happy place, that doesn't mean that someone well will be nice to you, and not especially once they get to know you. Different things come to mind, and hit the conscious of someone who is looking at you, usually with a bigger head than you, seeking to make things right for you as you focus on them, and that's not always the correct route to wellness, accommodating the needs of others, or catering to their own insecurities. You just have to be strong. And when you are made to look stupid, that ruins all your relationships, shout outs included, its like you cant be apart of anyone, and that's the feeling of not being with it.

Cruising Through Good Feelings ...

There used to be a such thing as euphoria, that moment of focus, when all things feel good, maybe even a song, that hits the right chord with you, moments made that make living feel like it was heaven sent. Unfortunately, not all good things happen in perfect timing, nor with the exact feeling that notifies us, that we are on path, and that once everything is at peace, or seemingly peaceful, that good feelings will carry on again as they did, that much you can't foresee, whenever a bad feeling kicks in. For some this happened many years ago, a loss of faith in things coming to be, that power to dream, and to keep dreaming, how is it possible for the heart to fail to notify us, when things are at odds between us and the rest of the world, or so it seems, that sudden realization that things are off, in tune with no one, it could just be that you are continuing on, and from whatever playing field they had become adjusted to in life, were wondering the same about you, whether that feeling had happened to you yet, maybe explains all the heckling and bothering, questioning, and turning of the tides, to invalidate whatever karma has come to be, for those who were well, and suddenly lost focused at some point along your journey to having a life of your own, yes you eventually learn, as you progress, that you are responsible for chiming in and providing reassurances to those in the stands, your family and their loved ones, that's keeping the faith, not restoring it. When it hasn't come to the point of a full assessment of wrongs and rights that means for the most part everyone is at peace, sometimes its only until things fall apart, that we begin to question, whatever it was bringing us stability, that is not yet able to propel us forward, like technology, powerful, but not powerful enough to connect us all in a way, that brings 100% wellness, that I don't think even God had planned, the coming together of all issues, plus a feel good vibe, sometimes as a result of shedding light upon issues, leads to a standstill of emotional indifference, not wanting things to be about the very issues that have brought one to speak, or to work, if not something faced by all and only a select few, overtime, have faith. Sometimes you have to be able to help a few, in order to get to a bigger platform in life, to help more get through whatever it is they are going through, until they are made to feel sound at heart and in mind, people and things that matter to them, not just to others, that I think can throw anyone off, that period between blissful confidence, a solidarity to issues, when you are displaced with feelings of being alone, with nothing to show for it, that type of change requires discipline, to embark on a journey in life to the benefit of others, with faith, that what good has transpired, will eventually lead you back on your feet, to a life worth living no matter how much time has passed, trying to figure out what matters, and why. So as someone who has been through various forms of recovery: (1) alcoholism (2) addiction (3) drug use and (3) mental health issues, I can say, that eventually you will find your place again, it just takes time, there will be many changes in place you will encounter, along the way of finding yourself again, comparisons, root struggles, looks, demeanor, personality, intelligence, livelihood, love, companionship, and friendship, and along your way back to a normal life, you may be tested, mistaking you for someone well all along, or someone who has not struggled quite the same as others, that general depression about anyone who was it and suddenly sick just being themselves, that you cant take back, how influential you were then, and what you are blamed for now, as not having been a solid enough person, to have been recognized from afar as solid. Those sudden losses of faith, occur when you have done your best and your best was not good enough, to earn back your stripes in life, that is who you were before trouble hit, and that can be a very sad and depressing phase of recovery to be in, to realize what time has passed, and have nothing to show for it, especially if you were experimental online, on social media, with no fancy credentials to show for it. I was going to post a sign: DO NOT DISTURB THE PEACE, its unusually silent in my neighborhood, that quiet excitement, turned sadness, Ive seen this happen before, similarly to when photos were spread of me online, I think my whole house even turned a different color, that's the pain of regret, or things not working out, when people you love lose color, that's in the face of disrespect how you get treated, when once strong, now everyone else stronger than you, and putting you down on top of everything, as though you had nothing to do with the source of strength found in others, upon knowing you, whether or not someone else more famous took their turn at leadership in spite of your ups and downs in life. So when love is the answer that's not to undo a haunting later caused, by the wrong circumstances to portray you any differently than what has been faced by others in light of your experiences in life. From where that righteous energy is found, is sometimes having to do, with people being on board with different ideas in life, and turning on you, as though you are just another famous person to torch. So that inner pain, that was subliminal, now standing out in our favorite songs and movies, had nothing to do with me but everything to do with them, trying to figure themselves out and how others were feeling, and whether or not we could relate they made the movies and songs anyways, with or without everyone on board or with permissions, that's being a personality, you get seen, used, and dull out.

Recovery Phases of Pain (For Example: Loss of Sleep, or an All Nighter)

1. Not smart, difficulty working, making productive use of your time.
2. Energetic keep going, but then get tired, and don't feel like doing anything.
3. Wanting to do things, but not getting anything done.
4. Everything negative hitting you, and then not being able to speak in the positive.
5. When you speak, you are not clear, and what you are saying not clear positive to others.
6. When what it looks like, gets compared to your condition, you can neither prove or disprove.
7. When who you admire gets sick, and as a result you feel sick responsible.
8. When you push yourself to get to a normal point in life to bond, and get sick again.
9. When who you love opens up, and when opening up elsewhere, doesn't bring love back.

- (10) When you open up and get hurt, and then not the same person to give love to others.
- (11) When you feel sad like youre not going to make it, and start setting boundaries with others.
- (12) When your sadness brings sadness to others, they can see and hear without you saying a thing.
- (13) When your stability gets rocked, by equations, and ways of thinking, unrelated to your life.
- (14) When you can't enjoy the moment, and others are expecting your return to wellness again.

When It Hasn't Happened Yet ...

That's what the "oh thank God's" are for, when ... it hasn't happened yet. All those freak outs coming before, and the sudden realization, that's everything is still in your control, that sigh of relief, that things could've been worse, and its by your own mistake, mismanaged, placement of ideas, and then back on track, that's common in Tech, the sudden "dammits" could've made money had I done this, and the "theres no looking back" I have to keep going anyways, that's picking a pen name, felt good at the time, and maybe now, still trying to stick to that feeling, of how things were then, so put together, as a matter of fact, before all the odds and ends were thrown into the mix for misinterpretation, that's Tech, could've should've would've, clearing the air, when one can, otherwise, leaving people to their own devices, and making upgrades, whenever an upgrade is due, for added insight, never to tell anyone how to think, it's the bedrock for your minds, why would it come filled with ideas anyways, that's not what phones are for, premade, its more about what you make with what you are given in life, that is what makes you feel full, like a social media account finally dedicating some time to, an Instagram that looks super ornate after many years, of fun experiences saved, or all those likes saved, to go back and remember when ... I think we maxed out our thresholds, by needing things to be too exact, theres a lot of power in letting go, and the only drawback to feeling out of the loop, is late to a punch, that no one enjoys feeling when they find out, what huh how who ohhh oh okay nevermind huh noooo and silence. That's also known as a realization, figuring things out, and ending up in a negative place, the stuff that decisions are made out of, much like a Tropicana commercial, that boast about the stuff that Florida oranges are made out of, the best stuff on earth they tell us, that's how to handle it, not used to it, must be new, too heavy, must be old, that's basic. Whats so time consuming about progress is that its painful, yes my website is fun to look at it takes a day to copy paste into a word document, so it must be something else, a feeling provided, Im creating. That newness of thinking, that was my strategy, write new everyday, just like a newspaper, my first follower on Twitter was @latimestot, hence the @randbocotimes minus the tot. I was trying to be more feminine when I changed my name to @mymollydoll, Im sure it had nothing to do with the Bartender's name which was "Sam," we both met eachother's boyfriends, I lived in the neighborhood, without a car, or a car by breathalizer for awhile, that's was bi$tch in a cape to get through in life, the beeping and the blowing, and the breaking, and the driving, and the blowing, as you are driving, then my GPS never worked again, he must have re-wired everything for the breathalizer machine, or so it seemed. Everyone gets excited about doing something theyre good at, youre probably last to figure that much out, the defect you have to live with in your car that you cant fix, like when Sirius radio went out on your way to work. You have to pay for things in life, Im sorry I paid LegalZoom to incorporate my website and blog, they actually don't do anything court related, that's what Richard Sudar is for, Ive known him since he was transferred to handle my rolling community service hours court appearances, I never completed, and had to do time in jail instead, to complete the hours required, the leaves stopped falling in front of LAPD, and they had no more leaves to be raked, for community service. I report to them every guy I hook up with so they know if Im gone, what happened, and they let me know that what happened is not illegal, but Im honest, so not all of this is not code, for me being the aggressor, or the one out and about looking to get F-d in life, on the prowl looking for men, its if you are well, speak your mind, or confident, they inquire. So lets just let everyone know, that while running on the beach, when I supposed to be working at AFM, finally making it to a Hollywood event, was super excited paid $900 to attend, but my ticket was written in the engineer's name instead because she didn't think I was ready, to schmooze, why invited at the end. I saw two people on the beach I thought I knew, the Intern laying on the beach by the rocks, and the Bartender, by the lifeguard tower, with her butt facing me, I thought it was them and left chuckling, this was before Florida, and calling the Sober Evolution Coach I found on Facebook to help me, because my Boss at the time thought I had addiction, which I stopped performing strong at work, half gone, focus wise. So the butt picture on my Instagram was in light reference to what happened on the beach, it was a true story actually, and then I didn't attend AFM, I think I saw half of AFM street side on my drive back.

Creating a System of Thought ...

Creating a system of thinking requires balance, of both positive and negative attributes to what is said, upon interpretation, that is without assuming what others are thinking or bringing up references to the thinking of others, as to what was found to be in balance upon focus on negatives, and what light that brought then in trying to understand who or for what purposes another was to blame, or became sick, and how that benefited those ways of thinking, to shed light upon blames, and for negative happenings being in alignment with the thinking of someone who was well who is now not well, such as myself. It just occurred to me recently, working on something and then it looking better as worked on, such as my website index, the dates removed now being put back, I had an issue with numbering. It will take me about two weeks to complete the project, updating my index with all the dates. Energy has always been one of my issues, since seeing my last psychiatrist, something that meds cannot help with, let alone any guilts placed over your head to shame you with until you find out yourself what things are about, that's the unnecessary abrasiveness of confrontation, assuming the worst, and not allowing things to get better, before they get worse for you or others, that's keeping a blind eye to insults, no matter how relevant. That's the purpose for making fun of people, something everyone sees that they do not, not something shared with the person of particular issue, the wellness among those talking about. That's purposeful, its letting you know, there is something not right about you, and in a big way, testing you, to see whether you think things are about you, and became sick because you thought things were about you then, by sharing a photo of a sail boat as your profile photo on Twitter circa 2011 before your last day of Law School 2013. I think later only became relevant, having dated Bauer briefly before dating my Ex for four years, 2007, who I was in communication with before dating him "hanging out." That much was misunderstood about me, why the distance from friends, it was not a gay issue then, but maybe now, and it was more about focusing on school, and not understanding what I was missing out on, a good life, apart of, which I sacrificed for a career in Law which never happened for me, never quite fully there in terms of how to be, with consideration for what was thought of me and to what extent. I am not someone that would allow a negative interpretation of me to take hold, in fact it would be an issue I would challenge given my education and time spent home, not out and about, not frequenting the bars, and not dating, so to appear as someone who would give up all that I had, to get laid, makes no sense to me at all, but for the same reasons you may be a keeper, is the same reasons why someone would want to do you, because it makes them feel better, that doesn't necessarily mean that you will feel better, look better, or still be wanted, not if someone else has laid their hands on you, done your body. So what is used up? To me its losing all your power, and not knowing what to do with your life, that no matter where you go from here, will never feel quite the same good about yourself, that's low self-esteem, usually snatched from your aura and personality, before you have even come to appreciate those qualities about yourself, giving, loving, in charge, a leader, a nurturer, a lover, and a friend, companion. So to say that someone who is no longer those things, is trying to be that figure in the lives of others makes no sense to me at all, someone now with femininity issues, hygiene issues in question, health issues, body image issues in your 30s are normal, face dysmorphia, is not from excessive sex, then it must be because of something else, I don't think anyone else is willing to admit to, a bad connection, upon being around people, who wants to be found in the wrong toward others, or watch them be treated in the wrong by others, how disempowering to figure out for yourself by your own health, and by who sticks around or who leaves you, that you are no longer that keeper in life, on top of things, that's ability to be organized, eventually leaves you without upkeep, and that's why its important to stay professional, everyone will take their turn, at smashing you on the inside, to see what comes out. Im not a pinata, and Im not full of negatives, and I don't retort, taunt, or imitate, and put down, that's the difference between someone who is offended, and tries to confront or correct others, versus someone who cares what others think, but doesn't make a big deal of it and keeps going on their way, that's must mean that whatever I hold positive within is stronger, than whatever negatives are being forced upon me to identify with, or rationalize how those terms or understandings came to be, about whom, and why? In learning to let go, and again arrive to positives, perfecting your system of thinking, requires a lot of strength and wisdom, to not give into negative interpretations, and allow those negatives to take hold. That's owning your identity, no matter who attacks you, and about what, if you are not those things, then to me, saying those things about me, does not have the power to control, what happens to me in life, that's being fearless, not allowing my fears, or the thinking of others to control me or where I end up for that matter, and even if its worse off, blame no one, and take charge of my own life and wellness, that's having faith, that to me is letting things go, and that to me is not casting blames.

The Excitement in the Observed ...

There is an energy to getting things done, and maybe even so for others watching someone work, and get their work done, Im not sure what the standards for fraud are these days, but its all about work ethic, what you sign on to life, or what you appear to have been signed off of in life, hurt on those same merits, as having either misrepresented others, including family or organizations, when deciding to speak for yourself online, and about what, give things time always, expect that people are new, that is a given, when it comes to writing online. No one likes the feeling of having to catch up to anything in life, or get the sense of any changes occurring because of any one person who has found success, leading discussions about, for those types of understandings I think we are all on time, whether or not one was on board, or just found out that things could be thought of in relationship to one person, as though that was a Broadway analogy, for all roads leading to one, I think got misused to lead to what was thought to be a traitor, such as myself, which is usually the case of pointing people out, for examination, what is it about this person, that makes them think they are above others, and what is it about this person, that if they are above others how so, I don't think that question can be answered properly when the later has been proven, that is not well enough to be admired, not pretty enough to be imitated, or not smart enough to learn from, or not ingenious enough to be imitated, or replicated in other forms. So what is it about a person, that would leave someone to feel so threatened by, that by alluding to their identity thought that everything else could be figured out, one Twitter account, and a bunch of Apps, if that was a communication to reference me as going to hell, then that explains why Ive only dated twice on Tinder, the first an ice cream date. So if that was the inside joke, a weak "Dream Speech" on Twitter, that resulted in Gun Violence, then what else did everyone put together, that was a matter of had I known if Barack Obama ran having read my personal statement upon applying to Law School, if that was his impetus for running, then blame me, as though I should've known I was influential to people in power, then blame me as though I influenced people not in power to feel powerful and commit an act like that by my energy, Im not an angry person, neither then, nor now, am trying to elicit a need for some dominant ideology to take hold to fix anything that is going wrong in anyones thinking department, which may explain why the Movie: Legally Blonde was cited to "snap" as it relates to Snapchat Inc.

Follow-Up: Im sorry that these were not discussable issues with me face-to-face that others took it upon themselves to micro-manage what things look like, I do not think with the intended expense to me psychiatry wise, worsen my condition, but these are things to be wary of if you are famous or attached to someone famous, referred to, by what you are known for, or known to have messed up in life about when and why, you were apart of, or in defense of self, made to not feel apart of or made fun of in life, the first time it happens like a TV Show name, hurts but you dont say anything, and when you keep getting sick, and they still cannot get through to you, means speak before things get out of hand, and the wrong people become empowered to make fun of you in life, as though in support of other women or men, who they think are more deserving of positive attentions. If it means anything I was invited to the Inauguration 2013, but I couldnt get in, walked around outside, so that was staying in DC by invitation, and then not being able to hear him speak.

Online Lighting ...

It's a new phenomenon, don't get too excited, its about online health, occurring in numbers, dimming in numbers, become of value by numbers, or just plain backend solutions to higher quality work product online, demonstrated by the people putting value into their work ethic online. That much has changed, the wellness factor upon looking at things. Just as one is required to see the positive, and be thankful for everything they do have in life, so it becomes a matter of what is said, what is read, being of value to the reader, not just because of who it is said by, that's not always the best determinant for understanding value, by who you like alone, or feel impartial too, for that matter.

Sometimes everything can make sense and sound well, but doesn't really carry on a meaning that later makes sense, that's well in the moment, without the strength of leaving a lasting impression of wellness that stays with us, while being introduced to the rest of the world, either recognizing ourselves as new to any scene, or by the same token feeling jaded, or so it seems, by our exposures, I cant say that life has always been this obvious, effects wise, maybe something later realized which more have become pickier about, how they feel. Not all will make you feel well, that's a matter of etiquette, that overall feeling you get talking to someone, like a telephone conversation gone wrong, that inner New Yorker, becoming short tempered or impatient, and suddenly bossy, that's the type of energy to be avoided, when it's the other person, you expect to be sharper, than you are yourself, is when to remain calm, and that's how the entire conversation sharpens up, with both sides being heard, no matter who becomes the fainter one, listening or speaking wise, yes there is a tone, and that's the tone of someone who adjusts, not of someone who bosses, someone impartial, not someone who judges, and that rescission of care, is someone already knowing you, and refusing to change or adjust to meet your needs, while under their care, provide assistance with, that's a condition you cant change, someone not made to feel well by you, or someone who cannot help you, who takes your money, and only afterwards, are told because of this this or that, something you've said, that they cannot provide care for you, that's trying to find a psychiatrist in LA, either too expensive, or by your needs, not available to prescribe, but that never stopped them from being clear about informing you of why, just that they were not willing to treat you, by what meds you need, by what dosages needed, or by your blog, not thinking that your condition is real, a condition creating because of blogging, Im sure that one would never purposefully subject themselves or others to harm, and its just as painful to share, that wonder about preferences, than it is to hear, whether those preferences are to be wondered about so collectively decided about someone. Remember the days when we admired, listened, and felt good by others, whatever happened to that, that must be something to do with defiance, thinking one knows better, and that's something existing cannot help you with, that's a new form of thinking about life, that isn't necessarily in the textbooks, work ethic, what work stands out, who stands out, and why, and whats of value.

Personal Update ...

I think the solution, to making sure the gears to my thinking are linked up to some standard of care already established by an educational institution, would benefit my readers, if I continue my education, so that my education is reflected in my work product, as it has been past, not rely on free reading books, to teach me ways of thinking, as my choices for study, may not be trusted as insights for more clarity of the issues, so Im sorry about whether any of my book choices, where frowned upon, not liked, questioned, as whether what Im reading becomes the basis for discussion, or to highlight a risk about, or why chosen, I pick books that have been recently published and based upon those choices, I pick books. So I took a few days off studying courseera, I started reading again today, and will continue my CITI coursework, so that if I do become a published author one day, it will be researched based writing, researched meaning based upon existing studies completed, along with my understandings written.

Being Cute ...

Being cute is about liking yourself, that innocence from within, not a substandard condition of intelligence or know how, its seeing it like it is, and still feeling good about yourself, sometimes mistaken for confidence, the wellness you encounter in the company of others, an inside ability to feel animated, without even trying. When you are loved that is how you feel about yourself, and when around others, without worry for what you look like, able to just be yourself. Sometimes we mind the looks, and sometimes we don't, depending on whether you enjoy standing out in the grand scheme of things, don't expect everyone to meet you half way, some recognize being cute, as someone being full of themselves, as sense of candor, frowned upon by anyone who thinks its to intimidate others, when really its about being in ones own zone in life. That frazzled, collapsible comfort, of being around someone and getting their attentions, the types of things that puddy is made out of, love and attention. So when you do decide to fem up, don't be surprised, if you shrink before you shine, it comes with a territory, being known, and still being able to maintain your beauty, that sudden change others experience seeing like you or feeling like you, is being introduced to another world in life, and that's the type of stuff you cant record, influence for the better, the more you keep track of, the more painful it becomes for those who do know you, feeling made to be apart of something other than themselves. I don't think campaigning against violence, ever made me a bigger person, I think that was a normal direction to take, given my work history, and I don't think that talking about mental health issues, was ever intended to misdirect the wrong attentions toward those with disabilities to feel less than or part of the problem, they're not, that's one misunderstanding, that's painful to talk about. The problem lies in those with energy, where it comes from, what motivates it, and what makes others feel smarter, and in constant need to correct others, that makes them feel like the bigger person to any equation in life, above people, especially the disabled, such as myself on meds. We can push ourselves, with what feels like to extremes by someone with disability, and that can still not do the trick to shift or change the emotions of something coming toward them in life, at a blurring speed, of known how, nothing needing to be counterbalanced or balanced need exist in that amount of strength toward any one person or group of individuals in life, to make things go right or better for one or the other, then it becomes a matter of what someone is trying so hard about, whether its to overcome a worse disposition and why caused, or whether its to be better than they were, and when they are better do they appear better than others, and why, is the mistake in thinking that someone who is trying to improve is doing so to make others look worse or guilty, and that's how wellness gets stopped in its tracks, when it becomes about competitions. So whats that feeling in between left, once a fight stops as to who is leading who in terms of respect and outlook, is that its too late, no, is it that one is wrong, no, is it that one cannot change things the way they are, maybe, is it that one does not have a solution for wellness, maybe, or is it that one is simply speaking only to make sense to themselves, the list goes on, for peoples reasoning when it comes to acceptance of others, you can pretty much convince yourself of anything these days, to rationalize your feelings about people in life, and that's how disbelief happens, its keeps people from not believing in things that when brought into their heart, causes them distress in figuring out their own way in life, if based upon a methodology of thinking used by another, sometimes one way of thinking does not work for everyone, just accept that much about life. That sometimes advice resonates, and sometimes people will tell you things that make absolutely no sense at all to you, maybe not until later as remembering thought about then, but still makes no sense compared to where you are now, how that would've made sense to you then.

What is Smart? ...

To me intelligence is all about your ability to process, think about, focus, remember, and apply what you have learned, with enthusiasm for the subject, create a better broader understanding of life that makes sense to you. We all become smart in our own way, one of the basic systems of feeling good about yourself, your working memory. What happens when that much gets disturbed. It then becomes a conscious recollection of either present feelings you are having difficulty processing, which sometimes gets misinterpreted as having something heavy resting on your conscious like a secret, or doing something your not supposed to be doing, or inhibited by something else that's keeping you from reaching your maximum potential. One of the drawbacks of sharing online, is everything stated being used to base a better understanding of what you say later, just as a timeline would be assembled, to understand who you are and how you came to be. Not all will respect your journey in life, and that's okay, we each have our own journeys in life. If doing the same thing over and over again isn't bringing you happiness, then what can be done, to your daily routine, to give you more satisfaction in life, and this is where change comes into play, whats slowing you down in life, and what will bring you more satisfaction in life, happiness. We can't always get to our end goal, of peace, so long as we remain disturbed by the past, or things that have been said, we either become unhappy about and want to know more about, or think that what has been said does not do a justice to what is wanted to be known, about any particular belief system, ideology, method, or understanding. That's when you have to let go as a reader, expecting more, sometimes you wind up with feelings, or feeling less happy. That's just a fact of life, the more you need something, the worse you feel, expecting that feeling to be fulfilled or supplied by someone or something outside of yourself, how dependency is caused. When you are dependent upon others, for good or bad reasons, that's when you need to check yourself at the door, is what Im looking for reinforcing positive thinking, or is what Im focusing on looking for negatives to justify ones feelings or emotions if geared in the negative about someone or something. Have you ever noticed, that those most talked about appear innocent, the previous moments of shame, non sensical compared to where they are now, know that at one point in their lives, they felt so justified as to communicate and express themselves to the masses, as though to reinforce a feeling not in agreement to most, nor important to be heard, as they thought was necessary at that time to be heard in that way. Whats screaming inside of you, is a need to be understood, always question how necessary that need to be understood is, no matter what gets pried into about your life, on or off meds, stable or unstable, some people just don't know when to stop until proven right about you, or having heard something to justify their negative take on you or your family, that's just how people are, sizing up people based upon what's in the news, without understanding the repercussions, suicide attempts, and instability. Growing up, I was always stable and on point, I never had any emotional issues, unless triggered by another, made to feel scared, aggravated, or mentally ill self-harming, I think the first incident of hitting my head occurred as a child in my bathroom, chased around the house, that's normal. When someone wants something from you, a reaction, it's to please their thinking, so don't respond in a way, to please your own thinking about things, cause an adverse reaction in another, why being provocative is not the solution, to whatever ill feelings toward me, occurred make better. I think defending oneself, as a human being, or a woman, doesn't really do the trick, it seems as soon as you have achieved a well condition, becomes the moment you get attacked for the basis of added humor, treated like a successful millionaire who snaps, I don't have any money. So that's the misunderstanding about me, as being someone with money, trying to tell others how to think, no I think it's me trying to be of value, explaining how I think which = money on site indices .com, my website's valuation going up in money, meaning what I have to say, doesn't exist online, why it is of value, and while it may not all be experience based, it's a well spoken blog, about what I have been through and how I have managed to stay afloat. When people get mad at you, that means you can't make things better for them, or are not making things better for them, or could be doing something else with your life, to make things better for someone, or something, or some idea bigger than yourself that actually makes money in real life.

When Its Okay for Them but Not You ...

We live in a society that determines wellness in part by what's appropriate, depending upon your upbringing, who you're friends with, and what your career path is, certain expectations of you, to be in the know. What happens when you're not in the know? Then who is to blame then? I think politics is something you pick up on overtime, just like movie or music humor, certain people have a knack for understanding better than others, let's not all claim disability all at once. It's okay to see the world as you see fit, I don't think it's appropriate to be too demanding of anyone to get all the jokes at once, whatever they were then, and for whatever doesn't apply now, just accept, that too much of anything is a recipe for disaster, sometimes it's best to let things speak for themselves, like Stonehenge, beautiful, a small wonder, how it came to be. That pressure, therefore is the excitement of things turning out right, as they were intended to lead us toward better thinking about things, not to bombard one another, taking orders for how things should be, that's no way to live life, impressed upon, one too many times, without leaving your own impression, that's your unique identity, which need not always be changed, just to maneuver around the times, and make it through in one piece, that I think is asking too much. So what is appropriate? I think in looking at someone, who you think you're better than, more well adjusted, it's easy to say, their disability is for not having understood what things are about, and upon wondering, got sick by their own devices, not thinking about things in the right way. There are different levels of understanding, just like wavelengths, when you're on board or not on board, with the thinking of others, and to not be on board is not rebellion, sometimes it's a matter of things working out or not working out, so let's do our best to make things work out, no matter what the cost is ego wise, we can't all be the smartest, sometimes there is more power in learning than there is to accept anything as it is, without justification, excuse, or explanation, if you assume therefore that people are still learning, you leave room for growth, meaning less expectation, and with less expectation for acceptance as though how things were should be the same now, with a different set of circumstances looming, which will require more learning, and a lot of change. What is change? Change to be, is quiet acceptance of how things are and wanting to make things better, without disturbing the momentum of others throughout the process of discovering themselves and their own learning curves in life. So what is the feeling that will carry us through one time period to the next, wellness, the goal of arrival should always be to wellness no matter where on the spectrum you start or begin your thoughts, have faith that you may be behind in terms of deductions or rational thoughts about, and accept that some may be ahead of you in life in terms of their understandings, based upon their area of expertise, that's the beauty of life, you have to keep learning, in order for things to become easier to process, and as we all know, when you are learning, it can be challenging, but with hope that eventually you will get to the point of understanding, and be able to apply what you know, to what you see, and how you come to understand right now, that's learning, there is wellness at the end, the intended goal.

It's Not a Problem ...

Its not a problem until someone complains. That's basic to doing anything in life, it doesn't really matter whether or not things are going well for you. Sometimes forcing us to take a step back and take a step back for good, whether that's walking away from a relationship, a business opportunity, a career, things don't always go right, and that's just something about life we all eventually come to accept about ourselves and others, when to let go, and walk away from something that no longer serves us, that's the deciding factor in whether you allow yourself to get hurt in life doing what youre doing in life. This is what change is for. What is best for you. So whatever has come to past, that's your past, irrespective of whats going on now for you in life, that's just accepting that people are set in their ways, whether or not you're a silent partner, or someone cut out of deals in life, referenced to without knowing you, that's just how some people are, participating by speaking to something everyone else agrees too, but that doesn't always bring them success in the long run. We don't all go about everything in the right way, especially if we want something, or need help with something, the more you need help, the more distant people are toward you, same goes for relationships, so never be desperate, and if you are being desperate, think for what purpose will this serve me in the long term to engage in this type of conversation or behavior with another, whether that's online or in real life, we should all know what it means to be conservative by now, Im sure most choose to stay that way, enjoying reading and knowing people online, but at the same time, not having to do that themselves, there is a certain peace in knowing that you don't have to put yourself out there to be loved or to be well liked, not unless your career depends on it, then that's maybe why to share your life with others.

Another Quiet Day ...

Just as I want things to go right for the reader, so should I do my best to make sure things go right on my end. A recent challenge while blogging, not something I ever thought about, while goal setting, and improving, eventually you start to think about how your thinking affects the thinking of others, hopefully for the better. You can be strong and things can still not go right for you, always be a careful decision maker. I used to be someone who lives for the moment, a very spontaneous person. That's just a quality about me, that makes it fun for others to be around me, not that witty, Im not always someone quick when it comes to dialogue, but I am someone that people like to carry conversations with, which I usually respond, never offended by any one persons approach to conversation, Im very accepting of others, and that means I never really read into too much about what other people have to say. That to me is acceptance, without worry, without paranoia, and being at ease when youre around others, what more should we expect from others, especially at this time, perhaps maybe more compassion, and less negative judgment.

Thinking Things Over ...

Thinking things over is a good thing, means youre thinking about life, and in a good way, pacing yourself. Its okay to slow down from time to time, although many enjoy those fast pace moments in life, eventually you tire over too much excitement, less is more. Its when you cant sleep and your mind is running on an on worried sick over negatives, that can really put a damper on your existence, thats never fun, allow the storm to pass, youre not the only one with problems on your plate, the less you think about it the better you'll feel. If only idea mode could get us out of messes in life, that fun thinking that keeps you going with anticipation, a natural drive and zest for life and figuring things out for yourself, sometimes we hit a wall, when things stop feeling good, and we cant keep going on thinking in that way, thats maxing out your potential, let alone the potential for others to be made to feel good about the same things in life. Just like thinking and speaking, your words matter, and just like any good feeling of focus can be disturbed by interruption, so can the progression while in an recovered state to get worse not better, so always be in control and know your limits in life, answers to your problems are not always a given, handed to you in life, or based upon common sense, we all figure this out on our own, what to do when we are not feeling good about ourselves, our lives, and where we see ourselves in the future, in order to make things happen for you again in life, sometimes you have to keep going, not stop, and find time to sit with your emotions, learn from your mistakes, and have faith in better days to come, when the excitement runs out, thats just things not feeling good anymore that doesnt mean that your thinking is necessarily defective, maybe that just means that there is a better way of seeing things, or thinking about things in a more positive way.

Don't Forget to Speak Highly of Yourself ...

Im sure Ive exaggerated from time to time,. Im 35, so Im trying to get my life going in the right direction, work, not retire burnt out from sharing online and writing books, which isn't yet a recognized career with a paycheck, the main credential for respect, what are you doing with your life, why, for what purpose does that serve, who benefits, and what caused you to respond in this way so publicly with compassion for those who maybe needed to reminded not to lose faith. I was sober in college on Deans List not social, my only friends with neighbors and few people from the dorm I kept in touch with, I lived in Aden Hall in the Engineering Quad, across the street from the Stadium. I only drank at age 20 Spring 2006 through December 2006, and tried Cocaine once, with one relapse 2014 and 2017, and drank 2013. That was the only amount of partying I ever did, I used to have friends over at my house, but never drank or smoked weed, sometimes with a friend from elementary school, who friended me the same New Years I threw up on myself in a limo of friends, driving by the same school of my last dance recital. I don't think drinking was ever my thing, but learned to embrace smoking weed, it was a social thing with the guys, how I had friends in high school not by having boyfriends, and not something the girls were into, we never drank or smoked weed together, maybe once. So please don't be mad at me, as though I ever called negative attentions to myself, maybe not the most confident, and seeming to have lost my public social skills, but never anyone anyone ever hated or disliked. That occurs later in life, when you meet all walks of life, some accepting of you, some not. Just be sure not to drink or do drugs with any strangers, and don't hook up from the bars nothing I did basically, that's a good life, turned a fast life, put on anti-psychotics not able to deal with life, everything too difficult, until eventually you lose your bounce in your run, that's what its like when youre well, and everyone else is dim, its never too late, don't describe it, just get through it! You can do anything you set your mind to, present, gone, focused, half there, have a heart.

Ands heres the stuff that makes me nervous, that unnecessary passion, it sounds more intense than it is, I never use caps lock anymore, its not an approved emotion nor is sharpie, with love always and not to cause trouble, its hard to stop hate once it starts, not that I ever suffered any differently than anyone successful made to be scared $hitless, in a spotlight of their peers.

Please read with caution, I would never write anything that if absorbed would hurt to smile, laugh, sing, cry, or just be plain old you, is how I pushed myself too hard, so backtracking. Im sorry, if anyone was not happy about a mention, or thought less of me, I always do my best as having been through life, not to make people vulnerable to a life viewed by others in the negative thats a responsibility for a turn of events no one wants to be responsible for, upset.

Have a goodnight, last night there was an under crescent black moon, I didnt get a picture. Just enjoy the moment, how blessed are we when earth heals us in sync with everyone proud.

Afterword \(11-15-20\): I matched with 3 guys from the bars in 2013, I dated, and matched with one person in AA 2017. I decided to stop dating 2014. I have just decided to start dating again my Ex from 2010-2012, we were going to get married then, before I got sick from Bipolar and needed to be alone to get my life organized, finished Law School, and focus on my career, because I could not get a paid job in Law, or elsewhere that I wanted to work, I became a blogger/writer instead.

What Calling You a Drug Addict is For ...

When you get called a drug addict, that's others reminding you of how disappointed they were, when you got sick, using drugs or alcohol as a coping mechanism for any breakups or separation of bonds in life. That much still to this day will all be in your head, an issue others will be quiet to, if not into discussing at length, any reasons for not being forgiving of any changes you have been through in life, that's seeing someone tough, as not beautiful, or someone defiant, as out of their mind, not chill not at peace, that always comes from unhappiness with self, and its by how you behave, look, and speak, that you later become defined, that's how others come to feel about you, either believing in you or choosing not to. You only get one chance at doing well, being around people, and feeling like yourself, once you flip out, get hurt, or feel like you are suffering, while others are doing well without you, that's when you know, you have lost your mind, for any amount of reasons, more having to do with their issue with you, feeling more mature or above you, that's seeing you, seeing the issues upon further investigation of you, and that's what breaks up happiness, or love, when you become lost, and don't understand why, its something you are doing, that does not make sense to another, an issue others feel bigger or better than you about, that's when you feel isolated, no one proud of you, but more proud of the other, that's someone who later comes to shine, and you being the disheveled one not feeling good about yourself, we don't all know code, or see where things come from, and some things are more obvious to others looking at you, than easy for you to see yourself, that wellness, watched but not bothered, then there is asking for it, when someone has a problem with you, feels threatened by you, and retaliates on you, while you are trying to figure the rest of your life out, and that's painful, to get hurt, to get upset, and for everyone to fight back toward you and keep you from feeling good, that's being known in a negative way, something you never fully know much about, not until you don't feel well, becomes a series of I told you sos about others feelings, as though that uncertainty felt about you, or disinterest was because there was ever something wrong about you, what adderrall does to your energy, focused but left with no one, unbonded, that's the cost of getting As. When you come to grips with not being the same person you were, be sure never to blame others, we all find sources of strength through our own successes in life, and for each one remembered the more you become dismantled, as ever having been a prime pick, or marriage material, that's being treated like a whore, someone not fit for job, marriage, or children, something you had the potential for in life, maybe not now, depending on how able you are to feel good, and whether you can weather the thoughts of others or commentaries regarding your progress, as being about a bunch of others things or other people, not yourself and your own experiences in life, so that's being read into once, for doubt, then for humor, then for smarts, then for guilt, then for reasoning, then for understanding, and after all disappointment, none of it will make sense to anyone hurt by you just a bunch of words, and photos, and where are you now? So that's how you get blamed for being the premise of any jokes, and that's how whatever your skills were causes others to think from that lens of exposure in life, benefited, that's someone being helped, who maybe didn't need your help, and as a result of being helped by you, ended up having a better life. Those split decisions, are when you feel something and in that quiet space communicate to someone, who either responds or doesn't based upon how weird you are, or based upon how weird things are around them, and that one like you skipped, turns into a funeral, and that one funeral led and booked, turns into question, and that one statement about how you were, read into for pattern, and that's how everything gets looked at as a sick joke to explain self then now or ever, and that's why people come to not like you, the more they are made to think about things, without solution, when illness is felt, the difference between many ideas, and no ideas, and that's the function of a speaker or the news, to keep others afloat, not necessarily always invincible either to making others feel good, made to feel bad or disconnected just the same not perfect.

When Nothing Feels Good ...

Never think for a minute that's its all about you, for some reason everyone either thinks theyre special, and above you, or nice to you, that's just how the world is all about themselves, some are more giving than most, but if you want to live this life loved, then you better start loving yourself, because you never know what energy you'll get hit with in life, to make everything about them, and that's when you let others win at your own expense, the same people who did not make you feel good, feeling better, as though you were ever one of them someone who doesn't feel good about themselves. I cant say that life is all gravy, not even as a top blogger, those made unhappy by your successes will always be the same people to keep you down in life, never having believed in you to begin with, only believing in themselves, fair weather to trends including your own health, if you're not going up you're not going up with them, and that's just how some people are, reserved, as though by trait, love, or demeanor, you impress upon their lives a set of conditions not agreeable to their tastes, attention on them not you. If someone doesn't feel good to them, not only do they not speak well of someone, but they even convince themselves that they are better, and at the expense of your good nature and efforts to be kind, generous, or loving toward, outwardly reject you in life as though you've not arrived to a condition that's able to lift them from whatever their unfulfilled needs are in life, to light up, be powerful, well liked, and for everything to go right for them in life, they're not even business men, but behave and act like everything is a business, that's just people and reputation, if they don't know what the consensus opinion is about you, they're quick to pick up on any and all negative inferences and assume to be thought or with reference to you, the antecedent to the glory of coming out of a recession, and people making money and finding happiness, marriage and children, not seeing you as apart of that equation, would rather sum of your life, to mean other things, the person whose identity once known, created problems of acceptance from others, that's not seeing your potential or the beauty in you or your life, what else do you think made you feel so above others when you were with me, it must mean that I love you and made you feel special, that overgrown feeling of confidence, once one is found the other feels lost, that's me. You can't nurture the positive development in people who don't need your love, who are so independent that your love becomes unnecessary or embarrassing for them to be in need of, that's thinking that others do not think highly of you, that's seeing themselves as above you or better than you, more refined, with more class, tact, or with a better viewpoint than someone already with a viewpoint of their own, that's finding yourself, sometimes in finding yourself, and loving others, others become better decision makers and once they have found themselves or begin to see better for themselves not credit you, or even worse discredit you for their lack of success should you no longer be in their lives, not made to feel the same by others, expecting that much from you still whether in your life or not in your life, expect no less than the best treatment of them, no matter who they are with, no matter where they go, and impress upon a different set of conditions for you to cause you to think about life, from their perspective before they met you, that's them feeling on the inside of life, and the putting you down so that you don't feel apart of, that awkward disposition, or later turning of the tide, the quiet around around when you are the only one lit, who then is responsible for creating an ease and comfort in a room full of people, of course the people in it, who are made to feel better or apart of, that's not you coming up that's people feeling good absent minded you. If I wanted that I would have never dated in the first place, which is why I want to have a career, blogging, earn a living providing for myself as a writer, which to everyone else in conversation seems absurd or not realistic, well it's happening whether you like it or not, and it's working for me, whether you agree or not, and it is what I am doing with my life, whether that makes you happy or not, that's living my life for me, and for my family, not to be mentally disturbed by the incessant demands of conversations and dialogue that no longer suit my interests or make me feel good, to not add myself to any equations in life, to shine more light on others than is provided to me in terms of wellness, only able to provide a well feeling based upon what I'm able to provide for myself, that's being myself not just anyone's paralegal or anyone's attorney in life, that's representing myself and being credited for my work by name, that's being successful, company in my name, created by me, and writing in my name produced by me for my readers, and distributed for likes, not for fighting with people from my past who did not believe in me or who distanced themselves from me during any moment of doubt in my life, never sticking up for me or ever supporting me in conversation minus worry. If there is anyone who is hurting me, it's those who think I should be doing something else with my life, there is nothing else I can do with my life, not if I'm not smart enough with enough credentials to be employed by a law firm, and certainly don't have the reputation or the image strong enough to attract money or clientele to a law firm that I work for, that would be asking too much of me, as a blogger, to also advertise those I have worked for and represent them too.

Self-Reminder (Read-Through):

"that's time to focus on yourself, when people are fighting, that's time to be accepting of others, and when people are not happy with you, that's not a good time to be confrontational or try to correct them or punish them for moments of confusion and lack of clarity, be judged as connected to others who are not well or who have ill thoughts toward others, that's not how to help people, by categorizing them among those who are not intelligent and of harm to others, based upon abilities in life or beauty. Once someone is able to find their way in life, with or without support from others,"

That's Just Something ...

We may all be human, but we are capable of being different, and maintain a unique sense of purpose in life, its not all about making money, you have to create your own success in life to be of value to others and that how a shared happiness occurs, hopefully before your identity, image, or reputation take a detour in life, that's the cost of not effectively representing yourself online, by manner (twitter, thought to be a Charlie Sheen joke over client order of priorities), or self-harm (hole in the wall as thought to communicate with reference to a hole as in a "hole in one" as in "legally blonde" to say that any movies were ever thought to be about me before I grew up, or about my path in life ever, that's a shame, mental health issues misunderstood, that's common to confuse bipolar with autism, as though one cannot speak or since one has not spoken one has difficulty communicating, I think my psychiatrist of many years on Bedford, both agreed not to be put on adderrall because I was too hyper telling jokes, also something my therapist advised against, as Ive later matured online, it seems that obnoxious quality of humor, much like a bad photo, sticks with you how upon being viewed privately you get remembered for how you were when you were not well, not recognizing a struggle as like any other struggle anyone has gone through in life image wise, I think its youre either happy or youre not, really nothing to do with breakups, youre either smart and able and get in or you have not presented yourself or your personal history in a way that demonstrates that you have moved forward, if you sound like youre thinking about the past, that must have been a red flag as not knowing much about and that's not something anyone wants to relive, what you would have understood had you ever thought about what your friends parents did for a living, (Im sorry for saying PCH its never okay to make fun of yourself, my ex-psychiatrist was a gender identities specialist, I started dressing like a guy shopped in Front Runners boys section in 3rd grade, a change I made on my own, not with reference to other PCH cases and gender identities, sorry to mention). I think that was something I later put together in life, all the connections that were there never pursued, for some reason didn't try hard enough to date or be social, maybe something to do with depression (from smoking weed) I was later told by a new psychiatrist by zoom who in March took me off all day meds for a week or so, because I was hitting my head, this started while talking to Ari Emanuel hearing voices, Im sure another case of ideas or world colliding and based upon my book cover or who I know thought an obsession to think about wrongs, without enough focus on whats going right, that's not how to be supportive being controlling in avoidance of wrongs committed by others, that's empowering the wrong teams in life, and when you do that, or sound like that, you don't feel good to anyone, why you get put down in life, so that youre not funny, so that youre not respected, so that you seem odd, or insecure, and the more intimidated you get the gayer you look, the more feeble minded you become, the younger you sound, the less depth you provide, its like a never ending cycle of shame, growing up maturing then being made to look immature not evolved. So it's a learning experience, love is important, pen pals are wonderful, but when it comes to sex, that's something you keep private, not something that needs to be shared out loud or in public to communicate any freedoms in life felt, still earning to achieve in life, that invincible confidence of "no one can hurt me" a type of strength my mom has described to me, but never understood like "prove them wrong" I have always accepted how others are around me, better than me generally, so I don't think earning a million dollars in one year blogging had I set up my ads and been professionally built would ever impress anyone, who probably just thought I was a relapse, cocaine addict, who allowed older men to turn her into a woman, whatever that matters Im not sure, they wanted to, theyre older, I think they know more about, prime time, than I do, she has yet to see the code, do this to the code, I think at the time, that was their way of making their world fell free again, not under pop culture pressures, Im sure work life is boring, have always enjoyed my self-paced lifestyle, work around the clock, when Im focused, rest and take it easy on days I cant function, now its like I have to work everyday otherwise I don't feel good, and the music stuff is hush hush what feels good, love everyone!

I hereby request for permission to work with Heidi Unger, to help me with publishing my findings in a structured way, which can be submitted for review by a professional board of examiners to pin point which insights have benefited or not benefited others, what is nuanced, to find the value of my work as new. Once read, not considered smart, if it makes sense, or considered too difficult, if not put into words otherwise, is the difference I believe between pain, a reminder past, in remembrance of a pain as directed toward indicated by a change in demeanor or posture, which then becomes the responsibility of the individual to correct either by not thinking about, not feeling bad about, not speaking to the purpose of others in misdirecting attentions toward or away from subjects that either do or do not have anything to do with you, and what limits to experimentation with a womans body is permissible for readings or to be understood by another said. How many statements to reach a clearing point, what causes a pain (non-professional, report like, painful to you, then becomes painful to another, either feeling your pain as described, or inheriting a pain of things not being about as declared, disagreement to your interests, causing one to feel worse or alone, and upon detachment, the causes for losses of faith, and how long does it take to feel good again, after interpreting everything in the negative, 1 day if felt immediately discontinued discussion and resuming previous tone, or one evening awake until thinking stops which means a moment of peace has been forgone for a feeling thought to be leading toward some place better than where one is at the moment, allowing time to process, not skipping reflections on work completed, and build upon ones own thoughts not the thoughts of others, how you lose your position in place of anothers feelings which are not made to feel good about you inherited, while they feel better having that feeling been displaced from them, as not a consequence of their feelings, but of what you say, once the negative is stated to confirm their deisbeliefs, or reservations to your emergencies in life, not felt by them.

To-Do: Map out the moment of illness, and what can be done in avoidance of inheriting pains. Not taking things personally as suggested by one editor who messaged me, get back to your old self, untainted. The causes for anyone to feel behind, that is not in alignment, which is not the solution, upon illness, cohesion not expected, simply talking until the mind becomes clear again, no matter how fast that occurs, no matter how painful the slow down, its if you are strong and not helping, refusal to investigate cancer = jail time. What is not yet a problem to you, if you acknowledge the sufferings of others, never feel threatened by negative happenings, just as no one ever demanded answers from you, until you got well again, shared.

Mean, Change of Heart, Too Late ...

Based upon your demeanor, the past will have been long gone by the time you begin not feeling well, and its usually a series of events occurring by demeanor and exchange, that you are made to feel, left with a feeling, something to think about, or something that winds up hurting in the long run as remembered, that's the pain of miscommunication or being misunderstood. Everyone taking a whack at you, before you have even seen the light of day, youre actually never awake enough present once on meds, to carry any demeanor close to someone bearing a fullness noteworthy of respect when alone. If its been factored about you to cast blames upon you, then you will always be made the scapegoat to the problems of others, not seeing anything wrong occurring within them when presented with your story, and seeing everything wrong with you upon hearing your fears or pains stated out loud, these aren't memorized recollections, its just as any thought is made, felt, and then communicated, nothing to do with people and everything to do with you what you are willing to lend insights to in life, if not viewed as having potential, or capable of coming to a closure, or point of remembrance worth hearing, said by another that's knowing you have something to say, as though its something bottled within, its actually a pain that is caused, when someone speaks and the only person that can hear them is you, that's a point of connection, that not many chime into, that's knowing you and saying things that maybe only one would be bothered by or fearful of, the re-telling of a story of trauma, as viewed through the lens of someone not from NY, or not from Brentwood, which just so happens to be what was done to my story, carefully made throughout the years, not a focus, a dream, or a need, nothing to say, its not until you lose everything in life, privileges, money, success, trust, jobs, boyfriends, and friends, that you ask yourself is it even worth trying, that's not resting on any laurels of having gotten away with anything not specifically stated or shared in solid detail in a memorizable format, that's you giving up to feelings, and the thoughts of others, all those jabs eventually add up, a taste of your own medicine thought deserved, as though you ever were throwing the heat online, for anything other than good clean fun sharing. I just graduated, and its doesn't seem to stop the elements that leave you scared for life, those moments at ease, when you get carried away by the energy of others, if you cant take care of one person at a time, then don't even begin to help in a big way, you have to have the basics down in order to share in as way that allows for things to come full circle, not rev anyone up in the inside, hitting too close to home painful, in terms of whos story is more telling than the other, we all have lives, some have wives, some date, some breakup, some on meds, some affected, some enthralled, compelled, and even so worried to the extent that they go out of their way to make sure things turn out okay for others, that's not bringing anyone into the middle of any equations in life, including your own pain or suffering, so "keep it moving" move forward, or let the dust settle and be buried under the opinions of others about your life not having lived your life, or known you as you were living your life, to know what you were like then.

Treated as You Speak ...

One on one it's a whole different ballgame of playfulness, you either read into or don't and when it stops flying overhead is when your mind can tell something is wrong, and that's when it matters if its coming from a bad place and being directed toward you to see if your head hurts, changes, or if you say anything differently, having felt any different. The only way for a bad spirit to be inherited is during moments of disbelief, that's number one, number two, calling attentions to inherited, three mentioning then being made scared by others testing your limits for reactions, getting to play the bad guy, to see whether you can tell if its coming from a good place or a bad place, anything that hurts is coming from a bad place, maybe that's just that person not on your side in life, or having seen others, feeling apart of a concept that doesn't include you as looking different, and that can affect confidence when it comes to communicating with you in a normal way, depending on what you have said, well spoken or not, replied to in a similar fashion of not making sense, even though one can very well make sense as an Attorney, not all of us are capable of flicking on or off feelings like a switch, and that switch gets pulled on you, usually to generate a response, whether its for love, which is usually not the case, but to see if you stop in your tracks lose steam, maybe thought deserved to see someone so driven not thinking earned through academics, but blaming it on adderrall for being too serious, or making things easier for them post a condition sought, of being overwhelmed with thought cycling, that's what you've said remembered by you, then revisited by you at a later point in time, upon speaking maybe remembered, or it could be someone remembering something someone has said, and detached from you at that point in time, automatically cycling the thoughts or commentary of someone or some article that resonates for them in the negative about you, that's someone not allowing their ability to stay well be affected by changes in anyone, once you lose that, its tough to remember, like reading clearly an entire weeks worth of reading then writing two posts of reports about the past, head hurting, face returning back to normal old looking, then writing slow now. Just accept the fact that when someone expresses a boundary towards you thats not just them turning on you, thats them also letting you know that they dont believe in you, dont need you in their life, dont have compassion for what youve been through, think that you dont care or did not worry enough for others, or allowed yourself to be "so far gone" to make it okay for others to have distanced themselves over the years which upon mention does not make it any easier to speak to anyone or be replied to at this point in time, Im sure theres a feeling of peace that is required in order for someone to have a conversation with another, and its not through dating, sure of that now.

Response to Sydney Simpson's Ex's Word Choices ...

(Best Friend Since Age 4 to 2015 upon them Dating):

[1] “Sydney is a real good girl and she has a good head on her shoulders,”Stuart Alexander Lee, who dated Sydney from roughly 2007 to 2012 tells Radar exclusively. “She’s not lazy. She works very hard.”

[2] Lee and Sydney broke up because of the increasing demands of his music career, but he says, “There’s no hard feelings on either side. I want to see her happy, and if this can motivate her to speak out, I hope it really does. My whole thing is, I was always tired of her and her brothers and sisters crying over spilled milk. You can’t let the world beat you up, especially when you didn’t ask to be here.”

I met him briefly 2015 while they were in town visiting, I was working in Century City at the time, and had been dating someone a Music Executive, who I bought nighties for, because I made a comment about it at Makai, I think he inferred it to be about “Dark Knight” and Health Ledger passing, or a Joker Poster removed from Wilshire by me, and since I wrote on Twitter not yet made apart of any community understandings of the logic behind motivations entertainment wise, I think that is why I was taken to the Mann Chinese Theater and taken on a Tour of Paramount Studios, the only one taking photos, none of which turned out nice. So that was his version of covering the issues, as well as defending his then Girlfriend, for a comment I may have disclosed in private in a handwritten book, that once upset she called me “lazy” while working for Jeffrey W. Steinberger, I remember because I called her from work crying left a voicemail, told her that my feelings were hurt and maybe at the time did not understand where that was coming from. The “spilled milk” is with reference to a movie I saw on Comcast Cable TMC in Boulder Colorado 2006, a scene from the movie: One for the Book, later retitled to some movie name with a Turtle, like the character nickname in the show Entourage. It was President Ronald Reagan, who poured a glass of milk in the kitchen, if I remember correctly, and thought that would be an interesting way of remembering movies by memorable scenes that give meaning later to how a later meaning derived can be viewed through a meaning communicate if the timing of the movie and MLK were at the same time, or an I added to the film, to spell the word Milk.

Follow-Up: Upon being accused of things Im not doing I drank, dated, got pulled over on purpose, took a sobriety test in front of 5 cop cars spotlights in a Whole Foods parking lot, then it was recommended to go to Harvard Stone, pulled over for a light in my car, took a selfie crying, the guy I was texting not available to see me, had missed one invite watching CSPAN glued to my seat in my kitchen focused. = misdemeanor (2013) to be expunged my entire record (2021) when the courts open back up, its too late to not be known by anyone, since everyone runs their own independent investigations on you prior to interaction or while interacting to see what you know or if you can tell what they know or where its coming from, and why all last minute reactions speak to a more common understanding, such as article language anything standing out as an intelligent use of words to highlight many stories, when put together under a heading to communicate an unknown reference to a name of a statement made by me, in a listing of what happened, following my later study and review after having attended law school, and by interviews conducted (2008), that I had not attended Mezzaluna, was invited, and too tired to attend after my Dance Recital, on time to school the next day found out in the school yard and cried in the closet in 3rd Grade by the backpacks. So that was not a combination of events I thought about my entire life, only as remembered and weighing everything, so its not just me that felt remorse in my late 20s, but also did something about it, pushed my limits physically and mentally, a good indicator of whether your on board or known and not respected others offended just looking at you knowing you and thinking why for stupid reasons uninspired by you. I did not attend Mezzaluna, (the other story was told "get your fata$$ in the car" into a Ferrari by a woman who was like a mother to us, my mom's best friend, she even started dressing like one another, fun moms, I would tell my mom "why can't you dress like a regular mom," and explains why also not friends with her ex who punched my dad once confronting him living at her home on saltaire, his dog was stolen a female pitbull went missing).

= I slept on concrete for 14 hours in jail, that was the wait time, to be given meds in the hospital, interviewed twice and then sent home, that was the most painful experience of my life, on a freezing cold bus in a Nike sweater shivering.

edd.gov Benefits (Explanations) Provided 11-21-20 ...

Upon applying for jobs and graduating for law school I was defamed, following being robbed of my edd.gov benefits to invest in marriage to a celebrity advocate to the environment also listed on imdb where I have been able to generate an additional following and support known because my Twitter analytics notified me that members of the entertainment industry followed me at one point. And because I was robbed without double checking the identity of the replying pen pal companion, things went to extremes in private and money taken from me, which upon sharing made me look stupid, then another who I wandered away from in March to talk to Joaquin Phoenix, gave me a hard time beginning August in public, Facebook Page made March shown or not shown, depending upon whether content in private was provided that demonstrated the same love and care and attention and energy as I was when I originally sent videos of myself talking, as though thats a requirement for pen paling, quality, since when, and since when is talking to others cheating, if not for purposes of sex or love, to justify defaming someone online as being flighty or picky based on the quality of the bond wander, was not intended to personally offend anyone I talk to on a private basis, who generally get upset if things are not going well either for me or for others attack me, as though information can be created by harming me, as though drive comes from fighting, or a bettered state comes from defenses, its the place that sees what theyre doing as right that puts you down until you become so strong that none of them affect you or scare you anymore no matter what they do or say about you thats not needing anyone, thats a womans heart being meddled with, to be portrayed as something else, when all my writing and photo-ing is done with care to be perfect, because of everyone photographic memory then blame me for sharing poor images, they dont want to see my face, then dont read my work, why my name and face were but on my website, right to exclude, not be solely responsible to repair an attitude toward me, so they can be calm, and then leave me aggravated explaining how they were, all od a sudden calm not making homicidal jokes toward me "to do some OJ type $hit to me" which resulted in psychosis, self-harm, unprofessional speech online, and mental illness too August to November to recover from read and retain remember and write again, long. -Bipolar disorder, hospitalized 9x, due to lack of sleep, medication management, nigh med adjustments beginning 2013, voices beginning 2017 post blogging on Instagram, and voices beginning again 2020, following defamation, with incidences of self-harm (September 2017) cut my wrist after Hugh Hefner died and I missed a like, after messaging a Larry Flynt account, then Fall 2018 before applying for jobs why I worked, then August 2019 hitting my head, hearing voices upon sleeping started sleeping with the TV on after going to the hospital for 14 days, after talking to the police after a recovery death to a Kennedy, I took myself to the hospital the police did not take me to the hospital but when I shared those stories though hospitalized because Kennedy died to put two stories together as publicity stunt or for admission of connection relationship, no not known in an influencing acceptance yet still at home recovering, I only talked to myself 2017 before the fires, then wrote books instead of talking to myself, then had a relapse with voices beginning August 2020 following nude photos shown, which was how I fractured my hand March 2019 after posing being rejected and being taunted by a bicyclist in the rain nowhere near the bike lane on the path walking with my head down, fractured my hand hitting my head which hit the shower handle by accident, which was why photos were asked, and then with voices plus taunting (if that was known to occur in that order) resulted in me hitting my head without knowing that that was the intention of the person provoking all that behavior from me, to cause the same results for me suicidal behavior which is punching my head, that doesnt feel good not to my body or to my head, it causes my head to look grose and lose my neck and my beauty and my body turns to jello become unattractive, thats to make me look dirty or manly to say that I have bad energy or attract bad energy or was known by bad energy so looked like bad energy. To cause me suicide because I made a comment to Charles Manson, a documentary I watched by computer or tv before I carved my desk, and slammed my head into the wall, which means not to contact people in jail or reference them then they try to make a suicide example of you compare you to someone guilty of homicide and cause you to flip out without caring if you attack anyone because thats whats wanted to have the power to fight you and put you in jail, with everyone watching you, play hero, attacking me, like thats the right thing to do, to destroy me or kill me, as though everyone is better without me, then why would I become known if I wanted to die, then that wouldnt make sense, why I am well liked, explains why hard on me privately bc they thought that energy they got was did something bad, no its that Im smart and capable of doing good things in life, Im sorry one was defended, voted no one one parole, and he died of suicide, why being brought up to say that I caused deaths in defense of someone guilty of death to someone who only killed a few people, is the grose analogy being made of comparisons about me, with regards to all theories on homicide, fame, death, drug addiction, evil, and wellness absent minded fear of the outside world, perform anyways, just as happy with or without ongoing threats means I care about my audience, who maybe doesnt want to have to go through all the downs I get put through, to see whether I die in public if an award is thought of, to make me look like Im trying to get an award like how an award was won following what circumstances. It was JULY LAUNCHED 2019 TO NOVEMBER 2019 200-300 LIKES ONLINE THEN BY DECEMBER TO MARCH 1000 LIKES PER POST THEN AVERAGEING 1000 PER POST WRITING EVERYDAY WITH PICTURE IMRPOVEMENT, with no improvements to my writing, IMRPOVEMENTS TO WRITING NOVEMBER 2020, WITH 1000-2000 likes per post, and no companion or daily pen pal, and my Dad is dying of Cancer now, wasted 7 months responding to someone wasting my time as though I have time to waste or as though that wasnt a rare moment when my entire family was happy talking resulting in problems to all our energy and relationships. -This job requires pageant, as in Jean Benet Ramsey from Boulder where I went to school to make me look like someone who is mischaracterizing my won brother, because I self-harm upon argument. Missed Brady meeting, such as the one missed Saturday Fall 2018, working in Film, making it a priority to learn, since everyone else was not confident about me helping, picked, did not attend. Self-harm, addiction (Fall 2018) on as prescribed taken off bipolar medications, had hit my head with a cut before work started and during work until that behavior stopped in private. I was on Twitter, the bullied, for inappropriate commentary during a moment of silence, on prescribed Vyvanse post defamation as though that was me being positive as though what was ahead would be easy to figure out, that means what was done to me was intended to hurt me and what they want to argue is that me being hurt hurt others to say by photo make me look like a sex offender give me STDs and ask for nude photos to say they got done unwanted by me, and they died. Facebook Page made to hurt me, that took months to get used to, the after getting used to the worst, it got worse, more photos asked, I asked for help in February 2020 everyone said block I tried that, and the relationship continued, while I was building my website, then he claims to own photos, like I dont own my own face body and content, show everyone a bad image of me, then I lost my face and my body under a huge negative reaction. The intention of the person provoking all that behavior from me, to cause the same results for me suicidal behavior which is punching my head. Sober Coach: advertised on FB unrelated to Florida shooting I was not blamed for but there was a fire afterward while working in film, who used the word "daily intention" could not afford a life coach by phone. Self-harm, addiction (Fall 2018) on as prescribed taken off bipolar medications, had hit my head with a cut before work started and during work until that behavior stopped in private. -My ex Boss won a Pulitzer, so someone tried to hurt me after studying me being a fan, to claim that what he did to me was smart if I couldnt see it coming, or stop it from happening to me. I asked for help in February 2020 everyone said block I tried that, and the relationship continued, while I was building my website, then he claims to own photos, like I dont own my own face body and content, show everyone a bad image of me, then I lost my face and my body under a huge negative reaction.

[Self-Help]:] would like to apply for the Intern position for Self Help at the Superior Court of California, County of Ventura. I am a recent Masters in Law graduate with a MSL in Risk Management and Compliance. In my free time I enjoy writing, so much so that I decided to finally build my website, prepared for expectations, and providing a service during a time of need, which gradually became popular overtime, with consistency and a lot of effort and careful measurement of my stats, to understand whats going well and why, as well as be responsible enough to stay well, and be a good example in life, not in need.

I am not immune to issues relevant to insights held by others, I think more sensitive than others, and compassion is an inside job, when you are nice to someone in need, thats not a "sponge" absorption of feeling or "adrenaline rush" as was recommended maybe at one point, words changed to my thesis, to describe what was later put into detail when discussing the pain acquired from having been of service and helping others to not doing well and not being able to help others left with a pain of no one helping you after making a stupid mistake (that's comparing the experience of someone sober and able on deans list to someone with friends not professional and not able to work on a hotline, that's a different kind of pain, and "vicarious trauma" is not to insult the experience as heard, maybe my own experiences with mental health issues or not knowing where things are coming from, is why if you have a job title, not to share about it in public, that is when more is expected of you, and you can get hurt if you date and work on a hotline, looks irresponsible, and explains why too immature to date, other women picked in your place, that's outgrowing you, if you have not figured out pride and image and womanhood on your own confidence which is not achieved through sex, empowerment, it's through disciplined work and feeling good about yourself and the work that you are doing made proud of yourself, that's not experiences that's handling life as you see it, no different to anyone else, so if no one feels sorry for you it's because you allowed yourself to get sick, and could not help yourself, and also was not helpful to others who confided in you, expected you to respond with more advice or insights as though prepared to have conversations like that about life, can be overwhelming to know about, just be professional, when people open up, it's not something secret that explains a character trait, could be an issue affecting choices in life and trust, so just maintain wellness for more positive interactions to occur, not overwhelm the senses, be offended by anyone not in love you who doesn't feel sorry for you and thinks you have it better than most left alone. The more I can relate the greater level of sensitivity is paid to the issue, as affected. Sometimes it's not until after you are harmed that you are able to get help, and like most things challenging, unlike school, it's hard to make that break from reality, to do what you feel is right, even if it means being made to feel scared or embarrassed, as though normalizing that behavior makes anyone feel better other than you, which would be allowing for things to happen, not preventing things from happening, which is the goal of separations, to put no one in disillusionment, and leave everyone strong.

I have learned a lot during my time online, and it has not been without repercussion, it seems the bigger the story the more responsibility you have to not allow misrepresentations of you or others, get the best of you or your family, that's not having a say in what others think, when it comes to public opinion which is something that starts upon being brought up seen, and like most things secret hurtful to not be apart of or made known as having occurred in light of your own experiences in life, not included. Some things are difficult to address, and based upon how things look, is how you get treated, whether you reinforce those poor opinions of you, or whether you stay mindful of your own conduct and course of action, ensuring that you are in no way, mismanaged attention wise by anyone, needed to be brought center by anyone relevant, as claiming to be the key influence to another's intelligence or drive in life.

I hope that having explained the rationale behind keeping a blog and website, the exception of acceptance for my writing can be made, without punishing me for knowing someone famous, as though that automatically builds your stats online, to what it is now, ranked today #16,814 in the US on Alexa. Depending upon how old you are, how big you are, and how pretty you are, and based upon your education, and based upon the wealth around you, determines what's expected of you, and that I only learned past the point of non-acceptance, to what standards to try as hard as, someone who is famous.

Misdemeanor, Lawsuit, Defamation, Bullying ...

During my time in law school, I matured, no longer worried that in the event things should not make sense, or during any moment in which I was not able to communicate well, bettered by having a legal education, able to maintain a balanced perspective no matter what challenges I encountered along the way acceptance wise, team wise, publicity wise, or name wise, like myself no matter what, at no expense to anyone from my life be bothered by any changes to my condition upon facing any hurdles in life either created by me, or later viewed as a manifestation of my own fears in life, assumed to be guilts by association, based on who is here or not here now, or suffering, not see me as one of them. Addiction is a term used to describe someone without an upper threshold, someone who doesn't feel good or is made to feel good by use of substances or people to feel good, which is the harm in communicating with others, viewed as someone who benefits (a pariah) not someone who empowers, a leader past or presently viewed to be well enough to be looked at, wondered about, or thought about for insights positives, not just to portray an overall lesson to lives outside of your own, compromised. The more in need you become, the less able you are to help others, and that was the biggest lesson I learned post lawsuit and punishment, that once another has reached their upper limit for acceptances of you, means to accept your losses in life, and not question another's silence, nor be offended later by not maintaining your own silence, speaking to every issue as it relates to you, the worse you look, the less power you have to change your life let alone another's life for the better, and that's what happens upon disagreement, one's interests protected but not yours when it comes to privacy, discrimination, defamation, employment, and acceptance. How one gets left out, not remembered, ignored, not valued, and runs a higher risk of offending in tone when well, rather than provide the types of assurances to others demanded from you, to determine what they view as guilt, reporting, over-reporting, or trying to understand that sudden change within oneself, when around others, that never used to occur, feeling smaller than, less than, intimidated. You can't defend yourself, if you are found to be in the wrong, and there is power in the people in those respects to then treat someone as automatically wrong whether it's them running, or going to the grocery store, buying meds, shopping, or reading books, everything assumed to be in communication of a wrong, a wrong communication to whom, then becomes the question of whether it's okay to be yourself post lawsuit, or whether to continue to accommodate questioning of you as though you have the responsibility to explain where everyone else is coming from in thinking that it's okay to make fun of you post punishment, and treat you the same, guilty with fame achieved separately on your own, online, not yet published or written about professionally. You become a pathetic example of a human being, not a source of strength, if found guilty, as though your hurt sense of faith disturbs the faith and orientation of others with regards to their cares and viewpoints of the world and whatever they think is necessary to respond or punish anyone who is responding, perceiving their response to be a form of guilt through a fine understanding of causes, as though one's health then was poor, to then as exposed have exposed others to a not well state of mind, with two jobs, overcoming depression, not my intent to bring anyone down in life, and no idea of mine was ever made with an intent to cover up any facts about myself not kept a record of, and it's for those reasons one gets attacked in life as to blame. For any and all misunderstandings thought deserved, which looked obvious, and later as stated from me, gives added confirmations to the production of an idea, without proof of a match between an incidence of gun violence to my own identity or something I have said, back in 2012. It's at the point at which your life becomes threatened, how you sound and respond to others, that then gets used to judge you ultimately as looking out for others, or subjecting others to harm. So that means it's okay for them to hurt me thought deserved, but it's not okay for me to complain about it, as that is not deserved, given who I am and what I look like, not to be favored always the other who is favored in comparison to me, the other will always 100% look better than me, when everything done looks like it was done because of me, or a bad idea coming from me done. People will make you do things and if you later have to think about it separated, leave those separations in life, means that was good enough, it's when you want to know why, that a harm occurs to you, when someone no longer views you as innocent or nice, and treats you aggressively as though you have done them wrong as though they are you online, well liked by all. So that's the problem with people misidentifying me, and that's how I get treated in close interactions one on one, nice, genuine, loving, then if I get tired or back out, mean and trying in the gravest fashions of inflicted emotions, guilts, or hardships, the stuff that makes your head hurt, something you can't change, not being someone who is believed, or trusted, that's being made guilty, in public, in court records, for all to see and reject you by, something they see and reason to not respond to you, that's a system of ignoring people in society not deserving of being responded to in life, as though I was ever demanding of anyone, independent my whole life. -During the time that has passed between jobs, I have been working on myself, becoming a long distance runner, running a half-marathon, drafting a copy of my first book for publication professionally, built a website and blog that I am proud of, and graduated from law school. No matter what is interpreted from my life, by look or story, whenever a harm is caused to another, there is not justification for that harm having had occurred, what makes all crimes nonsense, hence the pressure on writers and website designers when it comes to being sensitive to the issues, and knowing what the issues are, and which identities are being used to make relevant the times. No matter what thoughts enter my mind, never have I ever been insulted by anyone who I have come into contact with in real life, it's only after you have made decisions when well, that you are made to look bad by your choices, the other side communicated about from your standpoint, as though you relate to crime, not people, or are stupid enough to think that good ideas, are about bad insights shown. So that's to determine what is naturally becoming of you, and what is an unnatural series of disclosures from what bases are things said, in reference to who, and relevant to what standpoints, your own, or an insight projected onto you, to illustrate another's. I hope that explains my views on punishment, recovery, image, and employment. I know that there is no excuse to reference another crime, and that was not the intent of choosing a book cover on lulu.com, in graph paper, as though in defense of another crime, as though as a known student, there is any relationship between myself, my ideas, my thoughts, or my sense of well being, as having anything to do with anyone outside of me, generated within me, a product of another person, let alone another crime, that would be the thinking of someone in the wrong, not something I am known for, something tested for, whether the natural sequence of my writing is to say the right thing, balanced, or whether its intent is just to sound good but wrong with an inherent failed quality within, coming from someone who is bad, or is harmful to their own health as though about, such as the viewpoints counter to your own, which generally get defended against, if not supported by defenses challenged, and thats basic to speaking, ever word gives insight, to whomever seeks or is looking for some instability to what you have to say, then attacks your character to bring about a different result within you, to see whether in alignment to wrongs.

[1] UN Women: I am interested in the following Internship positions: Legislative/Educational Advocacy, and Media/Communications. I recently graduated from Thomas Jefferson School of Law, finishing a Masters in Law in Risk Management and Compliance. In my free time Im a top 100 personal development and self-improvement blogger, working on my first self-help book, ranked 16,569 on alexa, a top website in the US. I have always cared about being an advocate to those in need, first training as a college student on a local crisis hotline in Boulder, and later attending Law School and working as a Law Clerk for the DA in their Victim Witness Assistance Program. While continuing my education online, taking certificate courses, and while earning my credentials to do research writing, I would also like to work, and continue to gain real world work experience working in a field I have always been passionate about, womens issues and maintaining the peace. I even became a member of Brady, while taking break from Law School, to become an active member in the fight against gun violence, by creating my own website for discussion of all issues, occurring, in the aftermath of violence, and how that has affected the way in which we communicate and come to understand each other, our cares, and what work can be done, in order to prevent anyone from falling through the cracks mental health wise, when it comes to having more compassion for themselves and others.

[2] Court Mediator: I would like to apply to the position of volunteer court mediator, as an ABA certified paralegal with a masters in law in risk management and compliance from Thomas Jefferson School of Law. In my free time I built a website blogging, working on my first self-help book, and now ranked 16,569 in the US. I have always been in support of the recovery of others, just as I have been sensitive to their needs to grow past trauma, I have also done my part to overcome whatever setbacks I have encountered while recovering from trauma and mental health issues associated with self-harm (such as over expressing myself online and not maintaining a professional tone while addressing all matters relevant to my own identity separate from associations mentioned or not mentioned). To me the best way to be heard is to write, share, and learned the hard way that's its not always important to post for the public, not unless its something that could benefit others while interpreting in what way my experiences are at all relevant for the purpose of mentioning the experiences of those I knew closely as a family. That much about you will always be misunderstood, your intent, your tone, and your timing, we don't always know everything at the beginning and sometimes its not until later with experiences that we come to better understand our own experiences as well as the experiences of others. We do not all achieve success at once, and sometimes its in getting to know more about one another, that this become less of an issue later on in life, when matters get revisited or brought up upon meeting you online and hearing your story, and how it compares to the experiences faced by others who have also been directly affected by the same case and circumstances. There will always be information about yourself you can choose not to disclose, and if at a later point you encounter difficulties, it no longer becomes appropriate for you to be a representative of the issues. This I have experienced first hand, someone who grew up in the middle, and as my career progressed online, this marked a change in the sensitivity to the issues upon addressing me or how I have come to identify myself as separate from the lives of others more recently known and associated. When there is uncertainty with regards to the issues or whos side youre on, this can affect treatment of you, and its only been through writing, book writing, that I have been able to both share my story and with respect for the experiences of others, not make my issues of issue to anyone else who is a member to a case or organization for that matter, who I have supported throughout my legal career, for as long as I have known these families, or the organizations I have worked for. For these reasons I think I would make a great court mediator and dedicated volunteer.

[3] Endeavor: It has come to my attention that Endeavor is seeking a Content Assistant to the Co-President at your offices in Beverly Hills, and I am excited to apply for the position. This may not be the first time I have applied, but I assure you no disappointment professionally, and assure you that I have come to terms with my own image, rehabilitating my good character professionally, while overcoming difficulties in life. During my time away from Law School, finishing a Masters in Law in Risk Management and Compliance, I found time to work in Film Distribution, promoted to Executive Assistant at Adler & Associates Entertainment Inc, and had the privilege of working with Ms. Adler and her staff, while I was on probation for a misdemeanor following a lawsuit, which involved communications post pitching at idea at an open invite found online to a Tech Studio Q&A, and Mixer in Downtown LA, an area of town I'm not that familiar with, but attended anyways, dressed to the nines, in hopes of meeting people to talk about what I was doing, building a website, how I was helping, participating on social media, and which memberships permitted me to care, and how I was deciding to demonstrate that care through writing. I finished my first draft or my first book before beginning the internship and have not published anything yet, other than the work I have published myself on my website online, building traffic, not a paycheck. Today, I am ranked 16,569 in the US on Alexa and 95,385 worldwide compared to other websites of all industries and representations, a positive representation of myself and my later associations online. You can't go back and change time, or make a better first impression, and when you let one person down, it seems as though the entire team gets let down in you doing so, this I have experienced myself, the expectations demanded of you and the need for one to meet the expectations of others professionally. I have always done my best to report, often times the middle man in crisis, the one who people speak to first, or who initiates discussions about whenever there is a need to share equally how one another feels, not to be alone in the process of recovering from trauma, losses, or misunderstandings. It is to my knowledge that so long as you believe in yourself, no amount of hardship you endure should ever become the problem or anyone else, including your bosses, who wish for you to do well no matter what the odds are against you in life, overcome those professional hurdles, to be trusted, and lastly respected for your work ethic, and the care you demonstrate through your disclosures to not revisit harms. I am very proud of the website I have built, it contains over 2 million words, currently being submitted for copyright, to protect my best interests and the best interests of all topics discussed by me, including those mentioned. I'm aware that no matter what is set in stone, it is always my life to live no matter what things look like, no matter what positions are taken, and try to remember that it's by what you look like, that you are ultimately judged based upon whether your story has been beneficial to know and whether knowing who you are, has if at all benefited the understanding of others, when coping with their own issues in life, irrespective of whatever you have gone through personally, or publicly. Although it has taken me time to recover from my own past, I will continue to make my best efforts to continue applying, while in observance of my own progress, seek acceptances more than any need to be fulfilled socially online, continue to try and be apart of society in a professional way, in which all parties are mutually respected through the exchange of knowing one another, not just by association or job title be cured of any defects concerning my public image which has been impacted by what has been shared about me in my own words, and what has been remembered about me in my own words, online. I now know, that what occurs professionally happens for you in life without the necessity of people needing to know you personally in private or in public to decide whether or not to accept you, know you better by those means, such as messenger, which is an unnecessary form of communication unless to build trust. I have attached my resume for your review, if you have any questions or concerns please contact my Attorney Richard Sudar (310) 277-4112. Thank you for taking the time to review my application, if you have any questions or concerns, please let him know, and do my best to keep my distance here forward from all entertainment professionals and political figures on messenger, unless to support them, absent minded my own needs to be loved, known, admired, or trusted by anyone I do not know in real life. Keep my goals realistic, remember my place, respect those who have worked hard to be here and known, and not spoil the good fortune of being found online, a popular read online, ranked 119,367 on IMDb upon joining for a professional measurement of notoriety for name, concept, depth, and identity, a pen name ("character") I created on the basis of all things loved, not based on all things lost in mind. I'm sorry if ever my thinking, placement of ideas, or communications were ever misinterpreted to be in the negative, as though without personal experience or story relevant to a later manifestation of terms coming to be about my life or serving to represent where I'm coming from, not in attack of other people's places in life, company names, films, songs, anything else produced by any other person, without knowing me was never assumed at any point in my career as an academician a source of insult, never.

Being High Caliber ...

Let's face it, I mean if we could all be high caliber we would be, but its just not that way anymore, that perfect LinkedIn Profile, job after job, work experience that sets you up for every other future opportunity made available to you, sometimes we don't always continue to move upward in life, and when you reach your limits professionally, that's when you think what can I do to up my credentials, and be more like the person I want to be in life and feel fulfilled career wise. Whether that's going back to school, continuing your professional education upping your skillset for credits and certificates, there are many ways to improve professionally its all a matter of research, some things aren't told to you in life and that includes what you can be doing better in life. So hold still, don't freak out, everything will be okay, there will be jobs in the future, it's all a matter of balance, its mostly to do with who you are that acceptance comes. Never stop setting goals for yourself career wise, Ive always done that for myself, its not just something that people with bipolar do to continue moving forward in life, but if you are having trouble getting going or getting started, then by all means yes, it is something you should do to get back out into the world, and begin again. The standards today can be overwhelming, thank god for the price drops in clothing, especially since rent rates in Los Angeles are scary high, I don't think if I ever consider anything in terms of money if I would be able to survive, that's just too much pressure. Im just trying to make a paycheck. So that's what blogging was for, getting going again, and if possible get paid doing something I love, while with goals in mind to go back to work, as a paralegal, not to be red carpet famous, or achieve a following through modeling or videos, I think that much about you gets experimented with, I guess that matters too.

Things Will Get Better ...

So thats describing mental illness, its not fun stuff, stuff you should usually talk to your doctor about not stuff you talk about out loud, if that makes better sense to anyone now, Im not sure if making more sense now even matters. You can talk about it or you can not, thats taking everything into consideration, and everyones feelings into consideration, then making a decision for yourself about whether its worth it to share, and if you decide to share think long and hard about what would be appropriate to share from your life, not be so in the moment about it, not blurt things out without in depth explanation and background information, that much you figure out later in life. For the time being what may feel good may not be good for you in the long run, and thats the lesson with social media, it may seem like a productive use of your time, but if you dont consistently communicate in a professional way, it may get mistaken for addiction, instead of being in your zone of improvement, making progress thinking wise, not talking about the same things over and over again, revisiting issues as talked about, as though you have not touched upon subjects well enough through your own experiences to know what it is that has gone wrong in your life, let alone by your choices others feeling as though you have done them wrong in life, and thats what happens when you talk about your sex life, as a woman, you get made to look grose, they label you the offender, and everyone plays victim to your blog, as though you being worse off is ever a good enough excuse to think, I think you kind of get well or remain sick, and then thats a choice of deciding to get well again and not play victim to choices or circumstances in life, thats growing up, whether or not anyone respects your story in life, or feels empowered by you having known you, thats a choice later to discuss anything in the negative with the risk of cutting off connections to your past, or the people in it, and yourself not feel good about it talking about it, thats making things a problem that are not a problem when everyone thinks you have psychological or developmental issues, something wrong with the way you look and sound or your social skills lacking, treated, dont let anyone get the best of you, they may be no better than you are at handling mental health issues, so be compassionate even if no compassion is shown for you, the fights not over until its over, is when it comes to you staying alive and well be your own life force in life, thats being strong, not being made to be about internal struggles ingested from people passing through your life, as though every person you know is apart of you, thats normal to have empathy and compassion for people you know even the ones who grow mad at you, were mad at you, or later decided not to like you, not pleased with you, so who cares if people dont like you, everyone has their own lives, and thats why mental health issues are tough because if your life was never bad then your condition later doesnt make sense as having to do with anyone, and thats sometimes how people would rather have things be, you not knowing anyone famous, to have a story of your own, absent minded those directly affected by the past as mentioned, which is the problem with stating your associations in life, being made to not feel good about myself, or forced to address the conditions of others before blogging, what could have been done to protect associations from harm, not subject them to harm, by any lifestyle or mental illness suffered later in life, needed to be overcome to explain how it happened in that way but did not as a stay at home student, sober and chaste. So no its not me pretending to be good thats the problem I am good, its when Im bad drinking, or relapse, or date (have sex), or on messenger or by phone (nude photos asked) that people think youre on the wrong side of the tracks on your way out or appear as someone with nothing to lose as though your threshold for pain is high its not Ive suffered gravely and have overcome sickness on my own through running and writing built a new life for myself and now getting married as planned preservation by me, to not devalue myself or be made to lose trust or respect from those who valued me who did not wish to see me photo online and subject myself to attack or disdain from anyone on my way up in life to getting a job, never forget where you come from is the main point, no matter how desperate you are or at a loss for words never react in a way that subjects yourself to harm now or later on, that will you never forgive yourself how you were made to feel stupid and then made yourself look stupid online, that takes years to undo, 6 years to recover from online defamation posing nude, something I have overcome once and will overcome again, not matter what it costs, no matter whether I have to write 2 million words more, no matter whether I have to write 5 more practice books before publishing one book, and no matter how many good ideas are made from any of my thoughts and ideas in life, was the point, not to be read and a bad idea about who I am or who my family is be thrust upon me in life, disrespect, mental illness, physical illness, embarrassment, or a loss of hope to me or any of my fans, who with no offense to me, dont want to see that, dont care to see that, dont respect that, dont understand that, and are not sexually attracted to me because thats not what my blog is about attraction to a physical body for sex, its about wellness, not needing people to feel good, feeling good on ones own, and not becoming too reliant on others for direction in life, to get back into appreciation mode when the wellness flows around you and everything feels special and then lastly you feel special again thankful to be here no matter what odds are against you, worth it.

Don't Be a Let Down ...

No matter how painful it is to admit you have not lived a perfect life, have struggled (whether that's addiction, alcoholism, or through dating) come to not like yourself, and not be proud of who you are, that's no reason to stop living life completely as a consequence of not feeling good or not being made to feel good about yourself, no matter who accepts you or does not, its always your business to improve. Life gets difficult. Sure we all have problems, some believable, some unrealized, and sometimes without empathy and compassion are few rejected on the basis of who they know or how they share their story not deemed to be one of them, deserving of a second look, a positive opinion, or given the benefit of the doubt. That is a tricky part about life, if you feel like you should do something, step in and say something, or whether you are going out of your way to care, and have compassion for others, and try to problem solve yourself or how to help make things better for others, that's putting others before yourself, a risk you take when addressing a situation or set of circumstances in life you feel in your heart should not continue, whether or not it has anything to do with you, is a later repercussion of caring, be assessed in terms of why you care, where you were in life, what you knew, and have or have not thought about, your impetus to care, and your decision making abilities as they were before anyone passed away, before any pandemics, and before any breakups, as you were, presently able to help others why or why not, and what later prevented you from doing so, and what happened in your life, that caused someone to reject you, not hire you, or not text back. Listen we all have our own lives, people have pretty good lives, earn a wage, date, go out, social, have friends, careers and some of us do not, whether that's a difficulty in life no one has compassion for thought deserved, always keep things in perspective when it comes to comparisons, duties to report, inform, or notify something you recognize about yourself, to whoever may care, that's doing your due diligence, to aide positions of trust, not to create a position of trust through your connections in life, as though that's a privilege that should be automatically respected or believed in, that's the misunderstanding as a victim of homicide, that one who was raised to get along with others, never speak badly of others, never to compare, and work hard that life ever became easier as known, in fact it actually made life more difficult and painful, with the expectation to be someone who felt good even when I didn't feel good, or appear as someone who feels good because of who one is, I think now given Im half-Asian, and COVID originating in China, the fact I left a Tech mixer with someone Chinese who invited me to dinner attending alone who was an anesthesiologist, means anything secret as though by ones story one is connected to events occurring as told, I think you write and in a cohesive way share your story, and sometimes its not until after things happen, that you are made to disclose in a more permanent way, what it is about you, that has caused you to think that something else is being related to your story as told, as though the happening for events adverse to the condition of others resulting from a knowing of your identity and the use of your identity to share their own story in life. To say something about me, used by someone else, means that if they were not liked carrying something about themselves that had to do with me by identity or name, means that my identity as used, makes one not special as thought, but brings upon bad luck as misidentified as bearing a characteristic or trait of someone labeled "criminal." The delay in respect upon speaking will always be why now, for what reasons are you sharing and what hope will that bring to others as they reflect upon the past, whether that's yours or theirs. I think in timelines I may have not described my life in a way that was accurate, making myself look bad, as though for reasons of pleasure went out into the world expecting that much in life, if you're feeling good others will be made to feel good by you, but never as talked about, that always makes you look worse, as though you've ever benefited in a way positive from sharing about who bedded you and was not the one. So let's agree to disagree that I was not the one for them either, and that it was a waste of my time liking someone who liked me, and that through discussion of liking others or crushes, it was me that should have known that because of who I knew, or doctors seen, that that would eventually be the quality about me by association that people do not want to be associated with in a public way, including who I am now. That's the sad part about blogging, that difficulty of shared happiness with people from your past, I'm sure more than half are proud of me and themselves, mostly because life is not about me or any one person, and there should have been no reason for me to struggle in life had I not gone out, drunk, and dated anyone from the bars as though that was okay to subject myself to casual dating, or the risks inherent to not being in a public relationship with someone monogamously, but only on a temporary basis seen per. By the time something bad happens to you, that's just another looking stronger than you, and that's sad, if you don't have a job, it's not that anyone is trying to look better than you, it's you that made yourself look dirty by your own choices in life and that upon looking dirty or losing your beauty in life not respected. It may take forever for you to get your life back on track, to realize your potential, to remember who you are, to begin saying things in the positive again, to forget when you were hurt and why, to not think about if you were hospitalized fathom the reasons why, or get caught up in what others are doing business wise, and think that it ever had anything to do with you in the first place, or post pitching a campaign, as though for personal benefit to look like a bringer of trust, or re-establish systems of favoring identities, as though my identity was ever not favored, sometimes good things happen, when occurring on their own merits, based upon the wellness of thoughts of those in participation in their respective industries, where jobs are, and then there is figuring out what went wrong, and trying to reinforce an existing system of thought or production that does not make those existing within those systems of trust, feel badly about any directions taken with regard to content, that's a big job left to professionals who are in service to make others feel good not feel bad for them, or for the past, or for anyone now, who has yet to appreciate how far everyone has come, and without reminders about how long it has been since everyone was well not working hard. If everyone knows you and you don't know them, allow people to make things about whatever they want things to be about, upon introductions, I don't think that forgiveness ever occurs for public figures, if not smart then, and not respected then, then at no later point will respect occur for someone who is a writer. Just continued exclusion, so if you can't work, don't write, and if writing blogging is your job, then keep going, it's a matter of what your life forces in life are with or without knowing if someone was ever suicidal, that's not something you can later be forgiven for, viewed as "selfish" if before anyone even knew you to begin with wouldn't have mattered anyways if I died February 2009, maybe only to my friends, my boyfriend, and my family, all of whom were at peace, minus me, threatened by a blogger who demanded my family to speak, which at the time scared me then read a few articles, a relayed message, an attorney's website reviewed, made a few calls, interviewed my parents, and that's what happened to me. Give it time for someone's entire story to be said before you pin point what causes a suicide, to me I have no idea 2009, was on my way to Law School (rejection letters), applying (UWLA and Glendale School of Law last minute Spring 2009 after being Hospitalized), studying for the LSAT a third time (Spring 2009), drinking alone at the bar, if I didn't feel well then then talking about it now, is not making me feel any better, that the problem with talking about what happened. It's you verbally talk about a moment when you were physically ill, by alcohol, or dating, and then you feel physically ill again, which doesn't explain whole story or not having been supplied, cannot reverse not feeling good about yourself, or getting sick again, that's the problem with discussing what happened out loud. Then people want to bring up from your life who dated, approved or not approved, whether you had guilt would knowingly hook up with anyone who did not like you, or who would feel made fun of for hooking up with you, and whether if you were not liked at any point in your life, were later responsible for anyone not feeling good by you, to not even like someone, if you were not liked, subject them to not being liked also, of course not, never to the extremes as they are now held to what I have said when, compared to how I sound now, say that I got what I deserved in life, as though I've ever subjected anyone to harm in writing, or rationalized bipolar to be normal biochemically in the brain, leave untreated why I take meds, and I don't date, and limit my exposures to what I read, what movies I watch, try to live a good life, not sex based, I stopped dating 2014, and that was my choice to preserve myself for marriage, that's not because men are dirty or because I was made to look dirty, that's simply because its not approved to date, and if not approved to date, not to. That's with respect for your family, not being too free socially, not venture out into the world, trust anyone new with your life or with your body, that's not because they expect more from me, that's so I don't get hurt in life, trusting the wrong people, and I later learned that the same can happen to you in real life, made to feel sick, which is not like 2009, not like 2017, a far worse pain to address being made fun or blamed as though I have not suffered or been done without attraction, hurt me out of respect for someone else who is famous, and not be kind to me as though I have not ever faced difficulties as known too just not so newsworthy to be mentioned, probably not even if I died end up in the paper, as ever having existed as important to anyone, that's fame, just a blurb about you, so figure out what matters to you! Never give up, no one has it easy in life, remind yourself less of what hurts, be prouder of who you are, forgive more often, don't look bad to not make others look bad, have some self respect, and hold your head high, the less you try, the shorter you stand, the weirder you look, the more guilty they think you are, and when the skies the limit in terms of guilt, they can really make you out to be anything they want you to be in life, just to not make you have any potential to live a good life, that's the good life, kind but unforgiving versus a bad life, mean without remorse, think by wealth good health was handed to you not earned like everyone else making good decisions for themselves, and whats the frustration the magic of feeling good, being made to feel good, what good reasons for feeling good are, and whos trusted to do so.

So lets not bring the house down, getting sick rarely makes a powerful story capable of lifting others, that's the cost of actually having experienced pain yourself, so shout about it why don't you! Jk You can get through anything you set your mind to, and just like you can convince yourself that things are worse than they are, or everything seems mean, or unfair, at the same token you are what you say, so vent less, get upset less, complain less, be more helpful than not, hook up less, stay home more, don't drink, don't try drugs, don't talk about who you've dated, apply to fewer jobs, don't talk about the past, let things go, don't blame others, don't be a let down, overcome embarrassment, praise more, respect often, count your blessings, keep your side of street clean, apologize for who was offended by your writing, and do your best to move on, without your life having been permanently damaged, and live without fear or threat of adversity to anyone after having been sick and not well speaking (well: in favor of self or with respect for the well conditions of those around you, never feel threatened by, focus on your own merits) -though it all, expect no forgiveness, being where you come from, not speak badly about your life, not unless you are suffering in a way, that should matter to anyone, or does affect anyone, and if you cant save a life do so, and know that your pains are the same pains of others if felt, the set back to bonding or networking, feeling as you do, so never lie about your condition always be honest, and allow people to move on, not build a platform for care for issues already dealt with, and not in defense of any conditions past, that scared you for the rest of you life, if talked about in the negative to designate you to be someone worse than you were whenever that was thought about you in life, just move forward, how to grow up, mature, let bygones be bygones, be yourself. The down feeling occurs (1) by insult (2) sickness in the head, (3) bodily weakness (4) face discoloration (5) energy within, and (6) no thinking in the mind (meaning not hearing anything). Thats how insults affect me physically heard from the body, not in my head, which I respond to in writing.

The General Stoop ...

When youre feeling good, it can feel like an overflowing bottle of wellness, wanting to share the joy of being you with others and make others feel good too, that is when wellness is plentiful. Its common nature for someone who is well to give back in ways, they feel is necessary to help others out of feelings of doubt, or to help shift the focus of others from fears or illness. We are afterall what we focus on, whether or not that's an agreeable issue, feeling causes more than ownership of choice focus in life, there is always time for those systems of thinking to be amended, upon recognizing a new path for understanding without overreliance on the past or history, to indicate the ways in which to think about the times, or review who is in leadership positions be compared to being under the influence of any facades in life thinking created by them to protect others from anything hidden within not wanting to be known to all. I think a general façade of wellness is created whenever the inhabitant to that identity is well, that is upon looking at them in conjunction with whats going on in the world, see them as being a positive indicator of having some leadership role in the changes to the conditions of the people overall in tune, its when someone is not in tune with others, that leave others feeling left out, unheard, and that can be painful to address the struggles of others, when some are well and some are not, and have no idea why they are not feeling well. There must always therefore be a careful balance between the ways in which people are made to feel well and apart of known within or recognized as having a quality of communication that speaks to their concerns in life, enables them to make sense of life in a way that they begin to feel again the beauty of recognizing the wellness in others, and no longer threatened by the changing conditions of those who fail to see the beauty in the wellness occurring within, while wellness is a recognizable trait in others currently held by them, that doesn't mean that everyone is in sync, it simply marks the coming out of a condition of sadness, that's feeling powerless, and when things get better, means there is a hint of possibility for wellness in the future a better condition to be reached absent the current conditions of the times, miscommunicated within to be about, or contingent upon people alone. When a source of wellness outside of people exists there is power in that, when the environment around you feels good, that's wellness, having appreciation for the conditions around you, not threatened by those changes, and when you are in control of your own condition, nothing around you if so cleverly changed or tweaked to be about something you identify with, will not have the capability of misdirecting your thinking to be about things you'd rather not know about a person. That's the underlying trend, occurring in someone's progress, whether the choices they are making are leading them to think better thoughts, and while having better thoughts about life, that feeling or sense, making sense, can be viewed upon a reading current of someone's thoughts. That's the kind of stuff that gives hope for the future who I'm sure will just make a timeline, and then pick and choose what to like, without thinking too hard about how things are made and when. Im not an afterthought to the success of others, I signed my corporation papers July 26, 2016, and launched my website posting everyday beginning July 2019, thats a four year wait period between having an idea, pitching an idea, then making that idea come to fruition on my own, through my own writing, with light reference to the writing of others. later studied by me. So have some respect for people who choose to speak, it's not all about cover ups, set ups, guilts, drinking, relapses, or image, have some compassion for people as people, just as everyone is entitled to an opinion of their own, doesn't also mean that someone who speaks is entitled to the same empowerment in numbers when it comes to facing what people think knowing them. That's not the same, not if you ever get in trouble, which I need an expungement for when the Courts open up, that's an example of something known privately and cause for people not responding to you, and not feeling obligated to respond for acceptances or notification of why you did not get the job, get into the program applied for, or a nomination for an award applied for, that's not only having to do with them, it also has to do with you, how upon review by others, you look or seem, as though behaving or reacting in a way in response to others who are not in your life, whether how you speak about your experiences causes others to take sides, and not even consider you for recognition for what you were able to achieve in spite of COVID. So that's letting the dust settle, a few months of review by a professional organization Webby Awards, and notification of when applied for, post defamation online, and then notification from E News, that it was an award won by Kim Kardashian at the beginning of her career, after already having applied and not having known that much about her. Which doesn't explain why someone would ask for photos and trash me online, as though my family ever looked that way. That's an example of loyalties to clients who have been award winners, and then had I known that not have applied for an award at that organization, if they have a preference for women who are more settled in the careers professionally known in media distributed professionally about them such as in the form of modeling, music on iTunes, TV, and in magazine articles about them. So that distaste, is not just that someone does not qualify for an award, but also communicates through non-acceptance, that one is not good enough for an award, based upon how they led their private life and what was exposed about them, not considered this year as having done anything impressive, despite the conditions they endured, as outted, photographed for comparison as trying to be like, to bring up into discussion commentary to cause offense to who is mentioned, as though they should know of me, and if they do, be threatened by my commentaries, as having to do with them, by promotion, referenced back to, as though by title of how known and by whom, means that I am a latecomer to a trend of insights about life, and that my insights about life, not influential to others, and then not credit me as an influencer to anything. That is leaving someone out of an equation in life, with expected hostility or commentary, so that's a matter of respect assumed lost. I wrote an email to, to inform them of what happened to me personally before I applied for the award, I think in talking about what your goals in life are, people read about, learn about others, then do things to you to make you look like another poor example or choices made in life, or another example of a bad role model. I think the shaming of a woman, to make other women feel better or more normal is a waste of a human life, such as my own life, simply to own a short condition of drinking, and the rest of my life be ruined as though by title pose a risk to the lives of others not a conscious living person, under the influence of a drink or drug, that leave me out of touch with reality, I am conscious, I am not an alcoholic or drug addict, I have limits, I don't like excitement, and I am conservative. I am not someone who wears tight clothes, I have one top, and I have always been myself, I never stalk or look at other people's profiles I don't read up on others or study people, and I do not expect anyone to spend any amount of time getting to know me, then while under inspection if I get sick, then be blamed as though I was the cause for that downward pressure on me, thought about or spoken about by anyone who while reviewing my work, decided to not include me in the image of what is going right, and leave me out of the image of people selected as improved.

And then the Calm ...

By the time it resonates history will have already taken its course, and wherever you wind up, be proud of who you are, and be grateful for the life you have lived, and be hopeful for the future to come. That's not giving up in life, its so painful to comeback from a down period in life, you never really ever forgive yourself, and the more you try to focus on right now, the less sure of yourself you become, its like you forget everything that was going well for you, and suddenly feel like youre starting over again, don't lose steam, its just a bad day, sad difficult challenging emotionally draining, its not your fault whenever you feel that way, like life happened to you, and things suddenly don't work out, Ive been through enough breakups, devastating job losses, and hospitalizations missing in action to know that you eventually arrive back to being you even if it's a matter of time, like a week of rest, we cant always powerhouse through the day from one day to the next, some days are for processing and that's okay, but never get too carried away in your thinking, especially if what you are thinking is not making you feel good within, that must mean there is a better way of seeing things, don't dig a hole for yourself in life simply because youre not feeling well, that's totally not worth shlepping all those emotions over from one time period to the next.

Please Note: Just updated my Autobiography page, with a note to the reader regarding the timing of this book. By now its too late, not having done a good enough job preventing illness, so that just means is not my solution to being at peace with voices or whatever is motivating others to treat me as less than to see if I think Im famous deserve a better life than now. Things are quiet now, I dont think its necessary to talk about what has happened to me, and how that has affected others to have mismanaged my time, while trying to finish my dissertation, I understand that if it can be proven not liked in public, in a public way demonstrated departure from even paying attention to me, if not worth hearing from, is what I feel others feel explains why bad things were happening as though something to do with any representations of feelings which are all normal, its always okay to react when you are not happy, or do not approve of the direction of someone you care about, thats peoples way of being overprotective, thats not that you are not important, it could just mean not good enough to speak to an audience that you have acquired through writing, not think deserved as though youre a tagalong to success.

"Have been away blogging, and remembered to keep in contact on a sober level with who followed me specifically for that, if you found my writings elsewhere I apologize for not being recovery specific regarding the lessons learned as it relates to keeping my side of the street clean focusing on my own issues and not the issues of others, something basic I sometimes forget along the way, not to take the inventory of others only my own, I think thats the most comfortable approach to sharing about your experiences without expectation for anyone to change or understand you, not refer to the feelings of others so much, Im sure there is always a lot of disappointment upon relapse, I have been sober now since January 2019, so over a year now, and proud of myself, and out of the hospital, no recent stays, but that doesnt mean that I am free completely, you never are completely, your past is your past, and so long as you allow parts of your past to eat away at you, and the less you learn from it, accepting the positive lesson learned, then you seem to miss the point over and over again, with regards to what was going wrong for you then, and what is going wrong for you now, not to blame others for your misunderstandings in life and to take responsibility for your feelings and expressions of thoughts no matter how smart it may sound be aware that everyone is going through their own hurdles in life, youre not alone, and to be careful not to hurt the feelings of others, who may be there for you, but not always available to explain to you what it is you are doing wrong, unless you ask for help, not keep things to yourself, what therapy is for, not self-harm and misuse or abuse substances to counter any effects of any amount of pressures you face in life, eventually you have to accept yourself as you are, and have faith that as others come to know you they'll want to know less about what went wrong, and be more enthusiastic to hear more about whats going right for you, mental health wise. So continue to be brave, take everything with a grain of salt, continue to think constructively, accept feedbacks, and dont be too sensitive when others offer kind insights too, its not all about you. The Trouble with Being Cool ...

If you're not cool and don't look the part, its hard for others to be cool with you, let alone trust you, not if youre paranoid, lost, or without positive momentum, to carry yourself through how ever many days, weeks, or months it takes to get back to normal, be without voices, and without self-harm, that much you cant anticipate, and its no different if not writing online, if its something you love to do, writing, then it may be something difficult to stop, anything you eventually become good at, whether or not those attentions are 100% positive you cant expect to have a fully undivided audience of attentions in life, specific to your issues or needs, some people are just to hear from, I don't think all big outings are so politically motivated to bring about consequences in the negative for any one member of society, maybe some easier to pick on than most, such as myself, that's if things are taken literally locked out. So be at ease, be pleasant, and be nice, but don't expect anyone to help you along the way, that's life, people will not cheer you up, or try to talk to you, or ask you too many questions in life, people mostly busy with their own lives, not really concerned about what happened to you, or why you or others suffered, I guess for others its easy to say oh it was because of posters, and she campaigned for Brady, and she likes movies but has only seen a few, and her sister-in-law is Skylar Grey, so she thinks theres a music connection to Eminem she was not made aware of, only until after she got sick, left out. So that happens, by the time you get fully on board, and learn the tempo of everything going on around you, by then hopefully its not too late to pay attention, and not have let too many sick days pass you by. That's getting well, and then there is arguing what it is you've been through why you don't deserve to be harmed anymore or made fun of, not just by your condition alone which cannot withstand any hostility, or intimidation, but it seems the more you share about yourself the more others feel entitled to tell you how it is, as though you are making things to be about yourself, Ive never asked anyone to feel sorry for me, and I think once you lose one fight, you lose them all, that's just how life works, popularity wise. Pushed until left in the dust, either designated part of the problem, to blame, or help contribute to the overall wellness of others, after having observed Fox News for many years, a trusted tempo news group. So its not that I take anything personally, I just think that when you are disinterested in life, people become disinterested in you, and the harder you try, the more stand offish others are, and if you are strong, then that also gets looked at as coming off as too strong offensive not proud, a real company. I think creating a job for myself at home, was a natural step having worked one-on-one with a entertainment start-up Cizo.com, and learned that maybe Tech was the right speed for me, mental health wise, not too stressful, able, a lot to learn, something I was excited to learn about, grow professionally in a field that is new, with not too many protocols or standards personality wise, a place I figured that wouldn't require me to Tweet or Photo, perhaps a cheaper course in life to take, with an education, to me its having fun, not the provocative parts, and its guilts intended for me to feel, is what is thought to be deserved, sometimes in ending one chapter to begin another, you get caught disclosing things from a previous chapter, already punished, and get punished again thinking youre doing the same, using drugs, that seems to be the exact thing on the look out, to justify any prosecutions of me in public by others, who simply don't like me for whatever reasons, see themselves as above me, maybe to see how I respond, I really don't care if the Pharmacy makes me wait an hour, not ready, that's them not me. So please don't treat me as talked about, as though I would ever victimize anyone subject them to the same hardships Ive endured, generally people are more confident than me, that much about me is misunderstood, expecting me to be in a better condition than most, I can only be myself, calm. So those tests I think is over experimentation with your face, not that fascinating anymore to see, and I think by whatever exposures elsewhere, scary to think about, not all things are related, don't be mean.

Personal Update ...

Need to take a break from blogging, have decided to focus on my studies, improve the research aspects of my writing, and make sure to integrate what I have learned to my method of writing, to make sure that I stay balanced, and can make reference to anything I have learned that I have found helpful. Going through a lot, have been more driven in the past, I think right now, trying to be serious, and move forward in life, lifes not all fun and games, and once you get hurt, nothing really matters then anyways. So it's a learning lesson, to get into your questions about life, or to not face those fears in life, and to allow ridicule to happen, that's simply others responding in a way, not congruent to that behavior. So if collectively it is thought that one should not be in any communications private, I have cut back on updates, only through email when necessary, and for all mental health needs call the police, to determine what Im doing well, and what Im having voices about, so they know, how Im doing wellness wise, and always inform them, Im a writer online, this is how Im feeling, to make sure not to affect anyone, that's how on top of my health I am, and an active member of the community around, not so private or standoffish, it has taken me many years to adjust to being around people and not scared.

Can continue to post on an as needed basis, I dont think anything is urgent right now to be discussed, not after the damage has been done, do my best to be thankful with the hand I have left in life, and not make a harder life for myself, looking like something Im not, was once proud of, and not the same now, not after getting in trouble, thats instability, gets everyones radars blazing, aggravated by you, aggressive, its not something to talk about, when people are upset, and how they are around you, thats the neighborhood vibe, not my family, so if Im ever going through something its me processing the past, with a better head on my shoulders confident again, and wondering what took me so long, to sharpen up and which jokes were so favored to set me up in every direction in life, to see who I send books to, as though thats a proper means of stopping a situation from getting out of hand, studied closely in the negative, unfortunately I may not have the answers for those quick judges of character, oh shes off, wrong. Oh shes not on board, shes offended, therefore, she has a problem with others, not cool now. So that was my mistake in not having expressed publicly how I feel about a situation, and that expression was not an admission to comparing a situation as needing to be secretive as though spelling out Jewish letters in hand signals in photos, I realized not to do that, chose to emulate heroes, not tragedy alone.

When Borderline Judgments Cast Over You ...

Wherever your strength comes from and drive, never allow what youre doing in life, to ever have an impact on anyone elses lives, happiness, or sense of peace, that's not being a big deal, its when you are that others become offended, questioning your reasons, whether or not for good purpose, based upon your previous work experience cant imagine you helping others if at a later point in time you are not able to take care of yourself, or others for that matter, is what a negative judgement is for, toward someone with a diagnosis that requires them to be on meds. To me bipolar disorder is disorganization, loss of brilliance, a tired feeling, sleepy, lethargic, more frozen days than days spend going, and every run feels like 2 minutes, but takes awhile to get going, a successful weight loss plan, built by habit over the years, how I was able to lose 22 lbs during COVID when most people gained weight, I gained 50lbs, after punishment, that was me giving up in life, not on track and way off course, as thinner 130s or 120s, the smallest I have ever been in my entire life. So yes I was proud, not that proud, and half the photos taken, are mess ups until a good photo is taken that's with no modeling experience and no bikini experience, not someone who is ever undressed around others for that matter, a prude, shy. When things are not going well, and everyone expects you to talk about things, that's not respecting the privacy of my family, who is not obligated to share my mental health updates, courts stuff etc, if it already disappointed everyone, then why be made to bring my whole family down again with disappointment, if that was the cause for disowning me 2016 nude photos requested for, and 2015 insulted by BBDO on Twitter with a "stick it in a dollhouse ad." As you evolve you realize that people will share their takes, and only if you read into things as having been about you, that upon being insulted they become proven right, as though bipolar is some excuse for some torment buried deep, unhappiness, or anger toward others, as though self-harm means I do not love myself, in fact it appears to mean the opposite to everyone else looking at me, thinking Im full of myself, or well by makeup or clothes, no that's a total wellness, everyone saw, which cannot be replicated now, aging is a process, Im 35, and I wont be young forever, 40 is coming up, and I don't think I want to be in the same place now, as I will be in my 40s, still talking about psychological or psychiatric issues, as though I never had that much about me figured out, until the addiction assumption can be proven, to free anyone from blame for judging me as stupid. I don't think that behaving in a way, counter to who you are in real life, comes naturally, you will be in moments in life, when you do not think you can be harmed, and that's having abilities in life, or the freedom to make choices, and without fear or knowledge of what is already being talked about what the temperature is like, about things, if it was ever agreed upon to hold me in disdain, or to not respect me, for those reasons I don't think its deserved to bring up the fact that I have dated older men, then make me out to be someone who chases men, until it happens, wanting a man, who is not in need of me, who then is empowered, by my worsening condition, who then does that empower, to stick up for whom and why, what about, just to say an argument that one has been holding back, of people taking things too far, or calling me suicidal, to claim that voices is not a real condition having to do with fame, respect, feelings, and intelligence. And nothing to do with drinking or drug use, that's when no one is on your side: mental illness, gone. At this point I think its important for everyone to accept the hurdles backwards, in trying to understand where everything was coming from, theres no such thing as knowing things or knowing too much and then getting sick, as though you are a manifestation of the secrets you keep about yourself or others, no one ever demanded to know that much about you, anyways.

The Minute When Others Feel Cooler Than You ...
11-17-20

The minute you feel like youre the only one suffering never forget that youre not alone, whether reading makes you feel lonely, its not intended to make anyone feel sorry for me, with or without a book club to discuss points in my writing, in talking about me, later develop your understanding of how you think things went down, then justify those times of commentaries, by making a beautiful life look like something else, something provocative, to blame me or my pictures for mistreatment of me, as though I demonstrated a type of personality worthy of being held responsible for things going wrong in the lives of others, I was a stay out student, I never participated online, nor on Facebook, not until after terrorism, after cancer, after I got carcinoma cancer, and after lawsuit, which means it's a good time to stop, so does it occur upon being defamed, means the side misreading you in anticipation for weakness to your story, is someone who is considering as excuse what stories or types of thinking are being played along with, and what makes it so easy to blame someone who is speaking as though one is not doing enough or is the identity that was in conflict or provoked motives in others, by heritage or religion. Which is not why anything, anything made in defense of self or others, or to figure out from where those fears are being communicated from if not from me, solicits for awareness and attentions to a different life, not a life I have lived, and to scare me further subjects others to a version of events that maybe didn't occur in that timeline, or orderly fashion of reporting, or running, or when an attack took place, that's not for the public to punish someones later expressions of strength following misunderstanding, to be an ill-willed or pathetic admission of responsibility, following a trip to DC.

Hello Everyone:

Just reached a new goal realized upon staying well online, $1 Million + in value, means maybe a career in the future for me to blog for a paycheck, which is very exciting for me, to have made my own job.

This website is dedicated to my family and friends, companions over the years, and for everyone who believed in me when no one else bothered to take a second look, "the skies the limit" if you take a more humorous approach to life, minus all the seriousness that you encounter along the way, its doable! So live life, be strong, convince yourself your a robot and lose 50 lbs, show up everyday, and stay sober if thats what it means to those who cared, and never wanted to see you struggle to begin with.

With love always, whether Im winning or losing, its important to never give up, and to continue trying, setting your standards high, not by creating limits for others to think for themselves away from trouble.

Sincerely,

Leslie Fischman

Pick Up From Where You Left Off ...

We all have bad days and sometimes those become the moments that either make or break you. Its easy when youre not feeling well, to explain yourself, whats more important is how you are making others feel, not to explain your thinking or the causes for your own mental health issues. If you want to make the pain of others your own pain in life, well then that's your choice. We all go through some form of addiction in our lives, whether that be a positive addiction or a negative one, and that also includes your thinking, there comes a stopping point, when you stop making up excuses for your own disabilities in life, and eventually get going again, no matter what meds your on, no matter what your diagnosis is, live life. This can be hard especially since you've been convinced your "bipolar" or an "addict" or an "alcoholic," terms that leave you feeling less than confident in life, know that your not alone, and to take it one day at a time. If you have control issues, it can be a tough uphill battle managing your emotions while handling criticisms of you, why are you not working, why don't you have friends, how come youre not dating, it may seem at times that some may feel "incapable of remaining in control when mania and depression reach a certain intensity." [1] And that's simply not true, you are always in control of your emotions and feelings, and just like anyone can convince you you are something you are not, taking their anger and frustration out on you, don't allow anyone to get the best of you, no matter how sided the opinions become toward you, about how you lead your life, whether you are in a respectable condition, or have reached a point in your life to which others should be proud of you, you may not always be the judge of that, so stay calm, be steady, and continue to do your best, no matter how difficult the times become. For example, for many years I struggled to work, and it was not until I started blogging that I found myself again, the person I was when I was in law school, a hard worker, not someone who was ever emotional, or needy, someone who was independent of others, and finding your independent self becomes the biggest source to your own empowerment, as well as with hope to strengthen your ability to please others, get jobs, and work again, sometimes success on your own, doesn't prove to be an accurate indicator of where youre headed in life, at least not to whoever is not pleased with the results of you blogging, and in the past not having been able to get a job, explained. For me blogging was a means to clear the air between my disability, the past, and what happened to me then, and not make now another excuse for not doing what Im supposed to be doing, now I do a better job of getting help when help is needed, and not leave everything to myself to figure out on my own, with more guidance think and try to problem solve, without allowing things to get out of hand when it comes to reporting, having relationships, and moving forward with my life. So yes blogging is how I got smart again, I mean I was kind of smart because I got into law school but then I didn't finish my JD which means that I kind of couldn't stay focused and complete my goal in life to be an Attorney, so I continued my studies anyways in a legal research and writing focused masters degree in law, an MSL instead of a JD which is needed to take the bar and graduate, so that's still an option for me should I choose to transfer units from my other JD to a new school online and graduate with a JD, this may take time, only because I cannot afford to finish my JD its very expensive, and I need to start working and start a career for myself, which is why I have started applying for jobs again, and have an interview next week Im really excited about at UN Women, I actually wrote cover letters this time specific to each job applied for, and it worked. I also applied to American University's School of International Service, I am waiting to hear back from, I also cannot afford, unless I get a Scholarship, we'll see.

That's Just Life Never Strong Enough ...

That's just life never strong enough to take it from all ends, and that's when you get F-d over and over again until you look and feel like a man, like that's going to make me any stronger, or my story more compelling to hear from someone in a down position is what becomes of you, turning into some obnoxious example of what it means to come from a good life, everyone's lives better as compared to you, and its once everyone seems innocent compared to you, is when you are not empathized with, that's everyone giving up on you, don't allow hostility to ensue, and be the one to blame for one another's sufferings, as though you were the person looked upon, as not being with it, and because you were not with it, everyone knowing you, doing better off without you ever becoming a happy well adjusted person in life, that's not being with it, not with it, and also not considered a member to the people, who are probably tired at this point, expecting a better reaction from me, upon questioning, that you can't go back from, having done someone wrong in life, and that's when everything you do, looks or appears to be something that brings others down in life too, as though you don't help preserve the innocence of others, as though knowing you corrupts anyone to think like you as though you think in the wrong about others, that's what it feels like to be me, as soon as I get well, everyone hard on me, and then once everyone is hard on me suicidal and slamming my head into walls and doors, that's not being an offender to anyone's story in life, that's having offended myself, to protect whose name in life, injure my ability to be myself, if its too late its too late, and with distance, creates pain, to whoever in good times would've benefited from being able to speak to you when you were well, in the years that you were on point, now its yours never awake enough to see everything coming at you, that's how you get treated in life, like some accident waiting to happen, or someone who by their own direction in life, misleads self or others, not smart enough to inform any decision making of their own, including your own, so that's losing in life, to family, friends, exes, and now even strangers, what to do with your life then, when you're made out to be a loser, a wannabe, someone trying to be like, a competitor, or someone not smart enough to help others, or to even hold a job, and work among women, an interview next week with "UN Women." Just as I had described as soon as I am being gifted an opportunity to move forward forced to stoop to lower levels in life, and be left with nothing, that's not sabotage, that's others not thinking highly of me, and not wanting me to take a job in which others think highly of me too, then where do I belong, if it is not believed to be a good website, then why should I keep writing, if everyone is making me feel like I'm doing anyone wrong, or doing the wrong thing by writing online? Once you get nos in life, and are forced to change course in life, then what do you do? Work, I'm certainly not going to do nothing, and I would have worked for family, but not if I get sued, and if I get attacked and treated like I do others wrong or pick the wrong teams in life communication wise, for that I'm sorry, it takes time to be a strong person, and apparently I'm not strong enough or wise enough to not meddle or try to get things to stop before they get out of hand hate wise, and that's just me, if I'm not scared I say something and probably to my own detriment, I don't believe that I should be the butt of any jokes nor my family, who deserves to live a good life absent minded me, and pain to me, has caused them pain, and making me take embarrassing photos caused others to lose respect for me, think I'm some hot head bimbo, who is trying to make money online by the way I look, as though its an imagined lifestyle clothes and makeup, as though because I didn't try hard enough then, then making up for it now, makes no difference as to another's deductions about life, health, wellness, beauty, and intelligence all of which they found out for themselves having witnessed all the changes I went through focused on themselves knowing me, becoming better versions of themselves, maybe even looking like me because I loved them. That's having people in mind, who you have in mind, know, then you learn to be yourself, no matter who is watching, that much attention I could never anticipate, so hurting me, so that I don't look like anyone, and then hurt me to say I look like someone else I'm watching is not understanding the human, mind, body, and heart, which is comprised of what is thought about and who is thinking of you appear, which is why fame is difficult if you don't know who you are can easily lose face, faith, and purpose, disoriented, which is what makes it so challenging to see clear under all the pressures of being known and all the faces watching you, all the minds taking into account how you feel and how you look, be a composite that represents those faiths and beliefs, not become something you're not, and be a pain in the a$$ to know. When evil is around, that's a generalized fear of your surroundings, which causes most people to stay home, also known as unwanted associations, not wanting to be watched by something or someone who does not favor you, and that's what is being made an example of me, someone who loves me, turns on my family, and then expects to continue on communications to make me look like a traitor or someone who is befriended by someone with a pre-judgment of my family, who does not love me, nor can be trusted with my mind, body, and heart, be used for some alternate purpose to cause me or my family harm, which is taking things too far, which is why I'm going to court on Monday, and why I filed an Appeal with the CA Supreme Court, because I had a great idea for a website, I built it on my own, its doing well absent minded COVID, deaths, suicides, and drug overdoses, not bringing anyone down even as discussed which means there is some truth to what I am going through, and just as people don't want to be brought down by others in life, similarly I don't think that I should be caused sickness to better tell their story of how they went from having it all, to losing it all, and die before anything came to be, apps, etc. I understand that if I self harm that is a scary fact of life, that if you F up in life you lose all support, and by what is viewed by others to have happened, you get put down in life as though you brought that upon yourself being sexual to an account you thought was the President's no that was me being me, then someone wanting to see me naked too, so showed more naked photos, and what's so shocking about that, seeing me as a woman. I sometimes think everyone just wants someone to fight why they put me down in life, and I don't think that makes anyone else feel better about themselves or what they have in life, life is short, but it doesn't need to be made shorter, than is necessary to take the time to pause, and take a step back, and not hurt someone who is not hurting you, just to see what they look like in public fighting for their life, and for the lives of those they were made to seem traitor to, not later explained of forgiven, which is the reaction sought to cause suicide now to test whether I was telling the truth about 2009, which was thinking without supervision, and no advisement, under threats not real only online, and then think about the rest of the world and everyone's sufferings, apologize that a war was fought overseas in order to protect one's own Country from going to war on each other, and allow everyone to resume living civilly without blaming one another for doing things that maybe felt good then, and maybe don't feel good now, but are only seeming to be wrong then, because its not the same stuff that makes us feel good now, there are only so many people to focus on in life, to make up a new identity, that if you hurt those with famous identities, you in turn taint the identity of those who have come to find themselves through proper management of the popular identities that have helped each of us individually learn to love ourselves and feel apart of. And yes I can hear that, when one is not well and hearing anything to justify a hate, being ridiculed to see how one feels if someone who admired them no longer respects them whether that causes me suicide to not love myself, yes that does cause me suicide and pain, to not love myself too. So learn when to stop, allow people to continue to work, and don't meddle with the past, use the past to hurt people as they are now, make responsible for those losses, or losses in faith then to them. Means establish your own sense of faith, whether that means being away from everyone or not it was worth the risk in writing my best, than die suffering alone at home doing nothing with my life hearing voices and punching my head talking to myself. Which is what they wanted, someone who was friends to look well, or someone who was friends with pretty girls to look pretty, and not be considered one of them, I'd rather be dead, I'm not having friends for the rest of my life, I'm not dating for the rest of my life, will work and stay home, since hate has agreed to watch me suffer in public and to not live a good life, I don't need money from anyone, I'm keeping my website, and I'm going to live this life whether you like it or not, or think I deserve to live life. That's living my life, not being selfish and dying, just because I don't feel like talking to anyone, at least I have a website.

Always Be Well Spoken ...

There's the beaten and there is the damned, I'm choosing to be neither, this is the time where no apologies are due, and when forgiveness is sought, from the one betrayed, or the one at odds, to which neither side becomes benefited by, from a talking through the terms of unwanted acceptances of one another to begin with, this presents a very painful difficulty in life. When one cannot move forward, and at the expense of the other, is made to look worse, for the other to look better, so that everyone turns on you, that's to not be trusted in life, not the giver of insights, and not by trusted means able to speak, and that's a painful fact of life, that once someone is done with you, its because its too painful to talk to you, just like its too painful for me to talk to anyone who is not inspired by me or thinks less of me, that's an unrealized fact of life, being past the point of forgiveness, when you are suffering, and at your own expense, become the receiver of pains in life, not by your own doing, but situated to take heat from others, as though you were rightfully denounced to be some lesbian to the interests of mankind, a doer of love, not a receiver of love, or a taker of love, not a bringer of love, and that's how someone who is not loved is made to feel, that they don't deserve opportunities, they have not tried for in life, and become the keeper of the consequences of losing love, become the enemy to the hearts of others, who learn to forget, not to forgive, who are trained to harm, and terrorize for information, not to wait and allow people to come forward when they feel the time is right to share what it is they went through, without having to go through the same demeaning tasks, for respect in life, made to feel like someone, who they think is jealous of, jobs, nationalities, whoever came up in life with a stronger faith and bond than anything I was ever afforded through intimacies or education, simply not good enough, and that's when it becomes painful to do anything your heart is set to, what's the cause for your own improvement, thought the misery of others, or what's the cause for your writing, not the bringer of peace, or what's the cause for your mental illness, letting who win, and who is not to be forgotten those who gave you life, who will not tolerate what was done to you, the choices you made, and what you were made to look like by them, that loss of respect so deserved, and that's what it feels like to not be loved and to not be trusted left with nothing in life to live for, and nothing in life to be proud of, that's suffering, whether anyone recognizes your pains or disability as suffering, to not be as sharp as, as intelligent as, or as strong as anyone else, who never had to stoop to the graces of hate, in order to ever be respected as having suffered any wrongs in life, brought before the court for review, which was what just happened to me, whoever it is, and forever it was worth, that was real happiness shared, and that was real heart given, and that was real love demonstrated, and if the times become intolerable to me, it's not me making up whatever I struggled through which was not made public online, times I've slammed my head into walls hearing voices, times I've been in arguments punching my head, times I've heard voices trying to go to sleep punching my head, times I've taken handfuls of meds just to sleep feeling like giving up in life, or times I could not write and forced to talk to myself, to get myself going again, and talk some sense into me, no matter how I felt, no matter how many fires there were, not fall victim to the words or senses of others about me. That's life, no one cares if your strong, no one wants you to be strong for them, and no one wants you to write online, if you seem like someone who is not on board with the happinesses of others until they find themselves at odds with you, leaving you with no one to console you or support you, who can be loved then, if not me? So what makes me different from others who have died, not being able to say how they feel and wanting everyone to be happy with where we are now, is that I'm 35 so I still have a life to live, and it's way too late to undo the struggles others went through in life providing a good life for me, for any of them to be blamed, causes me sickness, and that's when you are found to be in the wrong, when by your choices you are made to be something you are not online, and then also feel frustrated that no matter how much work you have accomplished in trying to make things right, are not given an opportunity to work again, and defy the laws of bipolar, sickness, and suicide, preferred to stay home and do nothing or blog, is what seems to be the preferred state of being. Like anyone is dependent upon me, for a change of heart, or thought daily, that's allowing people in, and then allowing them to feel harmed should I give up in life, which is how when you affect a caretaker, those cared for are made to feel, hurt, injured, embarrassed, or at odds with you now, how those on the outside of your home life are made to feel empowered, getting not only everyone to turn on you disfavorably and not see you as a human being but also cause those in your life to give you a hard time, as though they are supposed to suffer the same odds that you were put through in life, and no it's not deserved, and no my condition is not a joke, and yes I was raised to be spiritual and no that does not make me a medium, and yes I was ordered to go to therapy, and no I don't need to talk, and yes I was bullied at home but that was because my face and demeanor changed to look like something I was not, not talkative, quiet, immature, scared, or unrealized of my blessings in life and where I was proud, in law school. I was not raised to be above anyone, I don't treat anyone as below me, I'm not a sexual person, I don't date (only in my 20s), I don't go out (only Spring 2013), I don't drink (only 2006 and 2013), I don't give blow jobs (only 2013), I don't need a JD (I can represent myself without a JD, why would anyone want me to represent them, when all they do is put me down in life at this point, therefore I cannot get married because my image is questionable, an embarrassment now not a source of pride, with sexuality in question attraction to man or woman who is perceived to be nicer to, upon connecting treated or rejected as though a sense of peaceful juncture, is a communication of awkwardness or masculinity as recognized, to be a source of disempowerment to other women, not empowerment, an unwanted interaction). So forgive me for not being more social, I think being on social media, was being social, without the drinking, sex, and drug use, that much I can skip in life, it's not for me, especially if I was a public figure, that doesn't mean at a later point in time, I can live a private life or a secret life, that's the pain of being known, everything about you known, from childhood to now shared, and when someone puts you down as not having reported to the courts, that's because your purpose in life is deemed to be a consequence of something you have done wrong in life cared, not a consequence of the wrongs committed by others decided to care, and that's the pitfall of caring when no one else is publicly ready to care and by what means seek to establish a different conversation that doesn't cause pain, and more losses or suffering, such as blame or inherit any risks involved to become associated by following, to any words shared as making people apart of lesser groups in society, which is not my fan base, who are mostly nice people with nice things to say, I think those who have envisioned a different course for me in life, want to see if I suffer and die by the same means (business: Britney Murphy), (DJ music: DJ AM), (misuse abuse or relapse: Whitney Houston), (world peace: Buss), (everyone the same: Eminem), (Clueless: Aliyah), (deposition: mymollydoll.com), (courthouse: Santa Monica), (job: the government), (presidency: Hillary Clinton), (house: Justice Roberts), (accountant: David Letterman), (Ex and Ring To: My Brother), (Friend: Matt Bauer), (Transferred Schools: Crossroads), (Comment After Fart at UWLA: The UTA Bomber), (Cleared Airspace: LAX Airport). So please be careful as though everyone has not done their best to be made stronger if ever while making fun of anyone they either sought to empower, be role model to, or inspire likewise to just go for it, and be an "IT Girl," I don't think its always in the cards for everyone to be remembered fondly, and sometimes those who get noticed, are sometimes for bad reasons before any good reasons arise from knowing someone, and that's how you get remembered, hopefully for something good you have accomplished in life, not someone who was strong in spite of losses, then be punished as the founder of any faiths that let anyone down while I was in law school, not going to make it then, or not going to make it now, I don't think I was ever the dream not then and certainly not now, therefore no one needs to be put on blast, for whatever kept them going in life and feeling apart of (yes, I heard Chelsea Handler share leaving a fire), and yes (Red Cross followed me), and yes I paid tribute after the first fire (in the Valley), and no I didn't give up, I was still awake functioning not under any pressures in life was already writing in my computer and assembling a book, which was later put together an self published by me, a memorized f-ck up in life not waiting for Jay while hearing voices, and going on Tinder instead, while he was in Texas, which is why recently an Ex did me, after hooking up with a roommate, and then told me about it afterward, to see how I would feel having been done wrong in life, whether that made her an offender to my story, like I was made out to be an offender to Jay, which is not deserved when two people are not together, and when it takes time to be together, and one another not approved for some reason, that's no one seeing the value in your relationships with men, and Im not a woman who is strong enough to live alone, I have always wanted to get married be loved and have a boyfriend, and not in the condition I am in now, can take care of others, I can do my best, but if I go into pain and suffering, then that's not going to make their lives any easier, and then Im home stuck in my room in pain, and not able to work, that's because its viewed as insult being able to work for someone but not your own family, and its not that I don't love my family, but my problems are far to big, for them to be personally affected by, although they do have fun watching me work, because Im so intense and get a lot done, that was the show for everyone else, not the $hit show I was made out to be in Hollywood, or at Bungalow, or Qs, not myself, and had I known in advance what I looked like and how that made others feel, then I would not have been out in public for others to see my face and body, and energy and wonder the same about me, why I was mentally ill, what caused me to be mentally ill, and how I thought that I could help in spite of being alone, still be able to do the right thing and report when help was needed 2013 to SCOTUS.

When Energy is Lost ...

There is quiet time, and there is quiet time drained, drained by something you hear, that does not suit you, nor reflects what you are doing presently which is working, its like sabotage, whenever you experience a force or a threat upon your sense of being seeking to rid you of any wellness, or be the benefactor of your own progress, be so welcomed as a member, or similar party to devastation fires, Fire on Tigertail, Fire in the Valley, and Fire in Malibu at work. If you think you are the only one suffering you are sorely mistaken don't hurt me, as though I have not done everything in my power to get things going in the right direction again, and contributed to forces working against the general health and well being of society, who is dependent upon stability not fighting, and whenever fighting is occurring, figure out what are the causes for that energy being directed toward you, and who was it that you were recently with, who caused you to be weird, or for something to be made wrong with you, not compelling, not innocent looking, seeking to villainize you, making you watch the Movie: Batman 3, like that's anything I should be scared about, what was made, and how things were made, and to be about what in life, be so influenced for the worst. What is bullying? It's a manifestation of anothers need to scare you in life, as though you have something to hide, or guilty of something that cannot be proven, well if there was anything I have said in two million words that was not damming, then maybe I would have been viewed in the million from IMDb, unfortunately we live in an immature society, based on take that's or take this, in life, just to see how strong you are, measuring up to greatness, or by default great all on your own, with general comparisons made to those who have to valiantly demonstrated superiority to others, femininity wise, through modeling, and by living a career oriented life to have families of their own one day, that's not by my directed so succeeded by by their Mother's direction they have succeeded, and if they are not on board anymore with being on TV, maybe that just means that there is too much competition, and too much pressure, therefore not enough interest in continuing to share their happiness with the world, in a way, that both benefit, that's when the odds are been directed not just toward me, but to everyone who has shared tehir story, becoming vulnerable to a loss of respect occurring when someone who thinks its easy, not unique to stand out from amongst the rest, as I have, that's on your own merits, not even Nicole Richie is that famous, she has been featured in magazines, but not with a lengthy career to date to make her a person of noteworthy power to the masses, shes lived her life well, absent minded all the unnecessary blames and hardships that get so encompassed around anyone who gets thrown up top, to see how others fair, for better or worse, about the same things in life, that's I think is true, we all care about living life, then what is it that causes someone to not live life? Is it us? The fans? I think its more to do with maintaining your skillset that leaves you feeling above, not pushed below the surface in terms of issues, deemed mature relevant and reliable manifestations of the issues, and instead be brought down by your own philiosophies in life, not having yet lived the term of an entire movement so dedicated to making other people feel good, such as through music and film, there is nothing faulty about a demonstrated effort to articulate the issues, whether or not is a blockbuster hit in your mind, it was made and it made money, therefore fit the present terms or need at the time for assignment of ideas and beliefs held by others, all unnecessary puppeteering jokes aside. If an identity is composed of love, then its by whos love that makes up the beauty within a person, and which types of hurt hurt the beauty within, to so justifiably manifest an ugly distate from others upon looking at a human being, that's exactly, how controlling others are of your health these days, and so resolute about it, with whatever confirmations they can find on social media to denominate you as a useless effort toward peace, or a tireless crusader with guilts, you know had I not told my story, then anothers persons story would not have been valued as relevant with kinder insights to the later messaging of its currents in relationship to the needs demonstrated by the times, to hear from something other than hate, or a simple minded crusader of person interests, to figure out beauty, sexuality, likes, and popularity, I think Im much more than that, whether or not anyone believes in me, to have written in a memorizable format that makes so much sense, so much sense, that not even Im needed to think the rest of the way. That's how selfish people are, given a solution, then blame a solution, as not being sensitive enough on its own merits, or claim that one was ever discriminated to begin with, based on what they look and sound like, a later happenings post hate, a disagreement to oneself, upon looking in the mirror, lack of recognition for self, yes that's hate, and that also doesn't equal a ring, you are doing no one a service putting me down or out in life, simply because you don't like OJ Simpson, hurt me the same, because you do not think I deserve a job, love, respect, or positive rapport with family, cause things to go wrong for me mental health wise, just to take a jab, if you needed to punch me in the face about anything, I'll gladly slam my head into a door several times, until you can't feel me at all, since my presence was not honored as going out of my way, to include someone in my life, then that just means to get a job, finish another masters, and move to Washington DC, and provide for myself, without a social life, without romance, and live a bigger purpose in life, to help others, that's not geared toward people trying to be heard through me, as though I don't treat people like they matter, if they can survive without me in their lives, then why put me down with me in your life, to see how others respond, where's the growth in that. I don't need anyone to hurt me and do society a service not thinking Im gonna make it, do something wrong and then hurt me to make me look like I do other people wrong, then Im never having sex again for the rest of my life, find better! If no one ever stopped you from being happy and earning a living, what makes you think its okay to hurt me and stop me from getting a job, which is where I am now, leaving one chapter in life, blogging full time and managing a website, and starting a new chapter in life, working, and hopefully stay well enough to reintegrate back into the workforce, now that I get interviews, means that I fixed whatever was wrong with me, appearance and by sound and face, and reputation, and that I have defied the laws of defamation, which seek to cause an inheritance of pain to whomever it is caused, which is why I am going to court on Monday, because Justice Ginsberg died, Justice Roberts fell ill, President Trump got COVID, and my Father got sick. While everyone elses solution, is taking from me, I have built a better life for myself, and will prove it in court, and officially be the opposition to those cares which seek to validate themselves by causing me mental disturbance, until Im slamming my head into doors, to make themselves feel prouder like they have done a good deed getting rid of me from where? Life. Its everyone first inclination to blame whoever is speaking, as though I have ever been hurt and when hurt taken out any of that upset out on others, I keep my side of the street clean, I own up to my own defects (bipolar), and I know I have not been able to get a job (why? Because Im not trusted because I do not have proof that I can work hard if just given a chance, none were afforded to me, which is why Im online). That's not demonstrated knowledge of the code of ethics when it comes to decisions entertainment wise, those are their secret and I have my own, each working independently of eachother, so how dare you criticize me, as though I ever subjected them to harm by any of my later deductions, or even subject audiences, not having understood any patters for wellness in life so created by them for us to enjoy and be privied to exposure to their gifts in life, in music, face, and entertainment, wellness and paid for wellness, by the institutions that protect their interests in maintaining identity for employment, not get hurt by other systems of malfeasance, to injure ones opportunity in life to do well, because sabotaged was a justified action toward me as though to make me responsible for bombings, as though I did not report with enough time to spare, to figure out where impetus for hurting anyone was coming from, what finish line is disturbed is my own timing in life, so someone else can play normal, and then cause me to say things to make what they felt normal as having been coming from me my own fears in life, or be responsible for the displaced emotions of others onto my head and body, make me look guilty, and then team up with everyone from my life, to put me down in life, like my life affects theirs, having made a successful blog. That's just how people are, if theyre not on board, declared mentally ill, and if not officially working for the government a traitor, and if if mentally disturbed accused as not being able to take a joke, to blame me as having had an understanding for things to be about, and not having been happy or complimented to have had anything be about me to begin with, I was never an unhappy person, and maybe someone saw to it, that I be made to be an unhappy person, not achieve to see what becomes of me then? A Website. Why Justice Ginsberg flicked off too in a photo, that was to imitate the bomber who was pictured inside jail flicking off the camera. Don't treat me like I'm not aware of what everything is about, everyone blaming people for taking things too far, if anyone took anything too far, it was whoever turned on me, and waited for me to become lost, or lose intelligence, my own voice, so something worse would be made out of me, and destroy all my progress. Which is why I'm going to court on Monday. Why because I don't deserve to be prosecuted and thrown in jail because someone explains to the court that I am something I am not, a drug addict, or a sex addict, or someone of less than: gay. If I could be nothing, that's exactly what I'd be, I fractured my hand hitting my head in the bathroom (outside the shower) it hit the shower handle by accident. If thats what it takes for anyone to see themselves as stronger than me and simply back off, not create a equation by use of my body and mind, to generate content to suit themselves, via taunting in public or private to be made a public announcement of bullying one-on-one, Id rather jump onto PCH (which is the retort sought thinking I slammed my head into the wall and made a hole in the wall to communicate something not in writing or an indifference to movies or characters, Ive always supported everyone, what the f-ck are you talking about?) I can write, I don't need to die, just to say something I cant say, and if you have a problem with me, then take it to court, and prove it in front of a judge, that you think Im "retarded" and if Im retarded that means you trying convince me that my luck online is imagined or does not good or benefits no one, then don't read my website, and stay away from me, and don't call me once a year to see me, on Monday I will never see this person again for the rest of my life, stalker or not, make no mention of this person, who wouldn't care if I died, how low he thinks of me, trying to put me in jail, and cause me mental illness by taunting so he feels justified), and f-cking die? What for if I have lived this long, I certainly can live a few years longer and get a job. I never ever assumed I would be misused by anyone to tell another persons story, hurt me to make someone else feel good, and that's being a woman, you either are treated like one or your not, their competition, not feminine enough for, or treated like a type A person steam roller in life, like any wind in my sails puts anyone elses wind out. Stop hurting a good life, to make another example of a bad life lived post success, Ive had none, I haven made a dime in my entire career, not a cent, how dare you say, that its me that provokes anyone to harm others, how dare you! Provocative naked or not, its not my mind and body that causes anyone disgust, its your mind and body that feels disgusting compared to where Im at in life, then live a better life! And that's letting them win! < [HERE]. (Example: telling them something they want to hear: hate). Ive come too far, and have learned so much, and have had so many good days, just to ruin a good life, by someone who thinks it was my life that changed a Country or made them sick, then blame China, and don't blame me for being half Asian, and dump my body in the street, just because you think youre the only person mad that everyone got COVID, if you don't see me on your team, then don't put me on another team of blame in life, if youre so f-cking smart, what the f-ck are you doing with your life to help others, why cause me death, suicide, mental illness, and create fighting toward me, and then claim victim, like Im someone who ever f-cking cared what you though anyways about me, then Im moving, and everyone can take care of themselves, whatever f-cking gay movement was thought about me running at night, or some "taking back the night" like I was crying rape and blaming anyone who loved me as being responsible for me becoming suicidal, its simply no one accepting me as well, and if I cant make it and get a job, Im not going to die in the hospital or jail, I can die at home. That's how badly everyone is trying to hurt me in life, because they think I made money, I wrote for free, ask the internet the basis for that value being placed on my website, and don't hurt me to make me not of value, so that I don't feel good to anyone, so that I don't make sense, so that everyone turns on me, as though its me that is the reason that Im not taken seriously in life, well if they don't like me then don't like me, what the f-ck do I care, I can write anyways, how the f-ck does that affect anyone anyways. I owe it to myself to stay well, how dare you hurt me, when I am providing a voice online, something to read, and cause me to hurt to see if people battling COVID get hurt too, just to put some numbers or deaths on my record, like I would ever convince anyone that a good life is not worth living for. How dare you! #stopsuicide

When You're Feeling Tortured ...

I don't think they get the point, your either in this Country or your not, and if youre not a fan of someone, don't let your defensive minded campaigns, rule all your social interactions, I don't need a spokesperson, I don't need an attorney, and I certainly don't need any enemies in life, that would be wasting a good life, and at the expense of all my hard work, challenges, and efforts, not make it to a stable place in life, in which to represent myself and others better, that's what is meant by giving your power away, people thinking that they have the power to sue you, like your under in life, listen I don't need you to put me under, to tell me what kind of lesbian I am (I am gay because the men I dated did not stay and because I was not good enough for them, now something they hate, so dont call me a fraud like I never loved anyone, I gave my heart to my boyfriends, its not my fault if you cant find better), to cause me to hurt inside and out, and cause me suicide, as though I never put my friends on pedestals to begin with, never a leader, or a follower, benefiting from anyone elses stature, or hard earned effort to be themselves, so don't go on treating me like I am no one with no friends, you can take away form family, boyfriends, jobs, and the money I don't have, and Im still a number one website, why? Because I am loved whether you like it or not, and want to blame your condition on me, as though my bipolar is contagious, bipolar is thinking OJ Simpson's story and the 9/11 Story are connected by Puff Daddy, whos pool I swam in on Star Island, that's Bipolar. And for those reasons, committed suicide, listen there will be many unwanted connection made in life hearing from you, or knowing your story, that's doesn't mean that anyone apart of your story should be loved any less, maybe its just the road to fame they don't think you can handle why respect of you is lost when looking at me, you have to be really strong from the journey to be watched by all known inside and out, that's looking at you and being pleased with how you look, and that was by my education, so do me a favor and don't use me a face bar for your mental health, and read my work to perfect your own face, means stay away from me, don't turn on me, and then hurt me, like Im not a provider of valid insights that have caused others to feel well, or told anyone anything to cause them to fear society, socialization, or political figures. Had I known that Hillary Clinton wanted to win, then maybe I would not have been focused on Rand Paul and his Candy bar joke, (Movie: Heavyweights), how dare anyone sabotage me in life, and prevent me from getting a job or having a normal life over a political loss as though if one shows their face would not defend them or explain for anyone who is not longer here, whats so irreversible about hate, the wrong people up and the wrong people down, with no leadership in between means that those who are down, have been intended to be where they are at so that no one can help them but God, including their parents who have given up on them, and exes, that's a sadness within others, I cannot explain, and that's an anger within others toward me I cant explain other, that they cannot be inside of me, and that irritates them to not be able to get through to me, and be read by me, and hear something I have to say to make them feel better or give them their power back, after humiliating me, or sending hate texts to me, like I should be scared of them or anything they have to say about me, you all lie anyways, and claim victim to me anyways, like my story is too hard or too difficult to see the positives in, as though I have not suffered too been suicidal slamming my head into doors, trying to figure out the causes for voices, there is nothing that can stop anyone from stalking you, and wanting to be heard through you by watching you, and that's why my numbers are so important to me, and why ICANN controls my audience and only they know who is watching me, because others think that it is me, that is changing people, to be running around town, and feel not as strong as everyone else, its because you put me down in life, is why you don't feel strong, and hurt yourselves, having identified with me, which is what everyone else is trying to figure out who to identify with in order to bring them strength and solace during times of need, not lay things up in life, like dominos, toward me, so that others can identify anothers struggle in life (like I didnt call the police on Sunset three men ran at me and I sprinted to report them and three men were arrested that night for attempted kidnapping etc), that Im not a party to. Consider it a privilege to know me, and a blessing to not have been able to get a job given the economy. And be grateful that I do have a website, instead of committing suicidal, stuck in a bunch of thoughts and voices, that will not make sense until I start putting some heart back into my life, which is my website.

The Police Just Stopped By I Called ...

When everythings your fault, and you can't explain what it is you owe to your parents for having sheltered you from these types of attentions in life, you cannot go back and make up for lost time, but you should also not be left on the losing end of the stick, when it comes to who has benefited from knowing whom, be so affected, including a benefit lost, which was provided to you, to ensure your safety and well being, and then be hurt, so that you are not able to provide a similar feeling of safety to everyone else in your life, including your family, and those you love. Its been pretty intense energy wise, which is why I have backed off from writing online, mico-managing my own emotions, just to stay afloat, its not been easy, in worse years I was in bed all day comatose, and not performing, not even under any pressures in life yet, there was none. It seems once you begin performing in life, that's when the pressure hits, and if you have not been able to manage voices and figure out the causes for voices, then you run the risk of becoming schizophrenic just like the rest, on board or not, angry, or apart of, or indifferent, and I don't think that that's the solution for wellness, a togetherness that demands being heard from in order to be trusted, people should be able to make moves in life absent minded you and what you are doing in life, but also don't let other people down, when they are expecting more from you, that's how easily fanship is lost, upon a failure to direct during a time of need, or even worse, allow them to convince themselves right about you, by the comments they project over your head and through your head, to cause you to believe that what they are saying is true about you. Listen if we havent talked long enough online, to know I am me you are you, then there is nothing you can do to change my mind about myself to become a better version of you having known me, then destroy me and all my progress made thus far toward getting a job and building trust online, that's not allowing anyone to get the best of you, by not threats or uses of force, injure your ability to speak well of yourself and others, and when so threatened explain from where you are coming from in response to what energies thrown at you in life, that's just some people, by the book including your books, then giving you a taste of your own medicine in life as though you did not write what you have written or coming from a different person inside of you that's not you, that's someone thinking that success can be transmuted between people, a singular person, transferred within, to produce a result within and to the mind cause a clearing of issues, that's inheritance, your blood, who you trust, and who you know, makes you who you are, not a person, not an idea, not a book, not a set of beliefs, there is no one way to live life with respect for the lives of others, and its when you become threatened by the lives of others, that's yours becomes lost, second in importance to the lives of anyone, who in disagreement of you, seeks to project a series of words descriptors to describe you and your website, that's not valuing you, valuing your life, reputation, or identity, that's someone benefiting from knowing you, and being allowed into you life, watching, in the peace of their own privacy, doesn't get involved to help you should you be experiencing psychosis, or shortness of life fears, those are they not in your life, who often times will make you feel like you could've lived a better life, you are always living the best life you can live, and no one is to judge anyone for the way they live their life, or so choose to love who and why, including those who have come to trust them in return, that is what creates peace of mind, not someone knowing your story better than you do, its you coming to understand others, and to their benefit, understanding yourself better, to be loved and appreciated. I was slamming my head into the door, because its hard to explain to my parents that I was not the one who betrayed them or ever misrepresented them, and always kept my problems to myself, including whatever abuses I ever suffered, as a result of others threatening me like I had a big head, on in law school for the wrong reasons. No one on board successful, just like no one on board struggling and keeping it that way. Im going on court Monday to sue the person who asked for nude photos, and in return made me look like a sexual person, or someone who was looking for companionship in a sexual way in private, just because of one lawsuit, to make me look like that's what I get sued for, having intimate relationships with people online or in real life that are masturbation based, and the other had sex with me, and then turned on me and threatened to sue my family for every penny, and didn't seem to care that my family is struggling coping with me and my mental health issues over the years which has been depressing to not be able to be myself and be successful and get a job, too many issues, in public, and too many issues privately now, hearing voices from people trying to connect to me, to be heard from me, as though that's how a person is represented by things that people tell you, sticking to your frame of mind or general sense of purpose derived from your heart, information that makes sense to all, that's my intellectual property, that's my heart, that's my brain, and Im getting a copyright and its not to benefit anyone, who is running arguments counter to the existence of me, in order to prove their fears correct in not trusting me or my manner of study or intelligence derived from focusing on what issues mattered most to me, my family, my friends, and my companions, who I trusted for long enough to separate from everyone, and realize that I need to be independent of everyone, and get a job, and provide for myself, which was the plan to begin with, make money on my own, and not rely on anyone for help or assistance with earning a living and providing for myself, while helping others. It seems all I do is give my power away, whenever I get attacked, and that's what they want, entitlement, thinking I have something they don't in life, peace, I think peace is something you create for yourself, a general happiness for self and others, that cannot be circumvented by hate, a tolerable level of advocacy and distance from energy or words that don't make sense, how I protect myself from harm, steering clear of anyone who doesn't have those things down in life, and begin hostile toward me for having things down in life, and performing under pressure, and able to speak for myself, without causing harm to anyone reputations who doesn't wish to be apart of my life, that's on them, not me, and so long as I get attacked to build a side toward me, that's to benefit who is hurting me, to then get everyone to turn on me, like a movie fantasized about: Salt.

The Beauty in the Positive ...

6 months to a year ago I was nothing, just an idea that never came to fruition, a jazzy pen name, with more negative innuendos than any positive insights that could be born from such an expression of thought, thought to be about someone else, or something else, not of my own making, and then you come to be. That's being nothing and then becoming something, theres nothing intimidating about that, just someone no one thought you were, smart, smart enough to rise above hate, and strong enough to be insightful without bringing the house down and making it just about yourself or your own setbacks and sufferings in life. In the beginning I would post on Twitter, which looked more like a "snapping" "Charlie Sheen" joke than anything relevant, or a "quotes" campaign or style of writing thought to memorialize "Johnny Cochran" who died of an aneurysm, after defending OJ Simpson, therefore me in law school as Sydney Simpson's best friend was just a joke to anyone watching, looking at me like I was trying to be something I was not, or even worse, not include me, and hospitalize me for 30 days upon his release seeing myself on TV in the hospital, that's being left out of any equation for peace in life, making gun violence about me, so that any effort to combat gun violence, would be viewed as in defense of my own identity, as though I ever spearheaded any movement against men to begin with, or teach women to value themselves by not putting out, and give love to one another instead, I don't want to be gay with any women, nor do I expect any women to be nice to me, and think that Im being gay with them, Id rather be alone with no friends, and no boyfriend, and no children for that matter, its too late, Ive been hospitalized 9x bipolar, and I don't think that is in my hand in life, to be married have children and to have a new life, its work or nothing and Im not sad about it, no dreams shattered as of yet, just a new beginning. So when you get to the top of any game, whether that be in tech, blogging, writing, or photography, just be yourself, maybe its that your bringing something new to the table, and exciting person to watch and to know in life, just as your boyfriends semi admired you or not, or so chose to admire other women in their lives, in spite of whatever it was you were going through they never thought relevant to how you looked, who you were with, and why you lost your beauty, while in love, I mean who does that happen to anyways, not something I ever thought would happen to me, thinking about someone else in life. So be yourself, I have had my own share of struggles, much to do with appearances and intelligence more than to do with anything social, either fitting in, or not fitting in at all, what is cool anyways? Someone who makes sense or someone who does not make sense, someone who everyone likes, or someone who people question, someone who makes others feel good, or someone who makes others feel badly, someone who thinks positively, or someone who causes others to see things in the negative, for whatever its worth, if Im too late, tell my family Im sorry. So where does beauty come from, its not a shield, or is it, is it an attitude? Maybe. Is it thinking well of others, most certainly, for everything beautiful is a reflection, within, and outwardly to those around you, like a halo, an image of the world, that encompasses as feeling to be had, about you and about others, which upon connecting to or with, makes others feel similarly beautiful in its presence, a quiet acknowledgement of wellness, which to anyone who is not made happy about how they look and feel threatened by, to bring about a different set of characteristics or traits in you, to your face, and to your spoken language and words, reflecting the disgust they have for you, the insensitivity they exhibited toward you, and with reverence for themselves, an unlikely duo in time, or match, a better than or worse case scenario, meeting of the minds, to bring one down to bring another up, and exchange of luck, what dating in law school was like. Someone who is better than you, will always see themselves as better than you, and that's why you are not taken seriously in life, or respected, thought to be about something else in life, proving yourself right or others wrong, and it is on those basis that others seek to attack your image, your face, your body, your feelings, and your demeanor, to denounce you from any positions of importance when it comes to trust and likelihood of success determinants, not including knowing you as being someone who brings positive thoughts to the minds of others whether or not that excludes you from considerations to begin with, as having always been a good person, from always having meant well, from never having intended to cause any harm to anyone elses understandings of the world, and to never waste the time of others so caring for you, its is for those reasons I have decided to be alone, why? Because if my work is not of value to anyone, and if I am not of value to anyone, then I should at least be of value to myself, and so long as they keep stealing from me work when Im at the top, explains why I created more work of value, or irreplaceable value, online, my writing, and in words became of value to others. That's living life for yourself, and for others, seeking to benefit not harm the sense of others, and not intrude upon the very things that make them feel good or feel whole or be loved, that's by who is around them made to feel safe, that's a sensible exchange of difference, to see someone who is well, who is not in need, not take away the trusts of someone who dependency on them, created the very energy toward me propelling me to one failure after the next, treated as an afterthought of beliefs, from the sufferings of others, as though all our sufferings are connected, woman, man, child, professional, doctor, attorney, or judge, to what lengths must anyone go to prove themselves right by proving any one person wrong in life, is surely just wasting their energy in trying to describe a harm that has occurred, and only lending insights to allow that harm to occur again, bullying. Its by what you say others come to believe is a consensus opinion of you held, whether by one, or a few, and then to all, sought to occur, so that one could be compared to someone like OJ Simpson, who everyone loved then lost respect for, hated, well I am not him, and I was never famous, and I have always worked hard, and life has not been easy for me to say the least, nor should a game be made, of identities, to hurt mine, and say that I don't measure up to anything intelligent, or worth a read, that would be putting me down, in favor of others more deserving of attentions in life, which is why my femininity gets attacked as being gay or masculine, to kick me out of a gender admired, women, in favor of a more tolerable pose in life, which would be to fight among those looking for a fight to see how I measure up in comparison, someone who threatens others when upset, or someone who is not seen that way even when upset so threatening anyones sense of self, the only thing scary about not being on my team in life, is not thinking like me, and not having my words make one feel better about themselves, that's when someone does not work for you, and doesn't improve your condition by what they have to say, that is when another person who knows me feels better to you talking about me. That is the strength in knowing someone, no one talks to, getting to be the person who gets to talk to everyone like they know me, when I don't even know them at all now, different. When you love someone, you never see that coming, the side of them ready to fight you, like they had it in them the whole time, preparing for the very moment, you decide to leave, or to focus on yourself, as though anything you would have to say thereafter, would run counter to anything they had to ever say about you or about life in general lead others to think like them. Whos the bigger person now? Man or woman? Who is the insensitive person now? Man or woman. Who do we empathize with now and read? Man or woman. Whos insights shed the most light upon how others are feeling? Man or woman? From where do thoughts come from? Man or Woman. Is that Man reading woman, or woman reading man, and whos heart is in the middle of that deduction? Man or woman? Think before you speak, and that goes for thoughts internal as well as thoughts external, which all are affected by, always think positively about those in your surroundings no matter how mad they become at you, sometimes seeing you later on Instagram doesn't make a difference, even if they hear you sing, still have nothing positive to say about you. So learn to roll with the punches, returning my glasses tomorrow, had already exchanged them for a black pair, by Prada.

All They Do is Scare You ...

When someone from your life threatens you, that's to put your light out, in preservation of their own light, that's not wanting to see you shine, or be well liked, preferred you not coming to be, or realizing your own potential in life, speaking down to you, so that you don't see the light of day, or come full circle and rise above. That's out of their own insecurities, making things about you, then trying to convince you that anything is about you, when really its about themselves and how they see the world, and what they find humorous, thinking everything is a joke about you, well if it is, where are they now? And where are you in relationship to those beliefs held? Any better? Consider it forgotten, and whatever gets rehashed, is them not being done with you, going back for more, as though their esteems in life depend on it, they wouldn't know a foul connection or criminal connection if their life dependent on it, that's them on you, not you on them, is the misunderstanding, everyone thinking their perfect, and at your expense sympathize with them or where they are at in life, not a present party to their own misery in life, and that's when you need to step away, someone you used to be able to share joy and love with, whos interests no longer serve you, that's them wanting control over your well being, and putting you down in the process of putting themselves down, making up an effect, until it occurs, in the opposite toward you, everyone looking down upon you or your family, and that's not tolerable, that's not deserved, and I don't care how rich or successful you are, no one deserves to put me down, as the butt to their jokes, in order to suit themselves as above you in life, so deserved. Therefore Im spending the next 365 days writing and publishing everyday, until my Wesbiste is moved to Wordpress, and begin earning an income for content, and donating all the proceeds to whichever organization I so choose, maybe even to the US Supreme Court, if they take donations, since it is their opinions that control and govern the rest of the opinions held by each Country member, fairly and squarely, not on a personal basis over who has dated who, loved who, and who is the better catch, put the other down, as though hooking up with me lessens anyones chances for the picking, you know what it actually improves your chances of being picked is the thing, everyone who has dated me able to move on without me and have a career. Therefore, I will continue to write everyday job or not, and earn another million dollars by the end of next year, create a website worth 2 million dollars, that's for me, that's for everyones peace of mind, not be disturbed by social politics, or death and dying, blame anyone earning a wage, for the repercussions installed by hate, and the misunderstandings corroborated by sides, and mistake me as the enemy to any valley, city, or Country, be poisoned and put down in life, that's not deserved that's not a joke, that's not an offense I take lightly, and that's why Im going to court, because you guys have it all wrong, everyone making money, and then treat me like a threat to society or to social understandings of hate, fires, gun violence, and floodings, its not my fault, anyone in charge was not believed to be in dire circumstances trusted, if you don't believe in who is successful and earning a living, with appreciation for the work that has been done, then don't ask God why youre not feeling well, and put me down as though I deserve to die too by COVID, stop spreading guilt, and blame where none are due, you never know who everyone is attached to, or knows, who has made anyone a living part of their lives, matter to them, alive. If you guys had a proper handle on things, then maybe I would not haver blogged again or built a website, but since things were not going well, I decided to write books, one after each fire, until things became peaceful again, that's you guys not seeing the bigger picture, and attacking me as though Im responsible for helping you become a member to your own Country, don't cause losses in faith in me, by bad mouthing me, and take it upon yourself to play hero, emasculating me, and defacing my face, because you think it's a funny play on posters, a shootings, that's not correct to go through my things, and think that anything in my memory, is a secret its not, I tell the courts everything, so everything done to me, is in support of whom, someone who just wants to see someone powerful, or able to earn an income suffer for what, your sufferings not liking me, Im not even in your life, to be wrongfully accused, of anything troubling you have been through without me knowing you, that's on you not me, Im staying home for the next four years or running, and getting a job, and continuing to post everyday, until the hate rumors stop, and until no one has power to defame me, not send a text, not be loving toward anyone in private, no one deserves it, but the courts and whichever political institutions I have supported over the years on CSPAN. That's doing my city a service, and not be dismantled by anyone, who treats me as though I have ever created problems for anyone, how so? I keep to myself, don't suddenly attack me, like I have anything to do with your own happiness in life, that's not my fault, leave me alone, leave my family alone, and do not come back into my life, to prosecute me for whatever fears you have in life about shootings, fires, and floods, like I haven't done everything in my power, to restore the faith in the people, so that no one passes guilt around, and so that no one makes anyone else feel bad, for being themselves, and liking what they choose to like, even if it doesn't include me. So don't go full power threaten me like Im scared, scared of what? And if scaring me is a joke about my sexuality, then don't fuck me, and prosecute me, like I ever caused anyone to drink or lose their mind about things, convince yourself of being a hero, and treat me as a villain, for whichever women in your life, you hold so high, even higher above me. This website was made for me, by me, for everyone, so everyone can see the big picture, move on. -Dropping 50lbs again (-27lbs), court appointment is on Monday.

There are so Many ...

11/26/2020

There are so many unhappy people in the world, don't be one of them. The holidays are here, and there is so much to be thankful for in life. And although things may not be perfect, that doesn't mean that youre the only one trying to put their lives back together, following devastation, some more sensitive than others, its mind over matter. When someone gets personal with you, take a step back, acknowledge where they are coming from, recognize your part in everything, and don't engage with anyone not on your team in life, whatever it is they are feeling theyre not feeling you, which means don't respond. That's life, some come to know you and support you through all your future endeavors, and some don't wish for you to live a single day without them in your life, that's just how they are, you are either in my life, or should be suffering without me in your life, that's another thinking that your wellness was ever dependent upon their love or support for the time being, that's taking from you what they think they brought to you in your life, as though anyones love is that powerful to change anyone for the better, not especially if theyre not on your team in life now, that's for personal reasons, hurting you in public, just to see what you have to say about them, no one needs to be mentioned no matter how aggravated my circumstances become in life, I always see things in the positive, and if someone is not made to feel well by me, well they brought that upon themselves not my doing. As a blogger you learn to accept all people in your life, and even acknowledge that there will be some people in your audience not on your team in life, reading for themselves not in support of you, Im not sure why, but its probably to do with building lawsuits or trying to get money from me, none of which I have, I don't have any money, and I can barely afford the Attorney who helps me during times of need, or advice. This is the moment where you either allow everything to break you, or you come out a stronger person in the long run, that's where I am at right now, I can either let them win slamming my head into doors, punching my head, suicidal, or I can rise above, and let go, and not allow myself to be affected by anyone not in support of me, or my writing online, as though it has anything to do with them, everyone wanting credit where none is deserved. Its only because my website is worth money now, that anyone wants to be around me, suddenly, because Im popular online, that's doesn't mean that they are going to support me, or treat me any differently, and that also doesn't mean that I should feel the need to sue anyone, or pose a threat to anyone competition wise, over the order of importance of issues and priority when it comes to who is serviced and cared for, and who is forgotten, and made out to be something they are not, a lower class citizen to the successes of others, as identified. That's someone who never saw you as important knowing you, did not acknowledge how special you were and how hard you worked just to get into law school, and when the odds are against you was not there for you, did not try hard enough to get through to you or help you in life, that's someone who is a fair weather friend, not wanting to deal with your problems or changes set of conditions, and then suddenly when you become stronger attacks you, like you owe them anything in life, then don't like me, don't try to have sex with me, and don't support me, be on your own team in life, even if it means going against me, I have an Attorney for that, Im not scared. Im not scared of anyone trying to attack me, threatening me, I don't owe anyone anything in life, no one was there for me when I was suicidal and disabled in bed all day, and I don't expect anyone to be there for me now, that's me driven, successful, full of love, and admiration for others too not just myself, that to me is being apart of, no matter what anyone thinks of me.

It Used to Be Fun ...

It used to be fun of making fun of people, the non-stop cycle of jokes and realizations upon comparing a person to other more notable characters and figures in society, as being about the same things in life, going for the same success, or trying to achieve success through the same means, you can never do anything good twice, that's the beauty of creativity, best the first time, insightful the second, and by the third attempt to articulate where your coming from when making a point, hopefully eventually you come to a close, a positive closure in making sense of the time, or events in time that brought you less light, and left you feeling lost. When is it not fun? When the person you were making fun of, stumbles, falls, is hospitalized 9x and still doesn't have a career, that's reverse psychology gone too far, saying things to you making fun of your "world peace motion" and heckling you with taunts, as those insults will ever bring you clarity or enlarge your growing sense of purpose in life, to communicate better taking everything into account, and leaving no one's interests behind, in terms of acceptance for beliefs, "principles before personalities" as AA likes to call it, a "strict adherence" which would be to basic common sense when it comes to understanding someone, and some common courtesy with respect to their ability to tell their own story in life, that much gets lost in making fun of someone before they ever become anybody worth a read, it's a tough pill to swallow, everyone having known you without you knowing them, that's not the cool part of being known, what for, hopefully nothing negative, but I'm sure that happens to, a general purpose for losses of respect to occur, not see anyone who thinks they're important make important that I think is the purpose for insult whether one reacts or defends themselves at having done a good job supporting others through gun violence, fires, illness (COVID), depression, and losses of faith (breakups), why I started book writing at home, that's being scared, and starting to live your life again, and help others, whether anyone wants to hear from you or not make a positive difference. I think I've been through it all, and I'm sure that every one of you have too, which makes us more similar than different at this point, let's just not share our reservations out loud, everyone's entitled to keep going on whatever tangents in life bring them greater understanding of the big picture, whether that includes me or anything I have done to support the causes that have inspired me to stay sober, graduate, and live a better life for myself, and not one living in a hospital mentally ill on meds, sleeping all day. That's turning your life around for the better, and when you become a better person, then you can make a difference, but until then work on yourself in order to be someone worth knowing. Next time if you come from an important story, write a solid book (that I tried to do, but not good enough), and when it comes time to share your story (let it be read for free, that's not making money off of another person's struggle in life to speak for themselves be a good friend). I can't say that half the things we went through were normal separately but I'm sure we are both now independently successful whether we talk or not, and hopefully not too embarrassing to know, that much you can't control, someone who meets you, knows you, sees who you're connected to, and then makes fun of you, as thinking you are bigger than you are, or closer than you are, to someone who is known, as though a friendship never existed, only their negative opinion of you, well if you haven't lived my life, then you wouldn't know what it's like to grow up, work your hardest getting good grades, take the LSAT three times, get into law school and then be made fun of while you are there, like that was easy to do, or a joke, that's when someone who you love doesn't even respect the fact you are there or the reasons why you are there doesn't believe in you at all, and that's when it's time to separate yourself from someone who loses faith in you, and restore your faith in yourself, if you can't provide the number of reassurances required to love someone, stay on track, and be successful have a career, then choose one or the other, no matter how painful it is to be alone, and having failed at two things in life, law school and marriage. There will be new experiences and new people who may come into your life, but until you respect yourself, enough to stop self-harming, drinking etc, the more you allow those no longer in your life to get the best of you treat you as though you deserve nothing worth living for as though you didn't do them a favor leaving them to begin with, so that they could live a better life without you, that's a tough pill to swallow, to invest years of your life loving someone, and going out of your way to be available to see them sacrifice time spent on focusing on you and your studies, and for things to not work out for you, that will be a mistake I will never forgive myself for, dating in law school, and also graduating from law school and being defamed online like I'm nothing, treated like some dumb whore half naked with no sense of morale or value, the opposite of having created a blog and website worth over a million dollars, that's hard work, the rest is another representation of you gone wrong, that's what makes them happy, to see no one love you, to see no one respect you, to see you have nothing, suffer, die mentally ill suicidal, why because they don't respect you, they don't value you, they only care about themselves, and couldn't care less if you were raped, or in constant contact with police, or treated like you're too much just to know or see, not fitting in with anyone else's visual memory of who you were before you became a writer online, not someone who ever stood out as into themselves at peace, quiet. Everything is a f-king joke to someone who doesn't respect you and thinks you think you're smarter than they are, to them making you look stupid in a slapstick comedy way, makes them feel better, to see you get shot down in public like you deserve it leading any movements in life for humanity's sake or your own, mental health wise, that much is not deserved MLK put down. I may not be your dream girl, and I may not even be someone you fantasize about being with, but I will be me, whether you like it or not, and I will get a job whether you think that's deserved or not, and I will earn a living and get a paycheck whether you think I deserve a dime or not, I certainly don't deserve to live the rest of my life suffering mentally ill or suicidal over one person's interpretation of who I am, what I'm about, or based upon what everyone else is thinking when they see me, think undeserved to be apart of any larger purpose bigger than myself. Even if I don't marry or have a child, I will still not date for the rest of my life, especially not anyone who doesn't love me, or thinks that I am someone I am not, that's a threat to my life and livelihood and reputational harm I am not willing to suffer any more years of my life thinking about, what happened to my face, what happened to my body, why I got sick, or how I lost my smarts, that's something I don't want to think about, or how many meds put on sedentary for years sleeping in bed, and working sometimes, while finishing my masters, that much no one knows about me, no one thinks is important, and no one ever saw coming, me with a law degree, no one ever saw the sense in that or purpose in finishing a masters, what for? To get a job!

Changing Places While Dating: Confidence ...

When youre in love, or come to love and adore someone, there are no problems in life, and for some people that is their sense of peace and bliss, to have a companion in life, something you either do or do not have time for, its never a necessity, monogamy, but some prefer it that way. 100% control over you and how you spend your time, with dedication to them, not necessarily inspire love for what you have found confidence your whole life, through your studies, and extracurriculars, that's dedication. When you have to prove yourself to another dedicated to a cause whether that's marriage or an organization you support, there comes a time, when those choices in life become a matter of whether important to you, or important for the purposes of how you look to others and why, that's marriage and supporting non-profits, something otherwise admirable for most, but if you are someone whos image is not viewed in high esteems is thought for that to be known to you thought less of, and in order to counter those losses in esteem dedicated yourself to greater causes than yourself, marriage, and you time invested in loving them, what will bring you happiness in life, letting life happen, or doing something to help others, with no expectation of reward, that's selflessness, standing out in a good way, not because of who you know, thought to have a big head thinking you were famous too ever, noticed in a special way with respect for your privacies and whatever you have been through in life mental health wise, seems that things will always be made about that, your past, and make where you are at now mental health wise, about how you have presented your past, affected by your own words and reactions to your words, and not worthy or a representative insight about. When someone puts you down in life and makes fun of you, that's them thinking that your heart is in all the wrong places in life, for all the wrong reasons in law school and when that much is not respected or admired about you, there for show, it seems they become the bringer of any unrealized heat, about you, there not deserving to be there, or not smart enough to finish, there to look smart, not to actually do the work necessary in order to be someone who can help others, you know if you believe in yourself and someone else doubts you then don't listen to them and allow you to question yourself or where youre headed in in lfie, if you didn't need them in the first place, you should still be able to survive and do fine in life without them being in your life, and that's dating, should be at no expense we come to meet and know others, be put down in life that's the wrong way to go about things, thinking things about your own thinking without thinking in the best interests of the person who is thinking not thinking about what your thinking and that's how control is made when someone is unaware of what the other is up to, a lack of sync, reading you, and feeling like you, and knowing you better than you have even told them about yourself to begin with, a secret they keep to themselves, you'll notice when the awe is gone, its not love, it's the satisfaction of feeling like a man, and the sense of love for self that comes from you needing them, that's how someone you don't need makes you needy or weak, and as a result you lose your confidence in life, and before you know it cant perform, cant do well, cant get a job, and all your luck and drive gone, to a feeling they have about you which was never in support of you but geared more in support of themselves not visualizing knowing you for the long term not visualizing a future with you, that's being made to love and dumped when you become weak minded or insecure or unstable, that's their stability found and yours lost.

I Was Just Thinking ...

Energy is so important, heavy subject these days, stuff we didn't really used to think about until it hits, don't be alarmed its okay, youre doing just fine, and youre right where you need to be. Just like you can play around with your own thoughts about things, so can others, and what you allow for in life, are what you ultimately feel, about self and others, so try to always keep things in the positive, no matter what energy is provoked from you, a manifestation of their own reasoning, or just to make you feel bad, so they feel right about you, don't let them win! You can do this, everyone has bad days, and its mostly by being supportive that others don't flip the switch on you, who wants to deal with that energy anyways right now, not settled, going through a lot, or triggered, that's a recipe for a fight, and right about now is that time where if you say the wrong things quickly turns into a fight toward you, about you, made up in their minds about you, that's someone internalizing knowing you, then blaming you as though you were the exposure in life that changed them for better or worse, you know you either become worldly on your own, or you have experiences in life that cause you to think about life, and sometimes in knowing others we come to see things better not worse, never admitting to themselves that had they not known you would have never thought so highly of themselves and less of you, that's someone insecure, finding themselves, immediately recognizes in themselves what needs fixing and suddenly independent of you with energy, that's the beauty of life, brining out the best in others, and sometimes the worst is in turn brought out in us, not meeting the same person as ourselves in life, equally supportive, kind, caring and unconditional with regards to when we talk about life, making sense to them in a way that they decide to support you in all your endeavors, that's a part of someone you support and admire, who does not also admire and support what you are doing in life, other things seem to impress someone, not living in the same world as you, but seems different, that's not just their peace where theyre at, it also means recognize and find your peace based on where you are at, and never stop dreaming and doing what your doing in life and whats making you happy, step down in terms of what your goals are, to assimilate, to a standard of what someone else thinks will bring you happiness, which actually doesn't, working 9-5pm, there are other ways to live life, working from home is one of them, something I have prided myself in as a student for many years, its my system, its working for me, and I stay busy happy. There is always time to branch out socially or professionally and when youre ready and hit those moments of growth in life when you start to meet people again you'll be oh so very proud of yourself, that you didn't just listen and follow everyone elses reservations about where you have managed to find yourself online, without help from anyone, without a network of connections, that means able to be yourself, and be loved, by no matter whos in the room, unchanged by others. That's an amazing feat to look like yourself in front of thousands of people, really cool.

There comes a time when using the phrase "only time will tell" stops applying all those helpful advices that's if what you are faced with equals more than any of the advice that can be given to a good person who thinks and sees clearly, that just means your out of loop in scope, and that's okay, when things become about you, or by making things about you, not make sense, as though the goal was sickness to begin with, as though anyone needs motivation or a life coach to think or dislike anyone or anything, that's the mistake in thinking, that life advice is a poor humorous approach to life, as though by punishment one works online, I think you find your place when no other places work for you, that's just being yourself, strong enough to micro-manage the disciplined demeanor of working everyday or get sick performing and suffer personal losses focused on other things in life, whats more important to you, work or love, or school, for me its always been school, that's because I used to do well in school, it was something that challenged me, that if I invested 100 % of my time and attention to shined, got As, and that was magnificent to experience, when you pick right and do the work, and it all makes sense to you, that's not reading the professor, that's being prepared, so that in the event you are tested, you have studied everything you thought important and able to use what you know on your exam, that's how to stand out on an exam, a skill that cannot be memorized, an argument that cannot be pre-calculated, a series of understandings that wont show up the same, and cannot be applied by force to make sense of something else, that's defeating the purpose of learning, cross applying what you know to only apply in one circumstance, and nothing comes to mind in application of what is needed to addressed as being relevant standing out from amongst the other facts being reviewed, that's taking advice from someone you liked or trusted, and that's how you also get made to look stupid, not in the know, read the situation, read the person, you cant always go by what you feel will make them happy that's exactly how you learn too late what is smart and what is stupid to do in life, give love to people who don't need love.

The Time is Now: Not to Be Ruled by Your Thoughts ...

When focus kicks in and discipline for purposes of improvement not a moment anyone can decide for you wellness or motivation it's a place you arrive to and feel instantly well by association placement or exposure it's the moment that makes or breaks you from being a decided part of society or deemed someone who's interests run counter to the well being of others mistreated as thought deserved. And for every upset is a purposefully fueled negative judgment (by insult: something that either sticks or doesn't, for positive purpose, make sense to you later, only upon recognition for insights remembered, its not a reaction for positive things to occur for you, it creates negative happenings for you, not unless you don't subject yourself to insult by exposure to your life, be insulted by the viewer not recognizing you as special or worth it, quite yet). There will always be an imagined indifference toward you maybe even a fear of ridicule until it happens and confirms your beliefs of worse to come, it is then your responsibility to make sure that that does not continue, and not lend insights to allow for it to continue to be, that others are made hostile because of who you are or what you look like, offends their sense of direction in life knowing you, let alone their appearances, be affected by you. Yes, you are responsible for losses in faith, first off your own, and then for subsequent losses of faith in you by others, who one don't know whats bothering you unless you talk about, and two may feel there is too much to talk about so leave you alone, or three worried that if you start talking that you wont stop and talk about all the wrong things in life, Im sure life gets better, and it has a lot to do with what you have to say, that abrasiveness, occurring before you have shined, that anger, having to do with you not having done a good enough job being you to make others feel good around you, and the challenge is not needing anyone and not being a problem to anyone, and that's when happiness occurs, a job well done, a place for normal conversations about life, without the pressure or intensity of who has done who wrong and suffered, that's being made scared in life, that's retaliation, and that's recidivism (expectation for offense, and then offense taken whenever something is said or occurs to the note of what was initially thought to be the series of events or rational for causes, who is speaking, what is being filmed, who is well, who is sick, its only a nightmare until you fix your life, otherwise you will forever be tested as someone who knows the law or acts as though they are above the law, which is code for thinks they are the $hit because they are the $hit because they have no enemies in life and feel good about themselves because they are well, and stay out of trouble because they don't cause trouble for others, whatever happened to those days). It seems you are judged in therefore for the love you give, who you admired, and what you do with your life, specifically what causes you feelings of love for another, generally its when someone likes you, you decide to like them and focus on them and get to know someone, figure out what they are all about, this is before everyone knows eachother and no one is impressed with anyone, same thing happens when everyone has dated, they all move on, some date, the best or the best from ones own social circles, generally we call them friends, then you meet the rest of the world, so it's a choice, whether to carry the same admiration or acceptance of others as you did your friends you were assigned to be friends with, by application accepted, that's an identity issue you come to grips with, when someone not assigned to you in life, then becomes apart of your life, and makes money off of you, selling your soul to the world, to be viewed in the masses in a disfavorable light, that's photography, beautiful one second, then grose the next minute, that's not being able to hold a pose, based upon who has viewed or is watching, a change in opinion of you based on what your body looks like, maybe not the proudest moment being obsess 192 lbs, but definitely not confidence which basically means grose, unfit for viewing, if upon photographed, my body and face in real life changes, means not a good idea, not willing to, and not willing to endure the changes and figure out a new way of overcoming those changes, which was what running and weightloss weren't for (2014-2017) my face and body have never changed, always just a smaller version of myself, same shape, different size, that's me. So don't base your happiness on the wellness of others alone, you are you they are them, but yes you must stay well if you are well because you never know who is depending upon your fixed imagery online, to keep them moving forward, without letting everything hit the conscious without directions feel harmed as misidentified, it only requires an adjustment on your part, don't let things sit, how you get hurt being vague or ambiguous as to what you are saying, made to look like youre having difficulty because you have something to hide, which is the purpose for being dumbed down, not able, meaning not capable of saying anything that will help, means not fit to lead any discussions about a topic, one has just entered by computer or phone, not by website or twitter, that's when you get attacked because it is thought you care or worry about subjects that don't affect everyone, so that if you are made scared, think that you will discuss things that scared you to scare others, no that's not the solution, to talk about what was done, or how things got better, and especially not at a time like this, its called letting people do their job in life. Its when you are down, the well lead the well, that's not a headstart, and your not the backburner holding anyone down in life to be freed from interpretation or relation back, I think that was a gamble that everyone felt was worth the stumbling around trying to figure out what was keeping everyone else going sometimes its something they all know that you don't, seem to be oblivious too, and that's you out of the mix, not blending in, standing out in a good way or bad way, just don't be doing anything wrong, is the team that just needs you to do something wrong, to put you in the hospital or jail to confirm you are a bad influence or poor decision maker, or cause for incidents, that you don't pay attention in life if you seem gone or not smart, and that's how everyone is exactly where they need to be in life, whether or not you are harmed and paying attention, is how you become the offender to anothers story, the fool not the hero. In all other case to worry less for yourself, is being selfless, to become more conservative is not to be better than its to not get sick or put in the hospital or jail misidentified as having no light spotted, which is what someone who is not connected with a job looks to others, the one not lit, unhappy, that's the system of etiquette when it comes to findings be on their side (CHP) and if you are not strong enough to drive and not stand out, then that means stay home, if you become too slow to drive, how you get pulled over, without warning is usually when it happens, like its time, a chore for everyone to care for, a disappointment, and that's living life, some on your team, sometimes everyones not, and that's addiction.

Please Note: Things as they are will never feel good or be the right timing always an expense to you when things are good for you and not for others, and exchange, its for the purpose of bettering one another be made aware of not during a time of need be thought about, and be tested in life for improvements as though its your specialty to sharpen up mathmatically or by physics know how and why what is happening to you is, thats forgiveness, you either let it in the good spirit of others, or you reject others from your spirit or identity sometimes having more to do with your insides adjusting, not necessarily having to do with what anyone looks like familiar or not, acceptable, kind, or mean and why. Whenever you go by the timing of anothers needs, thats not trust, thats love being tested, whether you are in the moment with them, recognize that peace made, or whether you achieve that regularly by yourself or so plentiful that you are required to provide constant remedy to another or reassurances, based upon your condition provide, well or not, thats staying well and being held responsible, if a condition happens, you cannot correct means your not improved, or not improved for those reasons, or not aware of where improvement is needed, air, personality, or demeanor, if its known by watching one, its assumed to be the case for all, changing by who is watching them look, empowering to whoever knew you, and lived a great life anyways, and sad for whoever just met you and appreciates you sharing trying to help, Im not an overnight success I have been trying to get followers since 2013, you have to be worth it, for look or study, is the look theyre going for, which is why I prided myself in perfect photos it was because I was focused, it was not trying to be like, that was me, the same gear my whole life, then stuck in old navy, then shopped November 2019. How a good life becomes a bad life, based upon how you are treated feel loved attended to or eventually made to feel at ease safe thats a system best created for oneself a feeling someone cannot always provide to you upon being with thats a form of rejection occurring not by words or actions means that the answer lies within you not someone else to manage your condition or figure out your problems at that point its mostly imagined before it ever becomes real and if so do your best to speak to your own fears without making anyone see like you before youve even found a solution to your own fears beyond reporting means being comfortable in your own skin thats how you get picked or rejected based upon who has given you that advice. So once you become a success minus the actual money means instant thinking for others and maybe a downswing for you, thats being you, not new to life, so dont be forgetful like you got there in an easy way not the hard way, no it took me 8 years, punishments along the way, staying sober, staying home, making choices of who to contact, recovering from mental health issues bipolar, start being easy to know not someone to make fun of make it about me, and practicing writing everyday to become a writer, a rain or shine writer, thats getting up and coming up with a system for writing, that works for you, and a style you are proud of, not a style that opens anyone up to negative judgments about me or others, and those negative happenings were not because I was the joke or the fear of arriving to wellness, or not being good enough, the person everyone knows talks, and things that everything said is about them, is someone looking for someone to blame, as being a cause for change an influence, listen if they dont like me, Im not in them! The goal is to better one another, and leave everyone bettered having known you, thats a good experience with you, knowing you, then there are bad experiences you have in life, usually not with people you know, its others in charge of you, and then you being made scared, and those who know you judging you by your choice associations, thats something no one can help you with, who comes into your life, whos not in your life, and where you are now, just be happy to be alive, you dont have to explain all negative happenings from your own viewpoint, not if everyone knows you Lakers, Graduation Schedule, Facebook Account, Bank Account, Gmail Account, you can keep everything and still be found to be in error, that's how much reporting and thinking goes on before a launch, a completed version of you, well.

Unwanted Shared Comradere ...

To what is known about you provoked through you to make you look or sound like someone who processes what you're told by any voices to be about similarly, -I think you either make sense or you don't, not in a condescending way to anyone in life heard. It's never too late to try to live a new life or dream a new dream, princess or not. We are not always born with high self-esteem it's something you learn to improve overtime. When you're down or not doing well that can mean many things. It's mostly you, whether you can withstand conditions or not based upon how you feel or go by how others feel about you affected. If they can be on one side in life, it's definitely not going to be your side, especially if they're cool or popular or well liked, it's definitely not you who is influencing anyone for the better, solid or not, deans list or cocaine, sober or 21, law school or rehab, almost married, or annulled, likes or no likes, how many parallels can you handle in life or polar opposite positions in life must you assume, before you never make it back to who you were, if those were general communications made to all that you're not going to make it in life, then that must have meant to some a given as though one not well, was because one sold anyone out in life, let alone their own family, as though everything in life is about any shared communications, none weird, my family is normal, where I got it from, maybe flirtatious, but I'm sure that I have had my share of flirting in my lifetime, just used to think it was unnecessary, but see that now as friendliness, not sexuality, when I was a child, I didn't understand, what being womanly was, I was a girl, so that was not a trait that I ever grew into for that matter, womanly, I have no idea why, so I'm losing 50 lbs again, and becoming the woman I was supposed to be my whole life, had I been a dancer, or a golf person, or was approved for gymnastics as a child, backwalkovers on the balance beam and able to tumble on the bars, and do 12 pull ups by 2nd grade, to me that was fun, to my mom, that was not a good idea to train as a child, with the risk of it stunting my growth, I don't think soccer legs, made a better body out of me anyways, how the F could I date, my body mishmashed, and face not beautiful, that's something you learn as you get older how to lose weight and tone up and it starts with feeling good about yourself, you can't be smoking weed, taking naps, and eating rice and chicken everyday, learn portion control, you'll thank yourself later in life, and have more stars on your board. So what is health, it's the ability to stay well in spite of the elements, that's wellness, both mentally able to withstand the elements without feeling intimidated by anyone around you, and strong enough to stay solid and steady mentally no matter who is around, clear headed, as are most people in public. That inability to be around people is more to do with one not being well, meaning doesn't feel good around people and that's something to do with sleep, when you're not sleeping well, that unsteadiness, or lack of sleep is what ultimately leads you to a mental breakdown confidence wise no smarter wiser or better looking that's being viewed in guilt not doing what you're supposed to be doing which was why I stayed home for four years in my room to improve and listen to my Father not go running at night. So either stop the process and rest, or don't listen to advisement, when it comes to what you look like to others, "risk of harm to self or others" which is why "self-harm and suicide" is triggered by "bad stories about you, shock, mismanagement, time consuming waits, falling apart over voices, when your face doesn't represent your output whos that it's still you even if what's thought about you changes, always be in control, seek medical advisement, don't worry what other people think, and nothing about you upon becoming suicidal then it becomes about everyone else's pain except your own, so don't commit suicide no matter how painful life gets because if you can sleep and take meds, you can get your positive energy back and enthusiasm for life and get back into a routine goal setting, it's all a matter of time, weeks months or years never lose faith based upon feelings, be strong now for whoever needed you strong then, losses fully acknowledged, representation from a side a bit too late, but not too late for everyone else to come to terms with what's more important to them, experiencing life absent pain and unwanted distractions in life that leave you feeling aloof or unable to perform and work absent minded those facts about life, it's your life, live through your own eyes, not the eyes of others to make decisions for yourself" ... keep a rhythm to your day, or stop your choice. That loss of identity, is like a reverse transformation, you lose your face and your body, that's upon others looking at you and thinking of you in the negative upon seeing pictures of you or you body, and then blame you for a bad feeling, you know just because one is not attracted to someone, doesn't mean that they are gross, and therefore not attractive to all, there is a common quality to attraction and that's called health, healthy mind, healthy body, healthy face, healthy outlook, that's no one to worry about. I think we all party sometimes, that doesn't mean one is off the deep end, I don't think that's a fair assessment of someone being off the deep end if they tweet or write on Instagram, I just think that writing as a form of expression others has caused others to express concern for others (not me: thinking I have everything all wrong, as though if everyone were all right that I would be all wrong, if I was not made to feel on board the same highs in life: love) is mistaken as risk imposed to others, and if that's the argument against me then without knowing anyone, then that would be the argument sought to be proven about me now, that I have reached at one point 17 million viewers, so lets allow God to be the judge, of changes positive to negative in all of us, based upon my writing, my ability to keep others calm during all the changes we may endure at home, confined or board, not lose pleasure in the small things: like TV.

Everyone Thinks Everything is Easy ...

Always be aware of alongside what interests you stand, upon mention of issue, or person in mind, that's leaving one concept and talking about another concept, the concept before exposed to, thought to have triggered conversations about in relation to, a human being is not an information processor, in which all things disposed of within a person, contributes to the thought produced or pictured, that would be the misunderstanding of someone who is a reading based learner, to think that what is visually relevant in the mind of the reader is something created by the writer, sometimes what you think you are seeing through the writing, is something you hear, what sounds good to you, or something that improves a series of understanding in alignment to what is heard, the tone either coming from you or elsewhere, that's not being perturbed by the thoughts of others, its being perturbed by your own thoughts, while trying to make sense of another persons story, thought based upon impressions made by others a product of something better than or the same as, and that's cause for concern, as though freeing from responsibility everyone watching or reading as though we are all supposed to see alike, given our exposures and understandings see the same, that would be impossible to perfect a feeling within, which is the general cause for concern hearing from someone with bipolar, assuming ones mind is not clear, then ones vision is not clear, then whats said is not clear, therefore mentally cannot process what is read or understood by others, that difference occurs, when there is a change, in emotion or focus, like reading studying, then switching to blogging expressing, then forgetting what you were reading, and then trying to take a quiz without the information fresh in your mind, requires a second reading, and usually by the third reading things begins to make more sense, that's the beauty of learning, seems difficult, nothing processes, and when it starts processing thats your mind about to rework the elements within your own thinking come through your writing, without have to say or even remember exactly what was read be applied to your own work, that's having understood what you read, doesn't mean that you can actually teach about what you just read, and explain how it applies to your own writing. That's a misunderstanding of application when it comes to public speaking, wanting to know what has been processed, such as studying my music choices, or having music choices of their own, and then treating me as though a popular song makes sense, the fighting and going back, by Eminem. That's not romantic if so, I don't think theres ever that much fighting in a loving relationship unless a harm is caused to you that no one feels sorry for and blames you for occurring, that's an example of things not going right, and being blamed for things not going right at home, because of what happened to me online, and that's my guilt now, thought to be the one who caused the illness to begin with 2008 upon getting sick, having a family that supported me, and then occurring again, when made to feel suicidal, as though I don't also have a family that supports me, that to take away support from me or my family, in favor of whom "the public" who generally doesn't care who is being made fun of if thought deserved well its not deserved, not for any one persons actions, breakups, looks, or demeanor, and don't accuse me of not being good enough to blog or to share my mind, Im plenty smart enough and having recovered almost 2 years sober (Since 2011 continuous with a few relapses), well enough to be consistent enough in my daily replies and writings, to not make the past indicative of my own future or present, nor be scolded or not relied upon as relevant to insights overall, regardless of the health of the people, communicated and expressed by others. To me being in shock, maybe one cause for feeling scared on the inside as found out about, and Im not sure why that feeling causes me suicide, or to feel like everyone's bi%ch in life, like theyre bigger and Im smaller, or theyre loud and Im quiet, Im in that phase again where I keep going and cant sit down and talk, something you need to be well enough for, and have something to talk about in the positive that excites you about living life, a purpose in life: blog, and continue living professional that much I figured out for myself in life, minus all the random thoughts or innuendos thought to be coming out of me or through my writing, based on what I don't have in life, love, or based upon who I know, no one, or based upon any of my friends, who have all moved on, I mean what is wanted for you is to be able to make money, and in making money make others proud, and in doing so, live life accepted by the world = goal.

I Just Lost 5 Pounds ...

I just lost 5 lbs, and that's not "pounds" as though to reference "the dogg pound" also known as "Snoop Dogg" who I scolded for his music video expressing fake gun violence to President Trump face masked dummy, while I was in the Hospital at UCLA, this may have been August 2017 or August 2019, I was in the hospital both months, the first time for not sleeping at night, and the second following the death of a Kennedy, who passed away of addiction, concerned I called the Police and had a talk with them then hospitalized myself, I had a #dontdodrugs page at the time, in support of Melania Trump's heels after the last mass shooting, who campaigned against Opioids, and Opioid Addiction, I found out by a Facebook Page I follow who showed a picture of Miss Kennedy on their quotes page, which struck a chord with me, to respond, see what can be done to prevent these losses, and faced with the stress of responding to whatever changed opinions and teams were derived from me writing online, decided to hospitalize myself when not well, that's me not feeling well, not made to feel well, by exposures, not just auditory delusions when that happens (voices: which can be heard from inside my body, that hurts my ability to think or feel good, is what voices feels like, not something occurring in your head, brain). Ask the Police, I think I was wearing Red Juicy Couture leggings, no not in gang red, Im not in a gang, I have only seen a red door once in West Hollywood, in the process of buying cocaine from someone I met outside a club, whos Uber looked like a Mercedes Benz, with doylies in the seats in the back, that was weird. He kind of looked like Jimmy Kimmel, Im sure Jimmy Kimmel has heard the story, I was also given a refund because my Mom got mad at me for spending money he went to my ATM three times, and paid for more than what I got, so he gave me a $200 refund. Its been my experience, that when in addiction or relapsing, you don't have any friends, your only friends are your drug dealers, or people who know people who sell drugs, and when in addiction relapsing, you don't notice everyone, but everyone notices you, and in disappointment, not just suspect of you, but based on what you look like, not respect you, as not coherent sounding in posture or by dress, high energy but stupid looking, it seems you have to be on a schedule in life to be respected, otherwise all that energy known sent to you in life. That's being known without you knowing it, its not like High School, knowing people by name, its in society, standing out before you have even decided to stand out yourself, known, which is an odd experience to look back, reflect, and think about myself, Im sure that things may never happen the same way again for me in life, so I better not F-CK UP now, when it comes to presenting self in front of the people, they will always remember when you were in bed all day, and not doing anything with your life, finishing law school and barely working two jobs one paid, one internship, and "that baggy" you threw away in your trash can, was later made to be a joke upon returning from the hospital the first time, someone "relapsed on cocaine" shared, as though I would apply that to mean me, I was a speaker at the meeting, of course I was sober, I would never lie to make friends, I can make friends everywhere I go, Im not desperate for anyone in life, Im desperate for a job, why I stay home and work hard so that I can work, that's the type of condition I want to be in stable, not someone out to meet people, and lost, that I think is only fun if you are not someone who looks well, goes out, then looks sick looking, means that you are not physically strong enough to withstand the conditions of drinking on meds, and being alone, not connected to anyone, that sense of discomfort, is because you are alone, and that sadness is being alone, and everyone else in groups and pairs, that's a sad fact of life, but they still talk to me anyways. "the baggy" was one empty baggy, from one gram, bought while living at Harvard, from my friend who came over who was English, a Musician, and now works for Uber, who took me to a house in Westwood. These guys Mike, Adam, and Ron were all independently social, from different walks of life, met through school CU Boulder my neighbor to my left one year, one friend of Ron, the other met at Qs, played pool.

The Secret No One Wants to Keep ...

That general excitement lighting up someone is not you, its for anticipation for what you are going to say, knowing in advance that nothing will strike a chord with them, having lived a different life that you not feel the same way about things or yourself, given who they are and that's a difference you cant change, not a side-effect or an exclusion of interests all together, there sometimes is no power in sameness, and the same sense of disempowerment felt by someone who lives independent of others, is the same feeling occurring in someone who does not feel loved or heard, that's you not hearing yourself, which can sometimes be upsetting, to read and read and hear nothing that feels exactly the same way as you, you know you can always write too, its not about making people feel good all the time, especially not if you are the one they are harming, or trying to make public things about you to make other people feel better about themselves, as though we don't all shower $hit and change ourselves on a daily basis, what makes you human? Ask yourself what makes you human, and what makes you so far above the rational means for acceptance of those different that you, so pristine. I think as humans we are all required to be around people we don't know, not all of whom we grow comfortable around or begin associating with, but some things you cant control, what is thought about you, or your neighborhood for that matter, a place I probably wont be living for long and not for the rest of my life, since I cant afford to live here and wont be able to afford to live here on a bloggers salary. So why do I blog, simple, something to do each day that brings me self-satisfaction and pride, a place where I can go and just be myself, a way for me to communicate without feeling nervous around others or afraid that what I say as remembered will be interpreted and translated through them to mean something different, as though everyone needs each other so badly, that a separation will cause me death, suicide, or self-harm, if Ive not told my story before, that was me before law school, overcoming feelings, with nothing having been done to me, not esoterically, not publicly, not romantically, or socially, everything good, and that's the issue with how I am now, whether I was ever this way then, I was never this way then, I kept a diary, never free wrote, was in school, never free read, and watched a few reality television shows, none of whom so deeply invested in to study social media profiles or get to know individually memorize their story or know where they come from or where they are now. I think that's the automatic step taken, who are her friends, who does she know, is she talking about anyone she knows, who has influenced her in life, is she her own person, or has she always been impressionable, I think when you get in trouble that's GOD telling you to F-CKING CHANGE. Means you cant be you anymore, there is something wrong with you, and you need to better yourself and change.
